CLEVELAND, O.:
PRESS OF J. B. SAVAGE
1898

Preface.

1859 a circular was sent out from Boston, Mass., addressed to the Fays, signed by Rev. Abner Morse, who was employed to collect material for a genealogy of merican Fay family. He was succeeded by Hon. Charles on, who also left the work unfinished and the papers deposited in the safe of Hon. Frank B. Fay of Boston. 1895 he placed all of them in my hands, which gave opportunity to incorporate the record traced by Morse udson with the 6,000 names I had secured since beginning the work in 1881, making a total of over 8,000 besides ,500 names added by marriage.

iss Adelyn S. Fay, of North Grafton, Mass., has kindly me in completing the genealogy by typewriting the work.

t the request of members of the Fay family this genealogy lished.

cknowledgments are due to all who have aided me by valuable information.

FAY, ITS ORIGIN AND HISTORY.

Fay, Spanish Fe Faith in Normandy plantations of beech were called Faye, Fayel and Fautlie, see Arthur's Dictionary of Family names. Faye, n Norman French is a beech tree, see Arthur's Dictionary of Proper names. Faval, one of the most important of the Azores Islands, from the Port Faya, a beech tree, but its so called beech trees are myrtle of the species called Myrica Faya, see also Chambers' Encyclopedia, see Johnson's Cyclopedia.

John J. Fay of Indianapolis, Indiana, published in 1881, a pamphlet entitled Fay, its origin and escutcheon, and having borne this his ancestral name for over half a century, now for the first time makes an effort to learn ts origin. Investigation shows it to be of very ancient date; it is even traced back to the days of heathen mythology. It has a most interesting history, a history peculiar to itself. Its exploration has received the attention of many poets and able writers, among whom may be cited Meyric Casaubon, and those who, like him, deducing everything from a classic source, derived fairy from a Homeric name of the centaurs, or think that fee, whence fairy, s the last syllable of nympha.

Sir W. Ousely derives it from the Hebrew of peer. D. Herbelot is of the opinion the word fairy has come from the Persian peri. In the middle ages there was in use a Latin verb fatara, derived from fata, to enchant; in the French it became according to the analogy of that language faer, feer. Of this verb, the past participle is fae, fe; hence in romance we read of les chevaliers faes les dames faees. Oberon la fae, le cheval etois fae and such like. Bojardo calls the water nymphs fata; old translators of the classics named them fairies. Faerie became the abode of the faes, and was naturally called the country inhabited by fays. Fairies in time were divided into two classes, first, beings of the human race, endowed with powers beyond those usually alloted to men, who were denominated fays, or fairies of romance. Second, those little beings of Northern mythology, termed elves or popular fairies.

Pope's greeting is as follows:—

> Ye sylphs and sylphids to your chief give ear;
> Fays, fairies, genii, elves and demons hear.

Brown, Brittannias Pastorals.

> They said that all the field
> No other flower did for the purpose yield;
> But quoth a nimble Fay that by did stand;
> If you could give 't the color of your hand.

From Drayton, author of Nymphidia, a most charming little epic of Fairy-land the following is quoted:—

And thou nymphidia, gentle fay, which meeting me upon the way,
These secrets did to me bewray which now I am in telling
A nymph is married to a fay, great preparations for the day,
All rights of nuptials they recite you to the bridal and invite you.

Dialogue between the nymphs Mertilla and Claia.

M. But will our Tita wed this fay?
C. Yes, and tomorrow is the day.
M. But why should she bestow herself
Upon this dwarfish fairy elf?
C. Why, by her smallness you may find
That she is of the fairy kind
And therefore apt to choose her make Whence she did her beginning take Besides, he's deft and wondrous airy,
And of the noblest of the fairy.

In 1882 a female spiritualist, posting her bills as Eva Fay from England to give evening exhibitions, acknowledges it was an assumed name taken for its affinity to fairies and spirits.

All nations, civilized or barbarian, have had their fairies and enjoyed their fairy love. J. J. Fay continues, my researches have disclosed the fact that our American Indians had their mo-nedo-wans or Indian fairies and delighted in reciting their fairy tales, and I have conceived the idea of embodying the name and its symbolic origin in an appropriate form suggested somewhat by that beautifully illustrated little poem, "Culprit Fay," as follows:—The shield is divided so as to exhibit the fairies and water nymphs surmounted by the motto, Abinitio Hic et Ubique. The shield supported on either side by an Indian chief, "Waub-Ojeeg," holding his sah-sah-jewidjegun. The chiefess, "Oge-mauk-wau," in full Indian costume, representing the aborigines of America, the stars and stripes floating from the hand of the squaw; the eagle perched on the shield, holding in his beak the scroll, "Fay Americana," connecting the past with the present, making this representation exclusively American, from the Indian fays on the shield to the scroll in the eagle's beak. A laudable pride in the name prompts me to present this device for adoption as an American Fay family escutcheon. In doing so we only emulate our own glorious republic that is so admirably represented by its national insignia. Respectfully submitted, signed, John J. Fay, Indianapolis, Ind., 1880.

Rev. John Foy, a home missionary in Titusville, Florida, writes under date of March 29, 1887. I have always felt that the Fays and Foys have descended from the same family.

The name is spelled, Phay, in church records in 1760 in some New England towns.

Mrs. D. (Fay) Walker of Bath, N. Y. writes, March 2, 1888, I have heard my father say, the name of Fay was made in America. Generations back there was a boy and girl came from Wales by the name of Foy, and when they wrote home they spelled their name Fay and that was what the name sprang from. The boy married and by his first wife had two sons. She died. He married again and had two sons by his second wife. These sons had very large families.

Morse claims that since 1173 the name has been written Fay and Foy names supposed to be identical and both common in England and the latter in France and that the name Fay occurs in the Directory of London and is common in some of the rural districts of England. Its adoption as a proper name did not first take place in that Kingdom, but like a large number of other names happened on the South Side of the Channel. If the name was local, such is the only origin gathered from Doomsday Book, and the treaties letters and acts of the English government prior to 1344 when surnames had got into general use and their orthography had been comparatively settled. If it was not local but derived from one of the multitude of other sources of names, the field is open to any of more curiosity and leisure, of the root and original meaning of the name no investigation has been attempted. John J. Fay writes Jan. 26, 1885, as to the origin of the Fays my information leads me to think that the theory of the French origin of it is plausible. The name prevails considerably in France, less so in Ireland, is found in Germany, Spain, Italy, Switzerland and in distant China, and after continuous researches I have failed to find the name located in England.

Thomas Spooner of Glendale, Ohio, says, "The Fays were of French origin, during the persecution of the Hugenots, they fled to Wales and from Wales the ancestor of the American family came to the colonies."

W. J. Fay, Denver, Colorado, says, "My ancestors came to America from Ireland about one hundred years ago. The family were Hugenots and went to Ireland from France."

E. N. Fay of Chicago says, "I have heard that the first Fay was a little Irish waif who ran away from home and got on board a ship and came to this country. His name was John."

Rev. W. W. Fay, writing from Hampton, N. H., says, "I am descended from John Fay, a brother of Michael Fay. The two brothers came to Massachusetts from England in the ship Speedwell in 1656."

From Mahlon Fay of Yankeetown, Ind., "Three brothers emigrated from England and settled in Worcester County, Mass."

Simeon D. Fay, Oxford, Wis., writes, "I am in the fifth generation from Scotland and Ireland, and the fourth from England and from France. The Irish, French and English are on my mother's side and the English and Scotch ancestry on my father's side."

SOME OF THE ANCIENT FAYS FOUND IN SEVERAL EUROPEAN COUNTRIES.

Adolph Victoire Fay, an illustrious warrior under Charlemange. Killed in battle on the banks of the Weser, 782.

Fay Edouard Maurice, a Carpathian who distinguished himself in the service of Henri First of France and died about 1040.

Radul de Faa was introduced in a correspondence between Henry II and the Count of Maurianna in relation to the marriage of his son to the daughter of the Count in 1173.

Fay Jean du, a celebrated French Prelate born in the 2nd half of the 12th century of a noble family of Touraine died April 23, 1228.

Fay Guillaume, a French composer who made important improvement in the art of music; born 1340.

Fay du Godeman, a great Norman Baron, Lieut. General in 1346, commanded a detachment of the French army which was stationed at a ford of the Somme, called Blanche taque, and was defeated by the English army under King Edward III, Aug. 25, 1346, the day before the great and decisive battle of Crecy. Froissart says the King was minded to put him to death because he failed in preventing the English from crossing the river, but it was represented that he did his best and I suppose after the king's own defeat the next day he could say but little. See Guizot's History of France. In Froissart's Chronicles, I think it is spelled Gaudeener du Fay.

Fay Antoine La, a French protestant minister born at Chattandun. He became Professor of Phrology at Geneva in 1584, he wrote several theological works and a life of Beza in 1606. He died 1615. On Sunday, July 25, 1593, Henry IV. having abjured the Protestant faith conversed with the Protestant Minister Anthony de la Faye and embraced him two or three times, repeating to him the words "I have made myself Anathema for the sake of all like Moses and St. Paul." Guizot's History of France spells it Anthony de la Faye (see above), but probably they are one and the same person.

The above shows that the family was Norman Protestant and of high rank, see letter of Charles E. Waldo, Jan. 26, 1885. Fay, Barthelomy Sieur D Espeisses, a French jurist died 1560. Fay, Jacques, Lord of Espeisses, a jurist born in Paris 1542. when the Duke of Anjon was elected king o Poland he accompanied that prince to Warsaw and rendered him efficient service in conciliating some of the principal inhabitants. Upon the death o Charles IX., when the Duke of Anjon mounted the throne of France as Henry III., Fay still retained his confidence and held many stations of importance under him. He greatly distinguished himself at the Siege of Paris but died soon after in 1590 of a fever. He was the author of some political works.

Fay, Charles, a French Controversialist died 1590.

Fay, Jacques Seigneur d' Espeisses, French advocate general, born 1543 died 1590.

Victor Fay, one of Napolean's Generals, was the father of sons distinguished as embassadors and authors. (See Encyclopedia Americana and Athena).

Fay, Michael Hurault Sieur du, son of the grand chancellor, and autho cf "Frank and Free," discourses upon the condition of France, died 1588.

Fay, Lucas d' Herbe, an able Flemish sculptor and architect, born a Malines in 1617, was a pupil of Reubens, and died 1694.

Fay, Jean Elie de L, an able French engineer, born at Vienna in 1671. He served in the army many years as engineer and made discoveries in the science of war. He died in 1718.

Fay, Jene Francois de L, a French diplomatist, distinguished for his wit, and accomplishments, a brother of the preceding, born in Vienna, 1674, was a member of the French Academy, and died 1731.

Capt. John Fay married Sarah, daughter of Gov. Belcher of Massachusetts, 1730-1731. He was of the high family of Foys, alias Fays of Boston, probably from France, see their French Christian names.

Fay, M du, an ingenious French philosopher, born about 1690, was also a successful electrician, held several posts in the reign of Louis XV. in the royal palace, the discoverer of vitreous and resinous electricity.

Fay, Charles Francis de Cisteonie, the son of a French officer of the guards. He was born 1698, and though he was at first an officer in the French service, he soon retired from the military profession for the study of Chemistry and Natural Philosophy, was a member of the Academy of Science and distinguished himself in his researches concerning the nature of electricity which he divided into two parts, the vitreous and the resinous answering to the positive and negative of Franklin. He died in 1730. (From Cyclopedia of the Biography of Eminent men).

Ceasar Fay, born 1756, his title was Marquis of Latour of Manbourg. He was a baron in Languedoc, a peer, a general and a companion of Gen. Lafayette in the Russian and Austrian prisons. He had a brother born in 1758 whose title was Victor Chevalier of Latour Manbourg. He also was a companion of Lafayette, a brave general, who lost a leg in the battle of Leipzig, and when the surgeon amputated his leg his valet wept. Gen. Fay said to him, "Don't cry you will have one boot less to pull off." See a French work published in 1833 at Geneva, N. Y.

The two brothers above named were reported by Rev. T. N. Fay of New Cumberland, West Va.; he also writes under date of Jan. 31, 1895 of a Frenchman du Fay, an astronomer, also of a French Statesman by the name of Fay, who was a member of the Cabinet of the French Republic, also of two aids of Gen. Washington, one of whom was offered by him a seat on the bench of the Supreme Court, when he was President of the U. S.

Rudolph Fay married the daughter of Gen. Lafayette and with him shared the captivity of the father in the prison of Olmutz, Prussia.

Fay Andras, Hungarian author, born at Kohany in 1786 (B. Encyclopedia says born May 10, 1780). He studied law, was active as a member of the national opposition against the rule of Metternich, and wrote a series of works in prose and poetry which procured him a place among the classics of his country. His most noted work is his Fables-Mesen Vienna 1820, a collection of his literary works in 8 vols., appeared in Pesth, in 1843-4. His Fables are in prose. Richness of invention, simplicity [illegible] design and truth of character are the chief qualities for which the Mesen have become a household word among the Hungarians. He wrote some dramatic works, (see Chambers' Cyclopedia). His novel "The House of Beltekys," 1832, is of a didactic kind but exhibits many features of Hungarian domestic life. He was also a constant contributor to literary and scientific periodicals, he had his share in some of those pamphlets by which great social questions, as instance, female education, savings banks, &c., were brought to a succes issue in Hungary. From the beginning of his political life in Hungary 1825 up to 1840 he was foremost among the leaders of the liberal opposit in the county sittings of Pesth; but on the appearance of Kossuth, the stri of public life growing more rapid he gradually retired from the region public controversy, turning his inventive mind to social improvements.

His designs and drawings attracted considerable attention. He produ his first grand tableau Sampson trahi par Dalilah une mort d Cleopatre, w marked satisfaction, and subsequently executed in the council hall of Elb feld several pieces in fresco, the subjects taken from the old national Hist of Germany. These works were stamped with his usual energy and poe which caused the artist to obtain great popularity. These colossal works art were subsequently placed on public exhibition in the cities of Munich Paris. Mr. Fay visited the latter city in 1845 and for the ensuing five ye became a frequent visitor to the studies of the most celebrated French pai ers. He produced several other pieces among which was Romeo et Julie Faust et Margurite which was highly appreciated.

Stephanes Foye. A man to defy the Pope and a vicar general un Henry the VIII.

Fay Herve Auguste Etienne Albans, an eminent French astronom born in the department of the Indre, Oct. 5th, 1814. He was educated the Ecole Polytechnique, and afterwards became a pupil of the observator In 1852 he discovered a new comet to which his name was assigned and ceived the Lalande prize from the Academy of Sciences. Johnson's cyclopedia says, he was a member of the French Institute and discove the comet bearing his name Nov. 22, 1843, and was elected a member of section of astronomy Jan. 18, 1841. It has been shown by Leverier that comet came into the solar system in 1747 and that the attraction of Jup then gave it its present orbit. Mr. Fay was appointed a member of bureau of Longitudes and in 1804 a member of the Imperial council of pu instruction. He was a professor of goedesy at the Ecole Polytechni from 1849 to 1854, became rector of the Academic Universitaire of Na in 1854. Decorated in 1843, was promoted first officer of the Legion Honor Dec. 29, 1855. He is the author of some valuable papers and sev text books of Astronomical Science.

Antonio Fay, a German, born in Italy, was lately residing in Hobok N. J. He is said to have come from a highly respectable family. He is of the best lithographic artists in America.

A Mr. Fay, is, or was recently, the proprietor of a large hotel in Frank- t, on the Main. I have also heard of the name in Spain.

About the time of Queen Elizabeth, a noted Irish chieftain named Red- ond Fay was distinguished for the ability with which he desolated a por- n of his own country.

Feo, was an eminent Italian antiquary and Xavier de Feo a distin- ished surgeon of Naples in 1804. In Germany the spelling is often Fey or y.

John Faa, king of the gipsies, was recognized as "lord and earl of little gypt" by King James V. of Scotland in 1540. For an interesting notice this individual, see "Account of the Gipsies" Chambers Miscellany, No. . There is an ancient ballad extant descriptive of "Johnnie Faa the gipsie ldie" who eloped with the lady of the sixth earl of Cassilis. This hero it stated in the "Pictutre of Scotland" Sir John Faa of Dunbar, a gallant ung knight who disguised himself as a gipsey to further his amorous terprise. It is evident the name of Faa was Scottish, and was assumed by me of the gypsies.

Our family name, however, occurs so frequently in French history, and to be met with so often in France, at the present day, that I am inclined think that our ancestry may be traced to that country, this opinion is given a suggestion, that it may throw some light on the subject, however remote.

Sir Gondemar (or Godemar) de Faye, du Faye or du Fay (as it is vari- sly spelled in the histories) a Norman Count and Lieutenant General of ance, opposed the advance of Edward III. at the ford of Blanchetague in 39. This battle which occurred just previous to that of Crecy was fought the water. An account of the action and of this General's career is given Froissart's Chronicles.

Mons du Faye or du Fay, occupying a position at the French Court dis- vered the distinctive conditions of electricity which he designated vitreous d resinous, but which Dr. Franklin afterwards named positive and nega- e. (See Franklin's Autobiography, etc).

A third planetary comet of short duration was discovered by Faye on ovember 22d, 1843 at the Paris Observatory (Humbolt's Cosmos, part 1; 36 Harper's ed. 1845)

"Mme. Chagot-dufay, better known as Mme. Emilie Contat, one of the cient celebrities of the stage" died at Nujent-survernisson, May, 1846. ne of the most distinguished actresses of France was Mlle. Leontine Fay, w Mdme Lolnys. She flourished about 1840.

M. Plenat de la Faye. Orderly to the first Napolean has recently (now 59) sent a present of pistols to General Garabaldi.

In this connection it may be appropriate to observe that there is a town d a river in France called Fay. (See Gazette).

The family might have taken its name from the locality. The surname la Fayette, of course, signifies of the place named Fay; the diminutive ette ing distinctive.

The following extract is from the Encyclopedia Americana:—

"Latour Maubourg, Victor Fay, Marquis de, born at Vivarais, of an cient family in 1756 was in the body-guard of the king at the breaking out of the revolution, defended the royal family on the terrible night of C 5, and emigrated after Aug. 10, 1792 (see History of France). Having turned in consequence of the amnesty proclaimed after the 18th Bruma he entered the service of the Republic and distinguished himself in the ca paigns of Egypt, Austria, Prussia and Spain. His services at Auster and on other occasions procured him the title of Count of the Empire a General of Division. In 1812 he was employed against Russia and at battle of Leipsic lost a leg. Louis XVIII created him peer of France 1814. During the hundred days he remained in retirement, and after second restoration, was appointed commander of the order of St. Louis.

1817 the portfolio of the War Department was entrusted to him; but opinions were too liberal to men who made his "Jambe illegitime" a matte reproach to him and in 1821 he was obliged to surrender to the Villile m istry.

CHARLES CESAR FAY, Count de, brother of the preceding, b. 17 was a member of the estate of nobles in 1789 and among the first to join third estate, when it declared itself the national assembly. He advocated c stitutional doctrines and served under Lafayette whose captivity he shared.
1801 he was a member of the corps legislatif; in 1806 of the senate; and a the restoration (1814) was created a peer of France. Having sat in chamber of peers during the hundred days, he lost the peerage on the sec restoration but received it again in 1819. His eldest son has been ambassa to Constantinople, Wirtemburg, London, etc.; his second son, Rodolp has been distinguished in the military service; and his third son, who mar the eldest daughter of Lafayette has also served, and has received the cr of St. Louis.

The preceding notices of Ancient Fays of distinction give the na prominence in France, and afford enough circumstantial evidence, if positive proof, that the Fays are of French origin. Fahe in Irish was chan to Fay. John J. Fay writes: The name has extended to all civilized tions, and claims distinction in science, art and war. It has been a wil votary of the latter when duty called or patriotism demanded. I find the record of it on the field of battle array, under Charlemange, and so on d to the times that tried men's souls in our own Revolutionary War. In histories of some of the Eastern States, particularly Massachusetts and mont it is frequently mentioned. The historian of the latter state especial tribute to the name, in the valor and heroic deeds of that grand Revolutionary patriarch Capt. Stephen Fay and his noble band of patri sons. It may be truthfully said of them, they were worthy sons of a n sire. They have sustained on the battle field of the new world, the galla and bravery so closely allied to the name in the history of the old wo
This is abundantly proven by 150 or more soldiers, whose names are enro in the War Department. That the religious element has always pred nated in the family is shown by the large number of Clergymen who filled pulpits of this country, and the hundreds in all the generations who been faithful members in the different churches of the land. If a thoro canvas of the family were made, many could be found who had gradu from colleges and numbers of them have been promoted to the head of i tutions of learning and charity, also in positions of trust in official life not been wanting. The Fays were also in the early history of the ly, related by marriage to the Brigham, Shattuck, Morse, Newton, Ward, e and to many other families of distinction and influence and the mingling ther of the blood of these hardy pioneers, gave a healthy, vigorous race hildren and to the world an intelligent patriotic, christian family, thus ıeathing to their descendants an honored ancestry and name of priceless ritance of more value than the blood of royalty such as the children of gs boast of.

One correspondent writes of the Fays as follows:—"The Fays as I v them are mentally and physically remarkable. They are clever, full nergy and possessed of wonderful executive ability. They are good ting and brilliant in conversation; but always look out for their own in- sts first and are high tempered and from what I have been told of the ent Fays these traitts run in the blood."

The name introduced into New England.

John J. Fay reports the names of the following, viz.:

Richard Fay resided in Dorchester, Mass. in 1634.
Henry Fay, a weaver of Newberry, Mass. died June 30, 1655.
William Fay, admitted a townsman in Boston, 1643.
Thomas Fay of Hingham, Mass. died 1678.

Possibly if the records of these four Fays could have been traced it might e given us a clue to the ancestry of John Fay.

Morse claims that David Fay appears upon our records as an emigrant n England prior to 1656, the date of John Fay's arrival in the ship Speed- , and that he was the father of John, that he was then living in Sudbury, ss., where John (who was only eight years old) came to reside in com- y with those who emigrated with him, that David Fay seems to have died, ıat he returned to England soon after 1669, leaving an only child John in minority, in the family of Peter Bent, and that John inherited a town eceived by his father of Bent, etc. But instead of John being in minority n after 1669, he had attained his majority, was married, and had one son n in 1669, and as to his inheriting a lot from Peter Bent, Cyrus Felton, .. of Marlboro, Mass., writes as follows, dated April 8, 1889. "We spent eral hours a few weeks ago in looking over the old Proprietor's Records of lboro for John and David Fay, and in every place where David had a of Peter Bent it referred to David (the son of John Fay, Sen.) who was n in 1679 and had a lot from the proprietors in 1714." Mr. Felton con- les as follows: "John Fay's father might have been David but I be- e he never resided in Massachusetts." Mr. Frank B. Fay of Boston, in tter dated March 23, 1895, says, "I have always considered John Fay as father of us all."

Although Mr. Morse has no doubt that David Fay was the common estor of the New England Fays, in this work that honor will be given ohn Fay, as we know for a certainty that he came to this country at a cer- date and it is just as well to start from him.

I.

JOHN FAY, b. in England (?) about 1648, embarked May 30, 1656 at vesend, on board the ship Speedwell, Robert Locke, Master, and arrived at Boston on the 27th of June. Among the passengers were Thomas Barr aged 20; Shadrack Hapgood, aged 14; Thomas Goodnow, aged 20; Nathan Goodnow, aged 16, and John Fay, aged 8 years. The emigrants here m tioned appear to have been bound to Sudbury, which had then been sett about seventeen years, where some of them at least, had parents or relati Considering the tender age of John Fay, it is highly probable that he some relatives or friends in Sudbury, to which place he undoubtedly repair About that time a company from Sudbury were removing to a new gr which had been made to them, which immediately after was incorporated the name of Marlborough. He accompanied these emigrants to the n plantation, as his name is found upon the Marlborough records as early 1669, when he was made freeman and he had a wife and one child.

The first mention of his name, or even that of Fay upon the Colon Records is in 1671, when Thomas King, John Fay, John Howe, Sen., Pe Bent and others of Marlborough, petitioned for a grant of land, and "Court judgeth it meete to referr the petitioners, in case they cannot where they be, to look for a meete place within our line to the westward Conecticot River, to answer their expectation, and then present it to Court, who will consider thereof." It does not appear that anything ever done under this permission of the Court; but in 1675 John Fay appe among the proprietors of Worcester, and has a lot of 50 acres assigned him in the eastern squadron, lying next to the County road to Boston.

Philip's War prevented in a great degree, the settlement of the town, on the return of peace the proprietors of Worcester, among whom was J Fay, in 1678 agreed upon certain measures for the following commenda objects, viz.: "1st. Security from enemies in case of alarm; 2nd, for better convenity of attending God's worship; 3rd, for the better education their children in society; 4th, for the better accommodation of trades peo 5th, for the better helps to civility; 6th, for more convenient help in cas sickness, fire or other casualty."

But, though he was one of the proprietors of Worcester, he contin his residence in Marlborough; and on the 1st of October, 1675, the inha tants to the number of 26 convened to adopt measures for their mutual sa and defense. At this meeting John Fay, who was present, was assigned w several others to repair to the house of William Kerley to defend it in c of an attack by the marauding bands of Philip. Like most of the settlers left the town soon after and repaired to a place of greater safety. Whil Watertown, to which place he had retired, he buried his first wife and on his children, and married again. While there he was made one of the feof in trust of the estate of Reynold Bush of Cambridge who proposes to ma Susanna Lowell of Beverly County of Wilts, England. After the clos Philip's War he returned to Marlboro and settled in the southerly part of town, on a lot now included in Southboro.

John Fay's first wife, Mary, was the first Brigham girl born in N England. Her father, Thomas Brigham, was the ancestor of the Brigh family. He was born in England in 1603. Embarked for America at L don, April 18, 1635, at the age of 32, in the ship "Susan and Ellen," Edw Payne, master. He settled in that part of Watertown which was set to Cambridge. He served in several offices of the town. He m. in 1

Iercy Hurd. She was b. in England. They had five children. Morse ays, "They res. in Cambridge but lived in Watertown till the birth of their au. Mary and their son Thomas, Jr." As no record of the birth of Mary is iven, if she was the oldest child she must have been b. prior to 1641 as that the date of the birth of Thomas; although some give 1648 as the year of her irth. Her marriage with John Fay was the first of a series of nearly 30 arriages between the Fays and Brighams, and thus early in their history egan the union of the two families who were among the prominent and inuential ones of Marlboro and whose descendants have in so good degree ustained the reputation of their noble ancestry.

Thomas Brigham, Jr., m. for his first wife, Mary Rice, and his 2nd wife as also the 2nd wife of John Fay who survived him as his wid. Her maiden ame was Susanna Shattuck, of another prominent family.

John Brigham, 2nd son of Thomas, Sen., had a dau., Mary Brigham, ho m. Gershom Fay, the youngest son of John Fay.

Jonathan Brigham, son of Thomas, Jr., m. Mary, oldest dau. of John Fay, nd she was the first Fay girl b. in New England.

John Fay's eldest son, John, m. for his 2nd wife Lovinah Brigham.

The marriage of John Fay with Susanna Shattuck was also the first of a eries of marriages between the Fays and Shattucks, and entitles the ancestry f that family to a notice here.

William Shattuck was b. in England 1621, d. in Watertown, Mass., 1672, nd his wife, who was the mother of John Fay's 2nd wife, m. in 1673, just 5 months after the death of her husband, Richard Norcross, a schoolmaster Watertown, the ancestor of the Norcross family of New England; b. in ngland, 1621, the year of William Shattuck's birth, and came to this country 1638 with his father, Jeremiah Norcross and settled in Watertown. Wilam Shattuck was buried in the ancient burying ground situated on the old oad leading from Cambridge to Watertown. The following inscription is n his monument:—

> "To perpetuate the memory of William Shattuck who died in Watertown, Aug. 14, 1672, aged 50. The progenitor of the families that have borne his name in America and of his son, John Shattuck, who was drowned in Charlestown Ferry, Sept. 14, 1675, aged 28. This simple memorial was erected in 1853 by Lemuel Shattuck who holds in grateful veneration the character of the Puritan fathers of New England."

Dr. Philip Shattuck, brother of the 2nd wife of John Fay, was a physian of eminence and a man holding important stations in Watertown. He as buried in the Waltham burial ground and on the stone which marks the rave is the following:—

> "Here Lyes ye body of Doct. Philip Shattuck, who > Dece'd June ye 26th, 1722, in ye 74th year of his age.
> Blessed are the dead
> That die in the Lord."

Deliverance Fay, youngest dau. of John Fay and Susanna Shattuck, m. enjamin Shattuck, a nephew of her mother, and her dau., Deliverance

Shattuck, m. Samuel Fay, who was a grandson of John Fay; and Jeduthan Fay, brother of Samuel and a grandson of John Fay, m. Sarah Shattuck, a dau. of Benjamin Shattuck by a 2nd wife.

The descendants of the Brigham, Shattuck and Fay families have ample reasons for congratulation that they are members of this royal firm, whose blood has mingled through every generation for the past 250 years.

The Fays are also connected by marriage with the Morse family. Samuel Morse settled in Dedham, 1637. He was the ancestor of Rev. Abner Morse, who was first employed by Frank B. Fay of Boston to collect material for a History of the Fays, and when we quote from Morse, he is the one referred to. He also compiled the Record of the Brighams.

Joseph Morse was born in England about 1587. Emigrated to New England and settled in Ipswich prior to 1641. One of his sons was Joseph of Watertown; he had a son Joseph who m. Susanna Shattuck, the 2nd wife of John Fay.

The marriage of John Fay to Mary Brigham (who was a daughter of Thomas Brigham, Sr.) is indicated by a legal document on record in Middlesex Co., Mass., as follows: "Thomas Brigham, John Brigham, Samuel Brigham, Hannah Ward, John Fay, Samuel Fay, children, and heirs of Thomas Brigham, late of Cambridge, commenced suit to recover certain lands in possession of Samuel Hastings, who purchased the Brigham Homestead." Hannah Ward was a daughter of Thomas Brigham, Sen. John Fay and Samuel Fay were children of John Fay, Sen., and Mary Brigham, introduced here to prove that the first wife of John Fay, instead of being Mary Shattuck, as it appeared when the record was first traced, was Mary Brigham Also to further prove the above the following is quoted from an article in the History of Westborough, Mass., entitled "Eaton's Grant," "Fay's or Brigham's Farm," "The Eaton heirs sold this farm to John Brigham, the surveyor, doctor, miller and land speculator, Thomas Brigham, his brother and John and Samuel Fay, sons of their sister Mary, for twenty-five pounds, or just one-half of what the colony owed the governor's heirs, not including interest. Each Brigham owned one-third, and their nephews, the Fay brothers, one-third together."

John Fay was one of the proprietors of the Ockoocangenesett Plantation which was purchased of the Indians in 1684. He appears to have been a man of character and standing in the community, and was favorably known in the County, whose records inform us, under date of October 7, 1864, that "Lieut. Edward West, Obadiah Morse, Thomas Reed, Jonathan Whitney John Fay and John Collar, are appointed a committee to lay out highways leading from Sudbury, Sherburn, Marlborough and Framingham, and the falls upon Charles River, for man and beast." The estate of John Fay was inventoried Jan. 1, 1691 by John Newton, Samuel Brigham and Isaac Amsden, June 6, 1695; his widow, Susanna, administered an inventory with the statement, that her late husband, John Fay, had by will disposed of the rest of his property in providing for his children, and that two cows, one horse five sheep, three pairs of sheets are all that remains. This will is not on record in the Middlesex files, and it might have been verbal. To each of his sons he seems to have bequeathed extensive tracts of land and to have been for his day a planter of considerable estate.

EXPLANATION OF THE FOLLOWING GENEALOGICAL TABLES.

All whose names are taken up again, or who have a sketch are given a serial number, indicated thus, (25).

To determine surnames (which are omitted in the record), look for the name of the father. All surnames, other than Fay mentioned in this volume, are underlined at the head of their records.

A single letter may represent a name; for example: John Fay married Mary Brigham, daughter of Thomas and Nancy (Hurd) B. (the letter B. standing for Brigham). A single letter may also stand for a town or city as: John Fay resided in Marlboro, his children born in M. (for Marlboro).

In all cases where a name or date is doubtful, that fact, will be indicated by an interrogation mark (?).

All towns are understood to be in Massachusetts unless otherwise indicated.

In locating the birth place of those who first settled in that part of Marlboro that was afterward set off to form the other borough towns, Marlboro is given as the place of birth unless it occurred in said borough town after its incorporation, the dates of which would be, for Westboro 1717, for Southboro 1727, and for Northboro 1766.

ABBREVIATIONS.

b. for born; d. for died; m. for married; p. for page; bap. for baptized; chil. for children; Capt. for Captain; dau. for daughter; Dea. for Deacon; grad. for graduated; pub. for published; rem. for removed; res. for resided or resides; ret. for returned; sk. for sketch; unm. for unmarried; wid. for widow.

This work is divided into four parts, namely, the descendants of the four sons of our common ancestor, John Fay, as follows:

Descendants of John Fay 2.
Descendants of Samuel Fay.
Descendants of David Fay.
Descendants of Gershom Fay.

An index giving the principal Heads of Families is placed at the end of each part.

To find records of the children or the grandchildren of the Fay girls (who have married) look in the index for the name and serial number of the mother or grandmother.

JOHN FAY (2) AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

He united with the church in Marlboro, Feb. 24, 1706. His wife, Elizabeth was received Nov. 9, 1699. When the first Congregational Church of Westboro was organized, Oct. 28, 1724, he was one of the original 13 members and was chosen as first Deacon, Oct. 12, 1727. His wife retained her church relations in Marlboro until July 25, 1725, when she also united in Westboro. Rev. Ebenezer Parkman was their first minister.

John Fay was a highly respectable man and filled several town offices before the division of the town and after Westboro was incorporated he became one of the most prominent men of the new town. At a town meeting held in Westboro, Mar. 3, 1718, he was chosen first Town Clerk. He held this office eleven years. He was on the list of Selectmen under the following dates: Jan. 5 to Mar. 3, 1718, 1718-21, 1723, 1725-27, 1732-34, 1736. He was Town Treasurer, 1722. He also served as assessor and in other places of honor and trust. In 1724 he was commissioned or honored with the title of Capt. and was a magistrate.

He is said to have been one of the first settlers in that part of the township and to have built him a cabin in the hill side, accessible only on one side, the better to protect himself against the Indians. This place was in a manner preserved by his descendants and was denominated "Their Ancestor's Fort" until about 1834.

Rev. Levi Lankton Fay of Moss Run, Ohio, under date of Dec. 19, 1883, writes of John Fay: "He secured his farm about one mile from this Fort and when there was danger he would flee to the Fort. Under such circumstances he cleared up his farm. I have often visited the spot where he made an underground room with a trap door as a security while farming, especially if the Indians intercepted him from fleeing to the Fort, which on one occasion saved him from falling into their hands. Near by this underground room stands the largest pear tree I ever saw. This tree was then a little sapling he found while clearing his farm. In my last visit to it in the summer of 1855 it was still standing, looking venerable by reason of its old age, but still bearing its delicious fruit."

He was a large land owner, which adjoined the town of Marlboro, and he was often chosen on committees to transact business for the church and for his fellow citizens.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES OF THE DESCENDANTS OF JOHN FAY (2).

DEA. JAMES FAY (32).

He and his brother Stephen were placed on a committee in 1732, by the General Court, to bring forward a settlement at Pegguage (now Athol). As early as 1735 he owned land in Hardwick, but probably remained in Westboro until after 1739 when his son Reuben was born there. He then removed to Grafton and was there Sept. 25, 1746, when he bought of Benjamin Smith the farm in Hardwick which became his homestead. In his will he mentioned all of his children except Lucy, to whose son Solomon Farr and daughter Lucy Farr legacies are given. He resided on the old River road, at the place marked, "A. Rice" on the Ruggles map.

He was a farmer, a bone-setter and a deacon of the "separate church" until it removed bodily to Bennington, Vt., in 1761. The separate church was duly organized after the following and similar votes were taken by the old church, viz., July 25, 1749, "Voted that the church send to Rev. Edwards, Hall and Eaton to come and give their advice about the dissatisfied brethren in our church, viz., Samuel Robinson, James Fay, (and three others named) whether the church dismiss, or censure them as disorderly, etc. The council advised and the church voted to comply with the advice but James Fay (and two others named) declared non compliance.

He and his wife Lydia united with the church in Westboro, July 7, 1728, and they with their sons, James, Jr., and Daniel, with his wife, Elizabeth Spooner, were among the original members of the "Separate Church" of Hardwick at its organization in 1750.

Dea. Fay lived in troublous times; he with five others were denounced as Tories, because they could not be satisfied that it was right to take up arms against the King of England. At a town meeting in Hardwick, Jan. 2, 1775, it was voted "to have no dealings with the Tories except grinding for them;" this was considered a work of necessity "as bread is the staff of life."

Aug. 7, 1775, "Voted in committee of correspondence for the town of Hardwick. Whereas, Dea. James Fay (and five others named) have by their conduct in various instances manifested a disposition inimical to the rights and privileges of their countrymen. Therefore resolved, That their names be published to the world, and that it be earnestly recommended to the inhabitants of this town, county and colony not to have any commercial connection with the said Fay and others named, but to shun their persons and treat with that contempt and neglect they deserve, and that it is necessary that the said Fay, etc., be confined to this town and that they assemble not together more than two of them at a time (except at public worship and at funerals) and recommended it, the good people of this colony, that (if the said persons or any one of them should depart out of this town without a permit from the committee) they take up and confine, or send them back again, per order of the said committee." New England Chronicle, Aug. 7, 1775.

Dea. Fay seems to have been a prominent man and no doubt he was as conscientious as were his persecutors and defamers, who were only too ready to forgive, what, in him, had to them seemed unpatriotic, and were willing to again "live and let live" in restored confidence as in days gone by, when Dea. James Fay with Daniel Oliver, Brigadier Ruggles, Capt. Mandell and Capt. Paige were appointed a committee to contract for the building of a new meeting house, the old one built over a quarter of a century before, proving to be unsatisfactory, the town had voted to build a new one. It was also "voted to build a steeple to said house and that the town pay what it shall cost more than a convenient porch for stairs into the galleries, also voted to have a pew over the west gallery to be made close and tight, the town reserving the privilege of having an officer to set in the pew to oversee the boys." See History of Hardwick.

CAPT. BENJAMIN FAY (34).

He inherited the original homestead of his father in Westboro, one mile from the center, and in 1859 owned by George Sibley. He became one of the first men of the town and evidently one of the aristocracy of the county. He served the town as school committeeman and treasurer in 1768 and as selectman 1759, 1760, 1769, 1773, 1774 and 1777 when he died.

He seems to have inherited and transmitted the talents of his father and among his grandchildren was Eli Whitney, who was distinguished as the inventor of the "Cotton Gin." He was honored with the command of a military company at a period when such honors were conferred upon only their most substantial men. He and his wife, Martha, united with the church in Westboro, July 26, 1741. The story is told of her great grief when their son, James, enlisted as a soldier, saying she "should never see him again." To which he replied, "If my grave is there, Mother, I must go to it, it will not come to me." He died a few months after enlisting.

CAPT. STEPHEN FAY (35).

He was the father of a very remarkable family and was himself a man of rank. He settled first in Westboro; where he served as constable in 1740, assessor 1745, and in 1747 he was Tythingman. As early as 1732 a committee was appointed by the general court to put such persons as they should think were sufficient to bring forward a settlement at Pegguage (now Athol), and Stephen and his brother, James, were among those selected. In 1734 the proprietors, 60 in number, drew their lots. Stephen sold out his "town right" and removed to Hardwick where most of his children were born. Dec. 6, 1749 he bought a farm of 300 acres on the west side of Muddy Pond, but soon removed to the place afterwards owned and occupied by Col. Stephen Rice on the old turnpike, marked' "C. Paige" on the Ruggles map.

He soon became a prominent and an influential citizen and showed a capacity for business and so was chosen as constable, assessor, surveyor, selectman, treasurer, tythingman and school committeeman and was also innholder for several years. He served as Capt. in the French war and until after the ratification of peace he held no town office.

The date of his removal from Hardwick to Bennington, Vt., is given by some as 1762 and again as 1765-6. Having a bold and adventurous spirit he preferred a frontier life where his active mind could have full scope and where he could at the same time provide for his numerous family. The beautiful and fertile plains of Bennington afforded him and his sons the very field for which the Creator had fitted them and where their influence was to tell in the Revolution and history of the Country. It was here his life was of rare activity and enterprise and where he and his family were destined to act a conspicuous part in the future of their town and state. His name appears in 1766 in a petition to the King by the settlers, and the names of his sons, Jonas, Elijah, Joseph and Benjamin were found on the public records in 1768 and 1769. Vermont was known at that period as the "New Hampshire Grants" and was claimed by N. H. and N. Y. Bennington having been granted by N. H. the inhabitants opposed the claim of N. Y., which would dispossess them of their lands.

The dispute between the grantees of land under the respective authorities of New York and New Hampshire was long and tedious, and raged with great violence for a number of years and threatened to involve the people in all the horrors of a civil war. Gov. Tryon of New York wrote a letter on the subject dated May 19, 1772, addressed to the inhabitants of Bennington and its vicinity. On the 5th of June, 1772, two answers were returned by Stephen Fay and his son, Dr. Jonas Fay, who were appointed agents on the part of the settlers of the New Hampshire Grants and their report appears in Thompson's History, p. 24.

Capt. Stephen Fay was a leading spirit and exercised a powerful influence in the long contest with N. Y., and during the trying period of the Revolutionary War. He and his son, Jonas, demanded of Gov. Tryon of N. Y. redress for their grievances by being allowed to exercise jurisdiction over their own territory.

He was particularly noted as "Landlord Fay". In settling in Bennington he erected a public house called first the Green Mountain House, or Tavern; called also "Landlord Fay's", and it became the headquarters of those who resisted the claim of N. Y. and spurned her jurisdiction. On the top of the high sign post exhibited by "Landlord Fay" was the stuffed skin of a Catamount with teeth grinning defiance toward N. Y., hence it came to be called "The Catamount Tavern". During the period of the early settlement of the state this Tavern was a great resort for travelers and emigrants and became widely known. It was the home of Ethan Allen for several years from 1770 when he came first to the "N. H. Grants", as Vermont was then called. In this famous tavern sat the "Vermont Council of Safety" in an inner room where in secret they planned, guided and directed the patriotic expedition of the "Green Mountain Boys" to stem the torrent of Burgoyne's invasion and here also Stark and Warner, with the aid of the council, planned the famous attack on Baum's entrenchments where was won the brilliant victory of Bennington which turned the current of success from the British to the American Army and was followed in a few weeks by the capture of Burgoyne and his army at Saratoga.

In the clash of arms at Bennington, Capt. Fay was represented by his sons, five of whom, John, Elijah, Benjamin, Col. Joseph, and David were in the battle Aug. 16, 1777, John being killed at his post of duty; when his father was informed that he had been unfortunate in respect to one of his sons he exclaimed, "What! has he misbehaved? "No, sir", said the informant, "worse than that, he is among the slain, he fell contending mightily in the cause." "Then I am satisfied," replied the venerable sire, and in his deep grief, bowing his head, he exclaimed, "I thank God that I had a son who was willing to give his life for his country, bring him in and lay him before me, that at my leisure, I may behold and survey the darling of my soul." Upon which the corpse was brought in and laid before him, all besmeared with dirt and gore. He then called for a vessel of water and washed the gore from his son's corpse and wiped his gaping wounds with a complacency, as he expressed it, which before he had never felt or experienced. This account is from papers published in 1777, soon after the battle.

The British officers who were taken prisoners in the battle of Bennington were conducted to the house of Capt. Fay. On the day previous to the battle they had tauntingly sent word that they wanted him to pre-

Visiting the site of the Old Tavern of "Landlord Fay" in 1884, a new dwelling house had been erected in the rear, but the rubbish of the old house still remained in the old cellar or basement. A granite monument had been erected in front, just outside the fence, to mark the historic spot and to tell to future generations the tale of "the olden time." (O. P. Fay.)

pare a good dinner for them for they would dine with him on the morrow. On their approach, as prisoners of war, he met them at the gate with his characteristic humor, pulling off his "cocked hat" said to them, "Welcome, welcome, gentlemen! the dinner you ordered is prepared for you."

Capt. Fay lived to see the dawning of the glorious morn of peace. On the 30th of March, 1871, his house which had long been the most notable relic of early times, was burned to the ground. The origin of the fire is unknown. It had been built over 100 years, having been erected prior to 1770 by Capt. Fay, and after his death in 1781 it was occupied by two of his sons in succession, then by his grandson, Samuel Fay, Esq., a memorable and worthy representative of the olden time who died in the 92d year of his age.

JONATHAN FAY (60).

He inherited the homestead of his father in Westboro. He commanded a company in the French war and was under General Abercombie at his defeat before Ticonderoga in 1758.

He was a prominent man in Westboro, filling some of the principal town offices. He was probably Township or County Clerk as he receipted June 13, 1746, Timothy Brigham as guardian for several minors and Mar. 3, 1746 he gave a receipt discharging Thomas Brigham, whom he had chosen to be his guardian after he was 14 years old. He was surveyor in 1754 and 1756 and in 1756 was tythingman, constable in 1758 and selectman 1769 and 1773.

JOSIAH (63).

He settled in Southboro, about 1750, one mile west of the center on the Worcester road. He was sargeant in the expedition against Crown Point in 1756, was warden in 1769 and selectman in 1770, 1771 and 1775. He commanded a company of minute men who marched in the early morn of the 19th of April, 1775 to Concord, the battle was fought before he got there but he followed on to Cambridge. He was ordered to Dorchester Heights and he stayed there during the occupation by the British of the town of Boston. He enlisted in the army during the war, was promoted to a major, wounded in the battle of White Plains and was ordered to New York City where he died in the service of his country, Aug. 8, 1776.

His sword was in the possession of his grandson, Peter Fay of Southboro in 1883.

DANIEL FAY (64).

He removed to Hardwick, when a child, with his father. He was an agriculturist, the owner of a large landed estate in Hardwick. He was an intelligent and highly respected man and a citizen of influence.

We find him as having been in service in the French and Indian War in 1758 in the company of Capt. Samuel Robinson, Col. (afterwards Brigadier General) Timothy Ruggles' Regiment. He was commissioned Lieut. of Militia in 1771 and was on the "alarm list" 1775.

He and his wife united with the "Separate Church."

LYDIA FAY (65).

She m. Amaziah Spooner who was a farmer and remained with his father until he had attained his majority when he went to Hardwick, where, by the assistance of his father, he purchased a large tract of new land. Here he remained and passed his life.

He was a man of a hardy constitution, of industrious and frugal habits.

Lydia Fay had 10 children, 7 of whom married and had families. She had 4 sons who were in the patriot army in the war of the Revolution. See Spooner's Genealogy for full records of their service for their country.

Her daughter, Rebecca Spooner, married Gideon Newton who was also a soldier.

Lydia Fay had 10 children, 42 grandchildren, and 166 great grandchildren. Total 218. A model family.

✓ JAMES FAY, Jr. (67).

He was one of the original members of the Separate Church at its organzation in Hardwick about 1750 when he was 15 years old. He was a soldier, was sergeant in the Crown Point expedition from Sept. 20, to Dec. 5, 1756 and was a member of Capt. Robinson's company in the campaign from Mar. 13 to Dec. 1, 1858 and his name is on a description roll with others in Dec., 1779 as "45 years of age, 6 feet in height, of light complexion."

In the original assessment of a tax dated Jan. 30, 1776, to bear the burdens at the commencement of the war of the Revolution, James Fay is taxed about $2.50 and one poll, about fifty cents.

It is said he died in the army of the Revolution during the war.

ISAAC FAY (71).

He was a farmer of Hardwick and was assessed in the original taxing of the inhabitants to bear the burdens of the war, Jan. 30, 1776, about $2.50. He was a soldier, was 1st Lieut. in Capt. James Paige's Company 4th Regiment in Worcester Co., Mass., Col. Timothy Paige.

He bought the homestead in 1774 but resided on the adjoining farm, marked, "E. Trow" on the Ruggles' map. Meeting with some reverses he moved to Vermont after 1781. Then to Galway, N. Y., Saratoga Co., and died there. His six children were somewhat distinguished.

HANNAH FAY (87).

She married James Rogers, who was a Cordwainer and removed from Kingston to Hardwick before Nov. 6, 1766, at which date he bought a farm in the northerly part of the town at, or near, the place marked "Widow Rogers" on the Ruggles' map.

A great grandson of Hannah Fay, Joseph, b. about 1838 was a soldier in the late Civil War and was killed in the battle of the Wilderness, May 6, 1864.

ELIZABETH FAY (89).

She married Eli Whitney and had 3 children. Their oldest son, Eli Whitney, Jr., graduated at Yale college 1792. He was an American inventor and a man of great mechanical genius and justly ranked among the benefactors of mankind by his invention of the "Cotton Gin."

He went to Savannah, Ga. and studied law, residing in the house of the widow of Gen. Greene. Being in a cotton growing country and seeing that the great impediment in the culture of that staple consisted in the amount of labor required in separating the fibre from the seed, as at this time a pound of green seed cotton was all that a negro woman could clean in a day; at the instance of Mrs. Greene he brought his inventive genius to bear upon the subject and undertook to do the work and gave to the public the "Cotton Gin." He was compelled to draw his own wire and to manufacture his own tools. Mrs. Greene and Mr. Miller who afterwards became Whitney's partner, were the only persons permitted to see the machine, but rumors of it had gone through the state and before it was quite finished the building was broken open by night and the machine carried off. Before Whitney could complete his model and obtain his patent, several machines based on his invention had been made and were in operation.

Mr. Miller formed a partnership with him in May, 1793, and Whitney went to Connecticut to manufacture the machines but the patent was continually infringed upon. The South Carolina Legislature granted him $50,000 for his invention which was finely paid after vexations and lawsuits. North Carolina allowed a percentage for each saw for five years and collected and paid it over to the patentees in good faith and Tennessee promised to do the same thing but afterwards rescinded her contract. For years, amid accumulated misfortunes, lawsuits, the burning of his factory, the report that his machine injured the fibre of the cotton, the refusal of congress, through the opposition of the southern members, to allow the patent to be renewed, and the death of his partner, Whitney, struggled on until convinced that he would never receive a just compensation for his invention. He then turned his attention to the manufacture of fire arms for the government, from which he reaped a fortune. In 1798 he contracted with the United States to furnish for $134,000, 10,000 stands of arms, which he completed in ten years and subsequently he contracted for 15,000 more. He was the first who made each single portion of the gun adapted to any one of the thousands of arms in process of manufacture at the same time. His factory was at Whitneyville, Conn. The application of several of his inventions to other manufactures of iron and steel added to his reputation though but little to his wealth.

His invention of the "Cotton Gin" has been of incalculable value to the southern planters; what was previously performed at an immense sacrifice of time and labor is now performed almost instantaneously. The favorable condition of the internal trade of the southern section of this country has in many respects been promoted more by the invention of Whitney than by the labors of Fulton, but like many other inventions, he was not allowed, as we have seen, to enjoy his own in peace; but suffered much from the encroachments of the envious and designing. His invention of the "Cotton Gin" was also of great importance to the country and to the world.

About 1770, when cotton became a general material for manufacture in England and was spun by the single thread, laborers could not be found in sufficient numbers to supply the required amount of yarn. But the "Spinning Jenny" was invented by an English barber, Mr.Arkwright,by which several threads were drawn out at a time. This invention soon gave the manufacturers a large amount of yarn; more than the weavers could well convert into cloth by their hand looms, the only kind then known.

Dr. Cartwright, an English clergyman, met the crisis by inventing the "Power Loom" by which the whole weaving process could be carried by machinery. Nothing now was wanting but to afford a supply of raw cotton at a price sufficiently low to make cotton goods an article of general consumption.

The only remaining obstacle Mr. Whitney happily removed by the invention of his "Cotton Gin." Thus not only the producer of the raw material but the manufacturer and consumer of cotton goods are under great obligations to Arkwright, Cartwright and Eli Whitney who have contributed so much to feed the hungry and clothe the naked.

Mr. Whitney died in New Haven, Conn., Jan. 8, 1825.

BENJAMIN FAY, Jr. (91).

The following sketch is from Miss M. J. Fay of Westboro; a granddaughter. "He had no advantage for education except attending school six weeks. The custom was to employ a male teacher a few weeks in one part of the town and then move to another. It was probably one of these 'moving schools' which grandfather attended six weeks. Yet I have heard 'my father say, he could compute interest in his head quicker than he himself could with his pencil.

He was a large land owner; giving a farm to each son as he became of age or at his marriage.

He was a man of principle and of sound judgment in business affairs. Though not a member of the church his children esteemed him to be a christian man and held his character in the highest respect. He died Mar. 23, 1834, in the 90th year of his age.

Beulah, his wife, was born June 27, 1754. She was the daughter of Solomon Stowe, son of Samuel, Jr., son of Samuel, son of Thomas, son of John. John and Thomas came from England in one of Winthrop's colonies, coming Mar. 7, 1634. Members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Co., in 1638. Stowe is a very ancient name in England, particularly in Middlesex and Lincolnshire. Samuel Stowe went to Marlboro sometime previous to 1684.

Beulah, my grandmother, was a devoted christian character. She united with the church Sept. 30, 1781. The last of her life she was disabled from a broken hip. She is said to have spent many hours in the nights watches in prayer for her children and their descendants. To those of us who remember well the useful lives of her children, it would seem that her prayers were not unanswered. She died Apr. 18, 1834, in the 82d year of her age following her husband in less than a month.

At the time of my grandfather's marriage he built a new house on the site of the old Fay homestead, moving back the old house. This house now stands in good repair, built about 1771 or 2."

NATHAN FAY (102).

In 1770 he went to Alstead, N. H., cleared land and built a log house. He afterwards located upon a beautiful spot, at a four corners, on the northwest corner of which he built a large two story house, which was originally a public house. The ground is sloping each way from the building, which has always been kept in good repair. He had 175 acres in his farm all in high state of cultivation. Yielding about 50 tons of hay annually, giving evidence of the industry and thrift of its first and present owner. It was known as the "Fay Farm" and was always in the family until Feb., 1883, when it was sold by Dea. Solon Morrison, a son-in-law of Nathan.

He held the office of lieutenant in the Revolutionary War. In 1778 he and his wife, Persis, were among the original 20 members who organized the Congregational Church in Alstead, N. H., Rev. Levi Lankton, pastor.

He was a devoted christian and highly esteemed and respected as a citizen and neighbor. He was Deacon of the church for many years and most of his family were members and also many of his grandchildren.

His 2d wife, Margaret Newton, lived to mourn his loss and to comfort and guide her children, till she died greatly lamented.

JOHN FAY (117).

John Fay was in the Crown Point expedition in 1756 from Sept. 20 to Dec. 5. And Aug. 9, 1757 was in a company which marched as far as Kinderhook for the relief of Fort William Henry.

John Fay came to Bennington, Vt., from Hardwick with his father and four brothers. They were among the most prominent citizens of that place and indeed of Vermont and like the rest of the family he was ardent in his devotion to liberty and ready to resist oppression whether it came from the State of N. Y. or from the British Parliament.

On the breaking out of the Revolution the people of Bennington aided in the early capture of Ticonderoga and held themselves in readiness to aid in any daring enterprise against the common enemy. Capt. Elijah Dewey organized a company of which John Fay was the sergeant and on the approach of the forces under Burgoyne, partly under the direction of the "Council of Safety" whose headquarters were at "Landlord Fay's," they went forth from there to meet the enemy. In the battle which ensued John Fay fell a martyr to the cause of liberty, which the family had so much at heart, nor was he the only one of the family who appeared in arms on that eventful day.

Capt. Robinson's roll bears the names of five sons of Capt. Stephen Fay, John, Benjamin, Elijah, Joseph and David. John Fay was in the battle of Bennington, Aug. 16, 1777, General Stark commanded our forces and Col. Baum had charge of the British and their allies the Hessians, who outnumbered the "Green Mountain Boys" and were also fighting behind their strong entrenchments. John Fay was fighting behind a tree and his last words, as he raised his musket to fire once more at the enemy, were, "I feel that I am fighting in a good cause." as his eye ran along the barrel of his gun taking aim, his head just exposed from behind the tree, a ball struck him in the very center of his forehead and he fell with his gun un-discharged. Quick as lightning ran the cry through the ranks, "John Fay is shot," maddened to fury they sprang from behind the trees, fired their guns in the very faces of the foe, and clubbing the breaches leaped over the breastwork with an impulse of onset nothing mortal could resist. The enemy fled as they would before a bellowing horde of howling lions; but before they had gone far were obliged to surrender and instead of capturing the ammunition in the Arsenal at Bennington, they, with nearly all their effects, were captives in the hands of the victorious army of liberty and freedom.

The death of John Fay was the turning point in the success of our forces, which was in a few weeks supplemented by the capture of Burgoyne and his army at Saratoga and culminating at last in the final surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown.

JONAS FAY (118).

He received a good education and was a man of extraordinary energy and versatility of talent. He was in the sanguinary battle near Lake George, Sept. 8, 1755, when at the age of 19, and in 1756 was clerk in Capt. Samuel Robinson's Company in the French war at Fort Edward.

He studied medicine and soon after 1760 commenced practicing the healing art in Hardwick, ranking high as a physician and still higher as a politician and patriot. He practiced several years, also taught school, residing at the place marked "Mr. Wesson" on the Ruggle's map.

May 19, 1761, he purchased 4½ acres of land in Hardwick near the 10 acres that were "reserved for a burial place, a training field, and to set a meeting house on." In 1761 he was called Ensign on the town records. Sept. 23, 1762, he was one of ten who were licensed as innholders in the town of Hardwick, "during the time by law appointed for keeping the 'Fair' in said town who recognized." He was assessor 1766 and 1767.

He removed to Bennington, Vt., in 1768, residing in a house that stood on the Blue Hill, a mile south of the meeting house, and at once became conspicuous as a physician, a leading politician, and occupied a prominent position among the settlers on the "N. H. Grants" as well in the contests with N. Y. as in that of the mother country and also in the organization of the state government. In 1772 when Gov. Tryon of N. Y. invited the people of Bennington to send agents to N. Y. to inform him of the grounds of their complaint, he (and his father) were appointed for that purpose.

He was clerk to the convention of settlers that met Mar., 1774; resolved to defend by force, Allen, Warner and others, who were threatened with outlawry and death by the N. Y. assembly; and as such clerk, certified their proceedings for publication.

He was surgeon in a regiment of "Green Mountain Boys" at the capture of Ticonderoga and the expedition of Allen and was continued in that position by the committee of the Mass. congress who were sent to the lake in July, 1775, and also was appointed by them to muster the troops as they arrived for the defense of that post. He was also surgeon for a time to Col. Warner's regiment.

In Jan., 1776, he was clerk to the convention at Dorset that petitioned congress to be allowed to serve in the common cause of the country as the inhabitants of the N. H. Grants and not under N. Y., and was also clerk of the convention held in the same place in July following. He was a member of the convention which met at Westminster in Jan., 1777, and declared Vermont to be an independent state and was appointed chairman of a committee to draw up a declaration and petition announcing the fact, and their reasons for it, to congress; of which declaration and petition he was the draughtsman and author.

He was secretary to the convention that formed the constitution of the state in July, 1777, and was one of the "Council of Safety" then appointed to administer the affairs of the state until the assembly provided for by the constiution should meet. It was this "Council of Safety" which assembled in the "Catamount Tavern" on the day of the battle of Bennington, Aug. 16, 1777. "Jonas Fay was vice president and one of the most active members. There were gathered there, Ira Allen, Thomas Chittenden, Jones Fay, and their staunch comrades. There was one Catamount on the signpost and twelve Catamounts within."

He was also a member of the State Council for 7 years from 1778, a judge of the supreme court in 1782, judge of probate from 1782 to 1787 and was one of the three side judges Sept. 11, 1782 for the trial of prisoners in a special term of the superior court held at Westminster, Vt., and Moses Robinson was chief judge.

Jonas Fay was a member of the continental congress at Philadelphia as the agent of the state, under appointments made in Jan., 1777, Oct., 1779, June, 1781 and Feb., 1782.

On the occurrence of the birth of twin sons, Jan. 12, 1779, he named one of them, Ethan Allen, and the other Heman Allen after his two friends of those names.

Dr. Fay was a man of extensive general information, decided in his opinions and bold and determined in maintaining them. His education was such as to enable him to draw with skill and ability the public papers of the day of which many besides the Declaration of Independence before mentioned, he was the reputed author. In 1780 he, in conjunction with Ethan Allen, prepared and published a pamphlet of 30 pages on the N. H. and N. Y. controversy which was printed at Hartford, Connecticut.

After the year 1800 he removed to Charlott, for a few years, and afterward to Pawlett, but returned again to Bennington where he died, Mar. 6, 1818 aged 82 years.

STEPHEN FAY (119).

He did not go to Vermont with his father's family but settled in Charlton. He and Col. Davis had a grant of land in Calais, Vt., but it does not appear that either of them ever settled in the township, probably Stephen disposed of his share of the "right" as he resided in Charlton and reared a large family of children. His son, Samuel, settled in Calais, Vt., and represented the town one year.

Stephen Fay was sergeant in the regular army for one or more campaigns and was also sergeant in another company that marched Aug. 9, 1757 as far as Kinderhook for the relief of Fort William Henry, his brothers John and Jonas were in the same company.

MARY FAY (121).

She united with the church in 1765, May 16. Two of her descendants were ministers in Bennington, Vt. She m. about 1762, Moses Robinson, son of Capt. Samuel Robinson, who was born in Bristol, England in 1668. Emigrated to this country and settled in Cambridge, Mass., where he died 1730. Capt. Samuel was the acknowledged leader of a band of patriots who were pioneers in the sttlement of the new town of Bennington, Vt., and he continued to maintain almost a controlling influence in the affairs of the place during the remainder of his life. He left a family in Bennington which became quite distinguished and intermarried with the leading families of the place.

Moses who married Mary Fay was the first town clerk of Bennington and he held the office 19 years. He was a colonel in the militia, a member of the "Council of Safety," chief justice of the supreme court, senator in congress and governor of the state of Vermont. His wife, Mary Fay, died and he married as his 2d wife, Mrs. Susanna Howe, daughter of John Warner.

Mary Fay's oldest son, Moses, Jr., was a member of the council 1814 and several times a member of the general assembly.

Moses Robinson was one of the most prominent citizens of Bennington and of Vermont. He was elected Deacon May 22, 1789 and remained in that position through life. As Col. of the militia was at the head of his regiment at Mount Independence on its evacuation by Gen. St. Clair. In 1782 he was one of the agents of Vt. in the Continental Congress.

The degree of A. M. was conferred on him by Yale College in 1789 and by Dartmouth College 1790.

In 1781 while Vermont was refused admission into the Union and was contending single handed with N. Y. and N. H. for jurisdiction over its own territory, Moses Robinson, Jonas and Joseph Fay, with others, adopted a plan which deceived the British officers. That seemed to be a necessary political maneuver to save the frontiers of the State from invasion by the common enemy.

In a special term of the Supreme Court at Westminster, Vt., Sept. 11, 1782, for the trial of political adherents of N. Y. who resisted the authority of Vermont, Jonas Fay was one of the side judges and Moses Robinson was the chief judge.

BEULAH FAY (122).

She married Major Samuel Billings, son of Samuel and Hannah (Wright), son of Samuel and Sarah, son of Richard and Margery Billings. Major Billings was elected by the town of Hardwick, Capt. of the South Military Company, Nov. 21, 1774, and was commissioned May 23, 1775 as Capt. in Col. Leonard's Regiment in the army of the Revolution. At some subsequent period, either in Mass. or Vermont he seems to have attained the rank of Major and honored with the command of a Battallion.

He removed from Hardwick to Bennington, Vt., where he and his wife died. A monumental slab denotes their graves in the Bennington Cemetary.

BENJAMIN FAY (124).

He removed from Hardwick with his father in 1762 to Bennington, Vt., and was the first high sheriff elected in the county and in the state. He served in that office from Mar. 26, 1778, until Oct., 1781. He officiated at the execution of the Spy Redding who was the first executed in the state, which took place June, 1778, in the presence of a large concourse of people, among whom was the governor and members of the Council and General Assembly then in session in Bennington.

His wife, Sarah Robinson, after her husband died married Nov. 26, 1790, Gen. Heman Swift of Cornwall, Conn.

COL. JOSEPH FAY (125).

His first wife was Margaret Dewey, daughter of Rev. Jedediah Dewey, who was the first settled minister in Bennington.

Col. Fay came to Bennington with his father in 1766. He was secretary of the "Council of Safety" from Sept., 1777 to 1778 and the State Council from Sept., 1778 to 1794. He was Secretary of State from the resignation of Thomas Chandler, Jr. (supposed to be ,in Nov., 1778) to 1781. Rev. L. R. Paige in his History of Hardwick says "Joseph was the first Secretary of State."

He was the associate of Ira Allen in conducting the famous negotiation with Gen. Haldimand (Gov. General of Canada) by ,which the operations of the enemy were paralyzed and the Northern frontier protected from invasion during the last three years of the Revolutionary struggle.

He was a man of very respectable talents and acquirements, agreeable manners and address, well calculated to manage such a diplomatic adventure with adroitness and ability.

He built the house, occupied in 1859 by Truman Squier, next north of the Court House. In 1794 he removed to New York City as a merchant, where he was successful and maintained one of the most hospitable establishments in that city.

SARAH FAY (126).

She married Col. David Robinson, brother of Gov. Moses Robinson, who married her sister, Mary Fay. She died Jan. 25, 1801, in Bennington, Vt. The following is inscribed on her headstone in the cemetery in Bennington:

> "Here lies in hopes of a joyful resurrection the relicks of Mrs. Sarah Robinson, the amiable consort of Col. David Robinson. Having spent a life of virtuous care for her family and universal benevolence for the sick. Free from ostentation, she possessed a plain heart, with gentle and unaffected manners. She resigned her breath Jan. 25, 1801 in the 44th yr. of her age."

David Robinson, her husband, removed from Hardwick with his father, Capt. Samuel Robinson to Bennington, Vt., in 1761, being then a lad of 7 years.

He was a soldier in the war of the Revolution and was in the battle of Bennington as a private in the militia and afterwards rose by regular promotion to the rank of Major General in 1812, which office he resigned in 1817.

He was sheriff of the county 22 years, ending 1811, when he was appointed under Presidents Madison and Monroe, United States Marshal for the Vermont District, which office he held 8 years, until 1819.

Their son, Stephen Robinson, was successively a member of the Legislature, a judge of the County Court and a member of the Council of Censors in 1834.

DAVID FAY (127).

He came from Hardwick to Bennington, Vt., with his father when only five years old. He was the youngest son of Stephen Fay, and the only child that married and was not blessed with children.

He was in the battle of Bennington, Aug. 16, 1777, then but 15 years old, and was in the company of Capt. Samuel Robinson. After much anxious inquiry for him and fears lest he too had been slain in the battle, he was found in the upper part of a shed asleep on the floor, with his head resting on the arm which embraced his gun. Brave was he, but was exhausted by fatigue.

He was afterwards a lawyer, admitted to the bar June, 1794. He was a member of the Council of Censors 1779, State Attorney prior to 1801, United States Attorney under President Jefferson for the district of Vermont 1801 to 1809, Judge of the Supreme Court 1809 to 1813, Judge of Probate 1819 and 1820, and a member of the "Council of Safety" four years.

Hon. David Fay used to say to Gov. Moses Robinson, "Brother don't let the church go down, you take care of the church and I will take care of the world," and to another he said, "Let the church be at peace, then there will be no war with the rest. The church has a great sway in the world, though there are a great many men in it." His wife was a member of the church.

He was of a family truly remarkable for talent and public services. Few families have been more distinguished or have contributed more to fashion the institutions of the community in which they lived. Nor has this died out with a single generation, several of their descendants have been known to fame as we shall see hereafter.

JOHN FAY (129).

The following is from Boston Courts in Probate of John Fay. His nephew, Samuel Prescott Phillips Fay, was administrator of the estate, which was appraised at $2,051.54, after paying bills—his sister, Hannah, wife of Benjamin G. Maynard, had one-third of the estate, his brother Jonathan's children, S. P. P. Fay (the administrator), Lucy P., wife of Dr. Abiel Heywood, Sophia, wife of Joseph Barret, and Abigail B., wife of Simeon Putnam, had each one-quarter of the 2d one-third of the estate; and for the remaining one-third, the children of his brother, David, then living, Otis, Betsey, Nancy, Patience C. and David, they each had one-sixth of the last third. His property consisted of money owing to him, besides bills, gold and silver.

He was a soldier in the War of the Revolution, and died unm. three months prior to Mar. 25, 1833, in Littleton, Mass., where he resided.

JONATHAN FAY (130).

He graduated at Harvard, 1778. He was a student in 1775 when the college was moved to Concord (to avoid the dangers of the war) where he married and settled as a lawyer. He became quite eminent in his profession and reached a very respectable rank as an advocate and had a good practice attending the courtrs of Worcester and Middlesex. He was styled the "Honest Lawyer."

He represented Concord in the Legislature in 1792 to 1796 inclusive.

JOSIAH FAY (139).

He was a farmer and resided in Marlboro. His wife was Hepsibah Collins, a descendant of Miles Standish. He settled on the old place in Southboro until 1799 when he removed to Marlboro where he died. His widow surviving him, dying at the age of 86 years.

He was selectman 1775, field driver 1787, constable 1791, had the title of Captain and was a soldier in the war of the Revolution.

Some records have it that his wife was born in 1757.

PETER FAY (141).

He resided in Southboro. Was surveyor 1784, assessor and overseer of the poor 1793, fence viewer 1794 and constable 1797.

He was in the Battle of Bennington, Aug. 16, 1777, and his gun, that he had in that battle was in the possession of his son, Dea. Peter Fay, Jr., of Southboro, in 1885. The barrel of the gun got so hot by firing that he had to hold it by the stock.

In "Historical Sketches of Southboro" by Peter Fay, Jr., the battle is thus described: As he was going into the fight there was a weakness in his knees and a faintness at the stomach, as the solid shot and grape whistled through the trees. The British fired so high that but few of our men were wounded. We were commanded not to fire till they got within short range, were ordered to march in double quick time, and the work of death soon commenced; and as a man was shot near by him he said it made him mad and all fear of death then passed away. We were victorious after a hard fight, but the hardest came afterwards, when reinforcements of a 1,000 fresh troops to the enemy came up. The Americans rallied all their forces and being fresh with victory went into the fight with a will. The battle lasted till dark. The first victory was the means of gaining the second. Our troops were about to give up when Col. Stark rode among them, encouraging them by saying, "Hold out, boys, fresh troops are coming. The victory will be ours."

Mr. Fay had a fund of information and was a man of wonderful memory.

TIMOTHY FAY (156).

He was a farmer. Resided on the old Turnpike, Hardwick, Mass. He was selectman 1848 and assessor 1855. He was also one of the original proprietors of the First Social Library in Hardwick, 1805, and was Librarian in 1845. In this library, it is said, there was but one book of pure fiction, viz.: "Vicar of Wakefield."

DANIEL FAY (157).

He was a soldier in the company of Capt. Samuel Dexter, Col. Larned's Regiment and was at Camp Roxbury, Jan., 1776. They were to have for their travel from and to home, one penny a mile. He was in the siege of Boston, in Washington's army in his retreat from N. Y., in the battle of White Plain, saw the surrender of Burgoyne, was a corporal in a company commanded by Capt. Edmund Hodges, one of the "minute men" who had already become Capt. of Militia, and was attached to the Regiment of Col. Job Cushing and served in the Northern Army from July 27 to Aug. 29, 1779.

He was a brick mason when living in Hardwick, afterwards a farmer. He removed to Bethel, Vt. He was assessed in the original tax, Jan. 30, 1776, on the North Side.

AARON FAY (161).

He and his brothers, Jedediah, Daniel, Jr., and Moses, filled with a spirit of loyalty and patriotic devotion to country, responded to the call for troops in defense of the colonies. Aaron's name appears on a description roll, age 19, height 5 feet 6 inches, complexion dark. He served in five campaigns in the War of the Revolution and acted as waiter to General and Mrs. Washington.

He moved from Hardwick to Barnard, Vt. His first purchase of land was 100 acres for $400.

On the 17th of June, 1815, he left Barnard, with most of his family and journeyed in two, two-horse wagons, to Ohio: arriving at Fort Avery July 30th, being 43 days on the journey. His family were the fourth family in Norwalk. They took up their abode in an old block house, which was unoccupied, here they remained until he built a log house.

He had been out of health for a number of years and in less than three months after his arrival in Ohio he died.

MOSES FAY (163).

He was a soldier, enlisting at the age of 16 in the Revolutionary army, but being thought too slender to bear arms and being active and sprightly he was taken into the family of General Washington (for whom he always retained a reverence bordering on adoration) and spent one year as groom to the General's parade horse, after which he shouldered his musket and engaged in active service to the close of the war. In 1781 his name appears on a descriptive roll as being 18 years old, 5 feet 7 inches in height and light complexion. He was in several skirmishes, in two of which he was wounded and once quite severely.

He would have been in the battle of Yorktown but for the neglect of calling him when the army to which he belonged marched for Pennsylvania to rescue Virginia from the incursions of Cornwallis. He was on picket guard about two miles from camp when the troops were called to march, and amid the hurry and excitement of the moment they neglected to call him in. He continued his weary round in momentary expectation of being relieved after the accustomed period of guard duty had expired.

The hours passed and no relief came. Knowing the duty of a soldier and the penalty of leaving his post he continued his lonely watch without food till the morning of the third day, when he was informed by a boy who chanced to pass the unfrequented place, that the army had marched for Virginia two days before. He was so nearly exhausted from loss of sleep and by hunger that he gave his silver sleeve buttons for half a dozen small cakes the boy had in his pockets. He started immediately to join his regiment, but was soon attacked by a fever which confined him until after the last great battle of the Revolution was fought. A sick stranger in a strange land. But though destitute and among strangers, the patriotism of the times, and the glorious cause in which he was engaged, procured him friends who nursed and took care of him until he was restored to health; when he joined his regiment as it returned triumphant from Virginia and was honorably discharged when the army was disbanded, receiving for three years' services the depreciated and worthless money which was paid to the soldiers.

He was destitute of any means of support and was thrown upon his own resources, and after working about at whatever he could find to do for several years, one of which was in the employ of the eccentric and wealthy Lord Timothy Dexter of Newburyport, he returned to Hardwick, Mass., where he was married. In 1778 he moved to Barnard, Vt., where he remained till 1827 when he moved to Rutland, Vt., where they resided with their daughter until their death.

In early life he was energetic and active, but the fifth year after he settled in Barnard he had the misfortune to have his leg crushed by the slipping of a tree from its stump and catching it, by which accident he was laid up for several months at the time of its occurence and more or less for fifteen or twenty years after. This greatly discouraged him and kept him always poor. He drew a pension for two or three years but was afterwards defrauded out of it.

JONATHAN FAY (172).

He settled first in Barnard, Vt., in 1800. He was a soldier, an aid to Gen. Wilkinson in the war of 1812. He removed to Marcellus, Onondaga Co., N. Y., and about 1803 or 1804 went to Saline, N. Y.

Martin Kellogg, whose wife was Polly Fay, a niece of Jonathan, says, "In the summer of 1815, when we were on our way to Ohio from Barnard, Vt., Jonathan Fay and his family were living in a locality called "Salt Point," N. Y. He was engaged in making salt, evaporating the water in iron kettles. We all stayed there a few days. Some thirty or forty years ago (written in 1885) Jonathan Fay and family left the state of N. Y. for Illinois. On their way they stopped at Milan, Ohio, a few weeks, he came to Bronson and visited some families he had known in Barnard; I attended him on his visits. After leaving here he died on the way before reaching the place intended. I have forgotten the place where the family settled."

Tradition has it that he died in Chicago on his way to the "Great West" and that his widow was in 1859 living in Squaw Grave, Illinois.

BENJAMIN FAY (178).

He was born at Hardwick, Mass. Married at Middlebury, Vt., sometime in the year of 1822 to Mrs. Harriet Smith, formerly Alvord.

Mr. Fay, when a child, was afflicted with a fever sore in his left hip which compelled him to use a crutch ever after. This contraction of his limb induced his parents to put him to the trade of a shoemaker as best suited to his abilities.

He settled in Rutland, Vt., about 1801, and in company with his old brother, David, carried on the tanning and shoemaking business extensively for a number of years, about two miles north of Rutland village. They afterwards sold out and both lived several years in West Rutland. Benjamin moved to Rutland village about the time or a little before his marriage, where he carried on his trade till after the death of his wife in 1844, when at the invitation of Dr. Crandall, who had married his wife's eldest daughter by her first husband, he removed to Gaysville, where he continued to work at his trade as much as his infirmities would allow till within a short time of his death in 1856. He died at the age of 76 years.

He was probably the most fleshy and jovial of any of the family, was a good singer and fond of comic songs, with which he often enlivened social companies.

BARNABAS FAY (390).

He was for many years a fuller of cloth and later in life a farmer. He was a soldier of the Revolution and crossed the Delaware river with Washington on the night of Dec. 25, 1776, also wintered at Valley Forge in 1777 and 1778. After his death his widow drew a pension.

Near the close of the century he removed to Lebanon, N. H., where they passed the remainder of their days. He was deacon in the first Congregational church in Lebanon and while occupying that position he embraced more liberal and enlarged views of the character of God, and of the extent of Salvation through Christ. He retained, at the request of his church, his office some four years after his change of faith. At length he resigned his office, preferring to make a more public avowal of his sentiments than to him appeared proper while he remained in office in a church where different views were inculcated. The last years of his life illustrated the hearty confidence and trust growing out of his religious faith. He died respected and lamented by his family and many friends.

He lived first in Belchertown and Greenwich, Mass., where five of his children were born and the last three were born in Lebanon, N. H.

CHARLES FAY (410).

He resided in Galway, Saratoga Co., N. Y. He left Hardwick, Mass., at an early day and went to Delaware Co., N. Y., and subsequently to Galway, where he appeared to have spent his days.

Though a farmer he was skilled as a draftsman and the readiness and precision with which he executed all contracts and agreements gave him considerable business in that line, as his neighbors and friends always resorted to him when they had any transactions which required his skill and judgment. His social powers gave him a controlling influence among his townsmen and his society was always sought on all public occasions. In his presence all chose to be listeners rather than speakers. His pleasantry and wit, his vivacity and sprightliness, his sympathy and genuine benevolence gained for him a reputation and gave him a hold upon society which but few man enjoy.

He was a member of the Methodist Church and died a faithful and exemplary member of that body of Christians. He was 77 years of age at the time of his death.

JOHN FAY (412).

He was born in Hardwick, Mass., and when he was a mere lad his father moved to Charlton, New York, and a few years later to Galway, N. Y. Long before John had arrived to his majority his family depended much upon him for aid and support. His early advantages were quite limited, but by perseverance and industry he acquired sufficient education to enable him to obtain a situation in a store which afforded him additional opportunities for improvement beyond any he had before possessed and which his natural talent and quickness of apprehension turned to the best account, so that in a few years he became so conversant with the business that he was enabled from his little savings and credit which his integrity of character had established for him, to commence business in a small way for himself.

He seems to have started early in life with the scriptural injunction impressed upon his mind that it was the duty of every man "to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow" and he followed it most faithfully to the end.

His wife was also a resident of Galway. He removed to Northampton, N. Y., with his small family in 1804, to a place called the Fish House in what is now Fulton Co., N. Y., where he resided until his death more than half a century later. There in a new and sparsely settled country he continued his mercantile pursuits connecting therewith as his means increased, farming, public house keeping, milling and manufacturing. He cleared his own farm and brought it under successful cultivation. He saw the forests recede before the tread of his neighbors and Kinsmen and witnessed the growth of as pleasant a little village as adorns the vales of New England, with its church, which he contributed largely to rear and to sustain, and in which, on occasions of public worship his seat was seldom vacant.

In this quiet vale on the banks of the Sacandaga he reared his family of ten children, and in the village churchyard lie his and his wife's remains. When he started business at the Fish House (so called from being a fishing station to which he often resorted) he endeavored to do all within himself as far a practicable by working early and late, and it is said that he used frequently (leaving his wife in charge of the store), at an early hour in the morning, to go on horseback to Albany, a distance of 42 miles, do his business there and return the same evening, so as to be absent from home only one business day.

On one of these trips to Albany, to dispose of a load of butter and potash, he called at the mansion of a prominent and wealthy merchant, with whom he traded, and enquired if he was in, the servant said, "Yes," but that he was engaged with a gentleman and did not know that he would see him, but that he would take in his name, which he did leaving the doors ajar so that the announcement was heard outside. "Mr. John Fay desires to see you." "Admit him" said the merchant, remarking to the gentleman present, "He, sir, is the man who has been the means of putting ruffles in my shirts," that being the customary style of dress in those days and the merchant's manner of expressing his estimation of Mr. Fay.

His discretion and natural good sense gave him position with his neighbors and friends, and his advice was sought to concert plans, and his time and means were liberally used in organizing, aiding and building up the varied civil and religious institutions incident to a new country.

He held the various town offices of clerk, justice of the peace, and supervisor for several years, also that of postmaster to the general government. He was also selected to represent the county in the state legislature and was a member in 1812, during the early discussions for appropriating means for constructing the "Grand Erie Canal." He was chosen to represent his district in the sixteenth congress of the United States and subsequently served as commissioner in the erection of the county buildings of his, then county of Montgomery, now Fulton.

After the death of his wife in 1826, and that of several other members of the family, being in impaired health himself, he retired from the area of public life. He seldom left home during the latter years of his life to go farther than Johnstown, the county seat of his county, except in 1844 when he visited Albany to discharge the duties of a presidential elector.

He was a gentleman of the old school, neat and tidy in his personal appearance, frugal in his habits, scrupulously exact in his dealings with all men and rigidly faithful to his promises and obligations. He often remarked that he did not know that he had ever wronged any one of a shilling. It seemed to be his ambition to pay an equivalent for everything received, and to so live and conduct his matters as not to be dependent upon others, and he had the good fortune to be able to carry out this cherished idea through the varied changes of life, and at its end, leave a small patrimony to his children.

He was a friend and sage counsellor to the aspirations of youth, kind and indulgent to the poor and needy, without ostentation and without pride, he was most truly a benefactor of his race.

The even tenor of his ways, as exhibited in his daily life and conduct, were productive of the happiest influences and promotive of a healthy moral tone to the society by which he was surrounded. Cherished by his neighbors, beloved by his friends, and deeply revered by his children, he passed the evening of his life in the quiet enjoyments and pursuits of his farm, and on the 21st of June, 1855, in the 83d year of his age, after an illness of only a few days, he was called to his home, not of earth, while those who witnessed the calm composure with which he met the grim messenger, death, with intellect bright, almost to the last moments of existence, were impressed with a deep conviction that a good man had departed.

CYRUS FAY (413).

He commenced business by learning a trade in Galway, N. Y., but soon after removed to Northampton, Fulton Co., N. Y., and engaged in mercantile business with his brother, John. The embargo of 1812 operated to the injury of their business and he retired from the firm, turning his attention to his trade and to farming, which he pursued during the active part of his life. Like most of the young men of that day and in the newly settled part of the country his opportunities for an early education were very limited, but he possessed natural powers of no ordinary character and with proper development would have raised him to eminence.

He was a man of decided opinions, of sterling integrity, and retiring modesty. He spent the active part of his life in Northampton where he died. His son, Alfred B., res. on the homestead in Northampton manufacturing sole-leather.

WILLIAM FAY (481).

He married the only daughter of Rev. Levi Lankton (who was educated at Yale College and was a soldier in the war of the Revolution). William Fay was a soldier in the war of 1812, stationed at Boston.

He removed from Westboro, Nov., 1835, to Marietta, Ohio, that his children might be better educated in the schools and college at that place. He was a man of strong mind, determined, and of deep earnest Christian principle, in which his wife was in full sympathy, and so judicious and consistent was their instruction and government that every one of their eleven children were active members of the Congregational Church.

JAMES FAY (482).

The following is from Miss M. J. Fay of Westboro, a daughter. "My father was most desirous for a college education, but his father, deeming it unnecessary for a farmer, would not consent. After he became of age he produced the means to attend Leicester Academy several terms. He was a man of sound sense and good executive ability. He early determined his children should have all the educational advantages it was in his power to bestow.

He married Jane Bates of Cohassett, daughter of Zealous Bates. Her ancester, Clement Bates, settled in Hingham from England in 1636. She was a sister of Joshua Bates, D. D., Pres. of Middlebury College at Middlebury, Vt., also for two years Chaplain for the House of Representatives at Washington, D. C. He was many years pastor of Dedham, also at Dudley where he died. She joined the Westboro Church by letter, June 28, 1818. People came from far and near to see Mother's tiny twins. James weighed four and one-half pounds and Jane three and one-half pounds when first dressed.

At the time of my father's marriage his father divided with him the home farm and a new house was built opposite the old homestead, which was our home till the last illness of my father. The same old pear tree which afforded fruit to my father in his childhood, afforded fruit also in our childhood for us. It was supposed to be 200 years old.

My father married the second time, Lydia Brome, widow of Rev. Otis

C. Whiton, and daughter of Capt. Benjamin Brome of Swanzey, N. H. She survived my father many years. Jan., 1859, she married Dr. Samuel Griggs of Westboro, who died in 1887, after which she resided in Claremont, N. H., where she died Apr. 9, 1894, in the 92d year of her age, well beloved and lamented by the children of her adoption.

HUBBARD NEWTON FAY (526).

He resided on the old homestead in East Alstead, N. H., where his children were born. Was an active member of the church and helped to bears its burdens and his family were at one time all members of the Alstead church. In 1870 he sold the old "Fay Farm" to his son-in-law, Deacon Solon D. Morrison, who, with his family, resided there until 1883 when it passed out of the family and Mr. Morrison removed to Saxton's River, Vt.

NATHAN FAY (592).

He was sheriff of Bennington, Vt., 1784, and was appointed, 1806, one of the committee on claims by the Governor and Council of Vermont. He was a drummer boy in the battle of Bennington. After the war he located in Richmond, Vt. He was a clothdresser by trade as was also his son, Nathan.

JOHN FAY (600).

His father having fallen in the battle of Bennington, Aug. 16, 1777, he was left fatherless at the age of nine years. His education, however, was not neglected and he entered Yale College, where he was in 1790 and graduated. He read law with Hon. Samuel Hitchcock of Burlington, Vt., and soon after opened an office in that place.

He was the first postmaster of Burlington? appointed by the government and became a great landholder and speculator in the early settlement of the state.

HEMAN ALLEN FAY (638).

He worked on a farm in Bershire, Vt., till 1800, when he was 20 years of age; his health failing he superintended his uncle David's farm in summer and taught school in winter. He entered West Point Academy as a cadet and graduated, 1808, with rank of 2d Lieutenant of Artillery and continued in the line of the army till 1815. He went into the Staff Department of the Quarter Master General as chief clerk of Northern Division in N. Y. City. Was appointed in 1817 Military Storekeeper at Albany, N. Y., and at the same time was agent of the Quarter Master's General Department which places he held till 1842.

He was the author of "Official Account of Battles of 1812-1815." In 1856 he removed to Bennington, Vt., and resided there until his death in 1865. He had a large family of children some of whom died young and their births are not reported.

In 1815 a Board of Officers was appointed to make selections from the army to constitute the military peace establishment, and by order of the President of the United States (Mr. Madison) none were to be retained who were not then able to take the field. Mr. Fay had been on the sick list for six months (and was ever after an invalid) and as no provision had been made in such cases for officers discharged, he felt aggrieved to be left out of service, 800 miles from his home, with a wife and child to support, crying for bread and none to give them. But the year after he was discharged from the line of the army he was appointed to the places above mentioned and was in the service from the Military School at West Point for thirty-five years. As an officer he was faithful and brave in the discharge of every duty and better qualified than those who superseded him.

He tells the following anecdote of himself and his twin brother, Ethan.

"I was born in Bennington, Vt., (my brother having come into this world about half an hour before me) on the 12th day of January, 1779, and the first food of which we ever partook, was "baked beans," that is, my father being a great lover of them, and having some warm in the oven, took a small bean, peeled off the outer skin, divided it, and taking half on the point of tea knives, put half in Ethan's mouth and half in Heman's, and, although I don't remember a word about it, we have both been (and are yet) dear lovers of good baked beans."

His twin brother, Ethan Allen Fay, was named after Col. Ethan Allen of Ticonderoga memory, and Heman Allen Fay was named after Capt. Heman Allen, brother to the Colonel.

SAMUEL FAY (755).

From the "Bennington Banner" of Jan. 14, 1864.

"The death of the venerable Samuel Fay, of Bennington, Vt., which occurred on the 25th of Dec. deserves, for many reasons, more than a passing notice. His great personal worth, which commanded the affection and respect of all who knew him, his advanced age, reaching almost the length of a century, his former valuable public services, the distinguished part which the family of which he was an honored representative, took in the early affairs of the town and state, connected with the historical fame of the ancient family residence in which he lived and died, all concur to make his decease an event justly entitled to special remembrance and record.

His funeral was attended the Sunday after his decease by a large circle of his acquaintances and friends at the house in which he died, the famous tavern house, built by his grandfather, Capt. Stephen Fay, and long known in the quaint and familiar language of early times as "Landlord Fay's," containing the room in which the "Council of Safety" held their meetings during the most stirring period of the war of the Revolution. An appropriate discourse was delivered by the Rev. Isaac Jennings, from Ps. 90:9, "We spend our years as a tale that is told." To which discourse this sketch is much indebted.

Samuel Fay, Esq., was in the 92d year of his age when he died, the oldest native inhabitant of the town. Wonderful have been the events which have passed before him during his prolonged life, and even those which have come under his personal observation, and in some of which he participated, are by no means unimportant. Born a subject of the King of Great Britain, he was in life at the beginning of our bloody revolutionary struggle and the day he was five years old, the 16th of Aug., 1777, was fought the battle of Bennington, of which he retained through life a clear recollection, remembering well the noise of the guns and the extraordinary confusion of the day. The scene of the execution of Redding was also fresh in his mind. He was in his sixth year when the first General Assembly of the state, which sat at Windsor in March, 1778, adjourned, as it is expressed in their Journal, "until the first Thursday of June next, to meet at the house of Capt. Stephen Fay, in Bennington, and when they met there and opened in form, and then continued their session in the meeting House."

He distinctly remembered Gov. Thomas Chittenden, Gen. Ethan Allen, Col. Seth Warner and other notables of the youthful days of Vermont. The leading spirits in the creation of our state government were all upon the stage of action during his time, performed their respective parts, and passing in review before him, took their departure. Of these he seemed a peculiar representative; and now that he is gone, they appear to recede farther from our view, and to be more dimly seen in the distance.

Samuel Fay inherited the old family Bible of his grandfather, which was in a good state of preservation in 1859, and was the main book of reference for the Vermont branch of the "Fay family." For some fifteen years he was in the mercantile business. He was eleven years old when the treaty of peace was made by which the independence of this country was acknowledged by the King of Great Britain, sixteen when the present constitution of the United States was formed; and when, during the first term of Washington's administration he became twenty-one, he was appointed a Deputy Sheriff under Gen. David Robinson, who was the second High Sheriff of Bennington County. This was in 1793 when Thomas Chittenden was Governor, Elijah Paine, Samuel Knight and Isaac Tichnor were judges of the Supreme Court. He held the office of Deputy, with the exception of two years, until 1811, when he was chosen high sheriff and was annually reelected for twelve succeeding years, until the year 1823, making 28 years' service in the sheriff department of the county, discharging his duties without the slightest complaint of neglect or malfeasance from any quarter. During this period the position of sheriff was made more important, and its duties greatly more arduous and responsible than at the present day. The laws allowing imprisonment for debt were then in full force and suites were some twenty or thirty times as numerous as they now are. Aside from the hazards that an officer incurred in the service of original writs, which were many, those in the collection of executions were very great. It was not uncommon for an officer to have fifty or more executions in his hands for collection at the same time, ranging in amount from $3 up to several hundred dollars. If a debtor did not satisfy an execution within its life of 60 days, it was the duty of the officer to commit him to jail, where he must remain until payment was made unless he took the poor debtor's oath, which could only be done after a probationary imprisonment of 20 days, subsequently reduced to six days. If the officer saw the debtor for a moment and then suffered him to go at large, he became liable for the debt unless he should afterwards within the life of the execution arrest and commit him to prison. The performance of the sheriff's duties to the acceptance of both creditor and debtor, without incurring loss to himself required a talent and skill which few men possessed. Mr. Fay was remarkably successful in the discharge of the varied duties of his position, while many of the sheriffs in most of the other counties in the state, either became insolvent from the want of proper diligence and care, or rendered themselves unpopular and even odious, by their harshness and severity. Mr. Fay, by his promptness and energy in the right place, and his uniform kindness and care for the interest and convenience of those against whom he held process, was enabled, through the long period of his service, to preserve the confidence and affectionate regard of all parties. Among the many hundreds of debtors whose bare word he took, to meet him at an appointed time, to relieve him from his official responsibility, such was the good feeling and kindness inspired, that instances of failure rarely occurred, and never to his services pecuniary loss. Few, if any, men in the state have ever performed the duties of so difficult and responsible a station, for so long a period of time, with such uniform success and with such entire appreciation of the public.

Since Mr. Fay ceased to be sheriff he has not often been out of the town, and for several years past he has been confined by age and decrepitude to his own house. His mental faculties, however, seemed to continue to the last in almost their original brightness. The unpretending dignity and courtesy with which he received the calls of visitors and the cordial greeting which he gave them, always made a pleasant and agreeable impression, and would rank him in the estimation of mere casual observers, as a favorable specimen of the old school gentlemen. Those who knew him well were fully assured that these pleasing outward qualities had their foundation and source in the natural goodness of his heart and his integrity of purpose.

Of him it may be truly said, that in all the affairs of life which his duty required him to perform, he acted his part worthily and well, and that his name now, after the lapse of more than 91 years, "enrolled upon the list of the dead, undefaced by any blot."

On his tombstone in the cemetery of Bennington are these words:—"His public and private life were estimable we cherish his memory," and in the same beautiful cemetery is inscribed another touching memorial of Ruth (Fassett) Fay:—"The beloved Christian consort of Samuel Fay, Esq.," and another, that of his son, Samuel R. Fay, who united with the church when he was 24 years of age:—"A marked example of Christian character."

Mr. Fay, in early life, married Ruth Fassett, daughter of Col. Benjamin Fassett, who died a few years before him. He had three sons, Samuel R., who died unmarried, Benjamin F., who for several years was a merchant, afterwards in the lumber business, and John, his youngest son, who was chorister of the church and was married on his death bed with his beloved choir around him.

COL. JOSEPH DEWEY FAY (763).

He graduated at Williams College, studied law in the office of Alexander Hamilton in New York City, and became one of the most eminent lawyers of his time. He was also an elegant classical writer and his talents were uniformly exerted in favor of suffering humanity. He wrote a series of letters for the press under the signature of "Howard" on the subject of imprisonment for debt which contributed largely to the abolition of that inhuman practice. When the corner stone of the monument to the martyrs of "Old Prison Ships" was laid at Brooklyn, N. Y., Apr. 13, 1808, with the most imposing civil and military display, Joseph D. Fay pronounced the oration. He was a great admirer of the drama and contributed several prologues to new plays, one of which was delivered at the Park Theatre on the production of the "Renegade," a tragedy written by Lieut. Greenville Cooper and Dr. William Grigg. Col. Fay (for his military position gave him that title) wielded a powerful pen in the Clintonian branch of the Democratic party, nor was he less at home in the lighter literature of the day as is evinced by the sketches entitled "The Little Genius" in the "N. Y. Mirror," which series was afterwards continued by his son, Theodore Sedgwick Fay. He was one of the first to recognize the dawning talents of Master John Howard Payne and wrote the address spoken by him on his first appearance at the Park Theatre. His law practice was extensive and lucrative. The Hon. Charles O. Conner was a favorite student in his law office and gave early indications of those abilities which raised him to the first rank among American lawyers. He died in the prime of life, aged 46 years.

To give a little variety to this narration we copy his Prologue to the "Renegade" which took well at the time.

"When first old Chaos heard the great command,
To heave up Ocean, air, the sky and land,
Forth from confusion orderly arrayed,
The vast variety of things displayed.
Mountains arose, and showed their misty heads,
Valleys descended to their lowly beds:
Fishes to swim, and birds on airy wings,
Rivers and lakes and beasts and creeping things;
The moon and stars awake to cheer the night,
And at the word the sun poured forth his light,
Then man and woman summoned by the call,
Appeared and smiled the glorious lords of all;
The passions came, the tender and the bold,
The male and female character to mould
To man proud hopes with courage to defy While Love and Pity beamed from woman's eye
The social pleasures mingled in the throng
With sculpture, painting, poetry and song
Gay Commerce weaved her flags, her sails unfurled
And dove-eyed science civilized the world.
To please, instruct and elevate the mind,
The sister Muses with the arts combined.
And of the shapes that live in fancy's page
Another sun appears, with other vales
Another commerce swells her mimic sails.

Heroes, long buried stalk the fields again
Renew their fights, and once more slay the slain.
Old wrinkled time retakes his steps anew,
And fallen empires rise again to view.
With such like a youthful bard essays
To conjure up the Knave of other days.
To paint his likeness for our hate and scorn
Who lived a hundred years ere we were born,
To raise our tears for bleeding love that's dead,
To weep for suffering virtue long since fled,
And through the magic lantern of his rhyme,
To cry out shadows of forgotten time.
Upon my soul! 'tis no such easy thing
To raise the ghosts of hero, Queen and King,
To wake dead virtue up, make old live new,
To bring the ancient worth to present view
And make us think and feel that all is true.
Since then ye fair, the task is very hard.
Let your sweet smiles support our trembling bard;
Ye critics; spare him from your tongue and quill;

SAMUEL BROOME FAY (769).

A brother of Col. Joseph D. Fay, was in the war of 1812 as a private in the 41st Regiment of Infantry in the United States army and served during the war and also for a period after the close of the war. He embarked in the cause of freedom in South America, was captured in the Chilian Brig of War Maypo, Oct. 17, 1818, was confined in the Spanish Castle of Callao, and was liberated after two years of confinement by the Viceroy of Peru at the intercession of the United States Frigate Macedonia. He was purser on board the Chilian ship of war, "O. Higgins," which was supposed to have been lost off Cape Horn about 1826, the year he is said to have been married.

HENRY AUGUSTUS FAY (770).

He went to the Moravian School at Nazareth, Pa., three or four years, then entered the law office of his brother, Col. Joseph D. Fay of New York City, where he read law, but being essentially literary, his attention was to a considerable degree diverted from the practice of his profession. He was a frequent contributor to the principal periodicals for many years. About 1834 he was Editor of the "Jeffersonian" a Democratic daily paper, he subsequently conducted the "Olio" and the "Pearl" (a ladies' paper) and the the "Washington Daily News," &c. In 1839 he published a Romance entitled "The Female Robinson Cruscoe." He died in 1849 in N. Y. City and was interred in Trinity Churchyard.

SAMUEL PRESCOTT PHILLIPS FAY (799).

Miss Anna Lillie, wife of Mr. Fay, was a sister of Major Lillie, one of Gen. Washington's staff. She was a lineal descendant of William and Anne Hutchinson who emigrated from England to Massachusetts about 1634.

Mr. Fay graduated at Harvard in the same class with Rev. William E. Channing, D. D., Rev. Joseph Tuckerman, Hon. Joseph Story, Hon Stephen Longfellow of Portland (father of the poet), Hon. Sidney Willard of Cambridge and Dr. Henry Gardner (father of Gov. Gardner).

Soon after his graduation he received a commission ac Captain in the American army and joined the forces under command of Gen. Hamilton, stationed at Oxford, Mass., where he remained in the service during the war with France, 1798 & 1799. He saw no active service, perhaps did garrison duty in the state. His military career, however, was of short duration. After the successful issue of the second mission to Europe sent to France by President Adams, the army was disbanded and Mr. Fay chose the profession of law. Having completed his course of legal studies and had been admitted to the bar, he opened an office in Cambridge where he soon acquired a high reputation as a successful lawyer; May 1, 1821 he was appointed Judge of Probate for Middlesex County, the duties of which office he discharged with unusual fidelity for 35 years, when in March, 1856, he was compelled to resign on account of the feeble state of his health.

He was an aid and a member of the Governor's Council in 1818 and 1819, and in 1820 he was a member of the convention for revising the Constitution of Massachusetts. In 1824 he was elected a member of the Board of Overseers of Harvard College, which office he held until the reorganization of the Board in 1852.

He was universally estemed and respected, and by his death the bar lost one of its most honorable and valued members.

JOSIAH FAY (875).

He was a wheelwright and lived in different parts of Vermont and New Hampshire until 1831 when he invented a machine known as Fay, Fisher & Co.'s tennoning Machine. He went into company with two of his wife's brothers and carried on the manufacture of these machines for many years in Lancaster, Mass.

His invalid daughter, writing from Lancaster, Jan. 2, 1884, says of herself. "Am sorry I have been obliged, from physical infirmity, to delay answering your letter so long. With an experience of ill health dating back nearly 40 years, confined almost entirely to a recumbent posture, you will not be surprised that my nerves are not always in working order. I have indeed a Christian's hope to sustain me and knowing 'all was for the best' I have never seen the time that I wished to change my lot with any other."

The above few lines, written by one who seldom knew what it was to be free from bodily pain, reveals to us the richness of that trust and hope in our Father above, which may well challenge our admiration and awake in all our hearts a desire to have our treasure laid up in heaven.

MARK FAY (877) See Page 165.

HEPZIBETH FAY (881).

She married Calvin Clisbee, a carpenter. Resided in Marlboro and Grafton. They had two sons in the Civil War, Julius Augustus and Harrison Joseph. They enlisted in the 15th Regt. Mass. Vols. Co. G.

Harrison J. was shot through the head in the battle of Antietam. Julius A. was in the hospital at that time, but they were both in all the battles on the Peninsula in the 7 days fight and at Fair Oaks. J. A. was discharged Dec. 9, 1862. He was corporal and was commissioned 1st Lieut. by Gov. Andrew but did not serve. H. J. served as a private.

JULIUS AUGUSTUS (884).

He was a graduate of Williams College of the class of 1833. Until the war of the Rebellion he was a classical teacher in Elizabeth, New Jersey. He opened a select school in Baltimore, Md., and taught there a number of years. When the war broke out he went to Washington where he was employed in different departments of the government until 1870, when he retired to his estate in Elizabeth, N. J., where he died in 1887.

DEA. PETER FAY (904).

He has often served as selectman, assessor, administrator of estates, guardian of minors, overseer of the poor several years in Southboro. He represented the town in the General Court in 1844, and for years has been a leading and esteemed citizen. In discussing lately (1888) about trimming trees, said he had trimmed trees every month in the year, but thought early June the best time, as wounds then heal readily. "The next best is in November. March is the worst month as the wounds bleed and the bark under them often rots. The orchardist had better sit in his house, read agricultural papers and books, than to trim fruit trees in March." He compiled a "Brief history of the early settlers of the town of Southboro," and the principal men who occupied places of honor and trust during the first 50 years after the town was incorporated in 1727. At another time he was to take up the local history of the town for the next 50 years up to the year 1827. These reminiscences were published and were very interesting and instructive.

He closed up the first 50 years' history with these words, "In regard to property, the Fays have generally been quite successful. The family arrived at their zenith of numbers and wealth about 50 years ago, they were worth then more than one half of the town of Southboro, including the real and personal estate. But it is just as true now as it was in the days of Solomon "that one heapeth up and another scattereth." The name and the property is on the wane."

Dea. Peter Fay's advice to young men: "If you wish to ascend, begin at the bottom of the ladder; to descend, begin at the top. It is not what people eat, but what they digest, that makes them strong. It is not what they gain, but what they save, that makes them rich. It is not what they read, but what they remember, that makes them learned. It is not what they profess, but what they practice, that makes them good."

POLLY FAY (967).

She married Martin Kellogg, who was born in Bethel, Vt., Sept. 21, 1786. He died in Bronson Township, Ohio, Aug. 17, 1892, nearly 106 years of age. She was born in Barnard, Vt., July 12, 1787 and died Apr. 1, 1866, nearly 79 years old. Their united ages being over 184 years, averaging 92 years each. He went from Bethel, Vt., when 20 years of age to teach school in Barnard. He emigrated to Huron Co., Ohio, 1815, with his wife and family of four children, eight more being added to them in Ohio, making twelve children in all, most of whom have families. There were 12 children, 31 grandchildren, 62 great grandchildren, and 13 or more great great grandchildren, a total of 118 descendants of Polly Fay.

In a letter from him, dated Norwalk, O., Mar. 10, 1885, he says, "At my age, nearly 6 months in my 99th year, with memory, health, sight and hearing greatly impaired, it is difficult for me to write, you will be willing to allow something for old age as I am trying to make these marks without spectacles." His centennial birthday was celebrated Sept. 21, 1886, at his home in Bronson township near Norwalk, when 1,500 persons assembled on the happy occasion. Speeches from abroad, letters read, a band of music, and a grand time was enjoyed by young and old.

Mr. Kellogg at this time (1887) was living with his youngest daughter, Harriet, who married Linnaes Thayer, a farmer. They are very kind and take good care of the "Old Grandpa" as he is familiarly called by all his relatives and friends. His children never heard him speak a cross word or knew him to lose perfect control of his temper. He has never used tobacco in any form, nor drank alcoholic liquors of any kind, never had a twinge of rheumatic pain and cares for himself as far as he can. He is noted as a conversationalist and no one could sit by his side and converse with him without a feeling of reverence for the good old man whose life has blessed the world so largely.

His home was the resort of the ministers of his church when in attendance at conventions, etc., and if any work, that required a man of more than ordinary ability to do it was to be done, he was always ready to do it, and those who had such work to be done could always rely upon its being done well if "Brother Kellogg" took it in hand. His ready wit was enjoyed by all, and the purity of his motives, the consistency of his life and the deep interest he manifested in everything around him will ever be remembered and cherished by his friends.

The "Christian Leader" of Boston, Mar. 1, 1888 speaks of him as follows: "Forty years ago, when about 60 years of age, Mr. Kellogg was a veteran leader among our laymen and his companionship was coveted by our ministers. He was a regular attendant at our conventions, associations, discussions, dedications and ordinations. He was a passionate admirer of "Taylor's Natural History of Enthusiasm," a book which it is no pastime to master, yet it would hold him for hours of consecutive reading. He was deeply interested in our cause and denomination which he has honored with

March 10, 1887, a letter was received from him, which was written in a plain hand and without glasses. (In July, 1877, I had the pleasure of a night at his hospitable home and of looking, for the first time, upon a man who was over 100 years of age. O. P. Fay).

a life as faultless as it has proved to be prolonged. "He has been for an ordinary life time familiarly called 'Father Kellogg.'"

With unusual ability he was a leader among men. He is two years older than the state of Ohio and 40,000,000 of people have found homes beyond the Ohio river since he was born.

His son, Lyman Kellogg, was in the army nearly two years and was under Gen. Sherman in his march from Chattanooga to Atlanta, which was a four months' march. While at Atlanta he was laid up with rheumatism and was sent back to Chattanooga and from thence to Dalton, Georgia.

DR. LYMAN FAY (973).

He began to study medicine with Dr. Joseph Winslow, Mar. 21, 1808, and continued until Dec. 21, 1808, then taught school 10 weeks in Bridgewater, Vt. He was with Dr. Winslow again from Mar., 1809, till Sept., 1809. Then went to Randolph Academy, studied Latin seven weeks, then taught school in Barnard three months. Went to Randolph again, studied logic and astronomy five weeks and again was with Dr. Winslow from May 1, 1810 to Dec. 10, 1810. Then taught school in Windsor, Vt. three months. Next lived with Dr. Dennison from Apr., 1811 to Dec., 1811. Then again, Mar. 7, 1812. In Oct., 1812, went to Royalton, Vt., Nov. 5, 1812 began to keep his own horse. Mar. 10, 1813, initiated into Rising Home Lodge of F. & A. Masons of Royalton. Jan. 1, 1815, left Royalton and removed to Fort Avery on the Huron River, Milan Township, Ohio His brother, Anson, was also a physician and lived and died in Fulton, N. Y.

EDWIN FAY (981).

He was early noted for an unusual fondness for study and an aversion to labor, so that he was often punished when not more than ten years old for being found hid away with a book, and refusing to answer when he was called to go to work on the farm. Such was his desire to learn that the few months schooling he had every winter was ardently improved and would have been extended if his father's financial condition would have permitted. At school he was generally at the head of his classes and a leader among the boys.

In the Spring of 1809 his father, anxious to give him the best opportunities he could to acquire knowledge, sent him at that early age to Montreal, Canada, to learn the printing business in the office of the "Canadian Courant," published by Nahum Moore, and in June of that year he was passenger from Burlington, Vt., to St. Johns on the first trip of the first steamboat ever built on Lake Champlain. But after a service of six or seven months he was taken by his friends from his master in consequence of cruel treatment and by them placed with a bookbinder till the next summer when he returned home and in the ensuing winter went to Cambridgeport to continue the bookbinding business, but his Uncle, the late Professor Hedge of Cambridge, finding he was not in a very good situation, proposed to take him and send him to college on the condition that he should pay him for money advanced when his education was completed. and he should earn it. This offer was joyfully accepted, and in Oct., 1811, he commenced preparing for college, which he entered in Aug., 1813, and was graduated in 1817. After leaving college he taught first at Elkton, Maryland, then two years in Sparta, Georgia, and in the spring of 1820, moved to the then new State of Alabama and settled as the first lawyer and teacher in the county of Autauga, where he has resided most of the time since, spending nearly 42 years of his life in the school room. The only offices held by him were Justice of the Peace and Clerk of the County Court, from which, and his profession of the law, he is usually addressed as Esq. He has been a Ruling Elder of the Presbyterian church nearly 30 years. His wife was also a teacher, near Utica, N. Y. Two of his sons were graduates of college, one, Edwin Hedge, at Harvard, and William Henry, at Oglethrope University, Ga., while his youngest son was a farmer. Esq. Fay owned a large plantation and had forty or fifty slaves whom he treated very kindly.

Edwin Hedge Fay graduated from Harvard College 1852. Was a successful teacher for several years in Alabama & Louisiana, and was in 1860 connected with his father-in-law, William Shields, Esq., of Winden, Claiborn Parish, La., in the manufacture of Cotton Gins and Corn Mills.

AUSTIN W. FAY (1047).

He joined an Illinois Regiment of Volunteers and served in the Mexican War. Being on the sick list, he was on his way to the nearest hospital, in an ambulance, when he was attacked by a band of guerillas, who, in the most brutal manner put him to death, gouging out his eyes, hacking off his limbs and otherwise mangling his body. He was killed in 1849.

The captain of his company, in writing of this brutal outrage and murder says, "His appearance created the greatest horror among his comrades when his remains were brought in. The Mexican Guerillas with their swords had gouged out his eyes, hacked off his arms and legs, mutilated and mangled his body as only such brutal wretches are capable of doing."

WILLIAM WALLACE FAY (1072).

He was born in Rutland, Vt., July 1, 1827, removed to Alabama in 1842, lived with and was educated by his cousin, Edwin Fay at Evergreen and Rocky Mount. He spent several years in teaching school in Prattville and other places, and has since held the position of bookkeeper, and afterwards was agent of the Prattville Manufacturing Company.

His wife was a daughter of the Hon. William Graham of Autauga, Treasurer of the State of Alabama. He was an Elder in the Presbyterian Church for many years.

JOSEPH PACKARD FAY (1125).

Obituary, "Another of the worthy members of our faith (Universalist) has departed, Brother Joseph P. Fay of Concord, N. H., at the ripe age of 80 years. He has been long and well known to many of our ministers and laymen in New Hampshire and elsewhere. Born in Hardwick, Mass., he removed to Lebanon, N. H., where he resided until he went to Concord in 1843. While in Lebanon he was one of the true and faithful supporters of the Universalist Society there and a firm and true friend of Rev. John Moore during his ministry until the infirmities of age in later years increased upon him. He was a man highly esteemed by all who knew him. He was honest, upright and of purest intentions, a lover of home, tenderly and faithfully devoted to its interests. He lived with his late worthy companion to share the joys of a Golden Wedding occasion with a large company of kindred friends.

Genial and companionable he was always a favorite with the young, as with the older members of the family and acquaintances. In his religious belief he was a Universalist, clear minded in his convicitions and manifesting the spirit of this faith in his daily walk and conversation. He leaves a family of eight children, one of whom is Rev. C. H. Fay, of Brooklyn, N. Y."

JOHN DOANE FAY (1250).

The Hon. John D. Fay passed away early Thursday morning, June 6, 1895, at his residence in Rochester, N. Y., on South Washington Street, where he had lived 35 years. He was born at Northampton, N. Y., Apr. 20, 1815, and was a little over four score years of age at his death. He was the oldest son of the Hon. John Fay, who was a prominent and influential man of those times, repeatedly filling positions of trust among them, member of Assembly and member of Congress. The father's upright character, great ability and fine personal appearance, were inherited by his son, John D. Fay, who early made surveying his choice of a profession. He made the first survey of the direct line of the N. Y. Central R. R. from Rochester to Syracuse, and was connected with many important railroad enterprises. In about 1845 he went to Lockport, N. Y., and a little later to Rochester, where he has been a resident of the third ward for 50 years. The canal was the cause of his coming to this city, and he most satisfactorily discharged the duties of resident and division engineer and canal commissioner. He was also nominated state surveyor. During his connection with the canal, it was widened, the locks at Lockport changed, and the aqueduct of this city deepened. Upon his retiring from the office of Canal Commissioner in 1873, his associates presented him with a solid silver tablet, with the following engraved upon it: "Hon. John D. Fay, Canal Commissioner, Dear Sir: Desirous of showing at the close of your official term our high appreciation of your efficiency as a public officer, and worth as a citizen, also of acknowledging our obligations for your ever kind and courteous bearing towards us, not forgetting that by your sound common sense, skill and ability, our duties have been made comparatively easy and pleasing, while the public interest has been thereby enhanced; we therefore most respectfully dedicate to you this tablet as a testimonial of our high appreciation and heartfelt respect, and wishing you a long and prosperous life, truly subscribe ourselves your friends."

He had charge of the Western Division of the N. Y. State Canals, and with two exceptions was longer in the employment of the State than any engineer now (1860) living. During the years 1850 and 1851 he was engaged with Mr. O. W. Childs, who were sent at the head of a large surveying party by Commodore Vanderbilt to make a survey for an inter-oceanic ship canal across the state of Nicaragua in Central America, under the auspices of a New York Company. The present canal following almost their survey. While the route then explored and delineated on maps subsequently furnished to the company is the best yet discovered, those engaged in the survey feel a pride and satisfaction in its successful accomplishment, notwithstanding the severe privations they endured, incident to a remote and sparsely populated country and one but little known to the white man previous to this undertaking.

Mr. Fay was also with Mr. William Hollister engaged in an extensive lumber business which they conducted sucessfully until 1865 when the great flood swept nearly all away. Mr. Fay then entered the coal business which ended his active career. There are few such men.

In almost fifty years of married life, Mrs. Fay never saw him cross. Not only was he even tempered, but of exceptional mental endowments, commanding the respect and admiration of all with whom he came in contact. Some of the most prominent men of the state were his intimate friends, yet he was equally considerate of those in more humble walks of life. A wife and son, Stephen C. Fay of Rochester, are left to mourn the irreparable loss of a devoted husband and father. He also leaves two brothers, Charles of Northampton, N. Y. and Hiram of Independence, Iowa.

REV. LEVI LANKTON FAY (1343.)

He went from Westboro, Mass., in 1835 to Marietta, Ohio, and began to study for the ministry in Marietta College and preparatory schools. He graduated in 1840. Went to Lane Seminary which was then taught by Dr. Lyman Beecher, Professor Calvin Stow and Prof. D. H. Allen. He graduated from there in 1843 and entered the Home Missionary service among the rough hills and valleys of Southern Ohio at Moss Run, where he remained as a Home Missionary over fifty years.

The following are extracts from letters written by him in 1883 and 1884.

"It will do us all good to know more what God has done for us in giving to us an honorable, pious ancestry whose good influence still pervades the majority of the great "Fay family" and I am glad to aid you in your difficult work of searching out the history of the Fay race.

"I was glad to learn a little of yourself and family, and where to place you in "Our family," and, although in the far off list of cousins, we cannot but feel the throb of Fay sympathy and affection that has come down to us through our noble ancestry. We cannot but be inspired to say, 'Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in 'Kindred' love, as well as Christian love.'

"I hope you will be successful in giving a good Fay history. I think I should prize such a book. I hope you are a Fay that believes in the doctrine of "perseverance" and you will surely succeed. I remember the time when nine of my grandfather's children had a family meeting at the old homestead on the "Fay farm," and all of them were over sixty years of age. A truly religious race is a healthy race."

"When I was nine years old I lived one year with my grandfather, Rev. Levi Lankton (I was named for him) in East Alstead, N. H. He was pastor of the Congregationalist Church there for nearly fifty years. I have thought Chloe Lankton was a distant relative. She was a noble Christian woman although blind and afflicted."

"I remember when I was going to the district school in Westboro I was the oldest of ten children, brothers and sisters, that I guarded, and I could count twenty-seven Fays out of the thirty-seven scholars who attended that school. This part of Mass. was the headquarters of the 'Fay Family.'"

"From 1724 to 1841 there were nearly 70 members of the first Congregational Church in Westboro who bore the 'Fay name.' John Fay being the first deacon. This will show something of what our family have been in the past and that as they have gone forth in every direction of our country to keep up the name and to advance the cause of morality and religion with but few exceptions to my knowledge."

Mr. Fay was ordained and installed at Moss Run, Ohio, in 1844, and labored there and in the neighboring churches until his death in 1894. His parish included Lawrence, Cornerville, Stanleyville and Cedar Narrows. He was active in the organization of a church in each of these places. The circuit of his field of labor extended some thirty miles, preaching in log houses and visiting from house to house. He won the respect of all who knew him as an upright, earnest, Christian man, a good specimen of a faithful gospel minister, a man who gave himself "wholly to these things."

Through his influence a large number of young men were led to seek a collegiate education. He died at 80 years of age, loved and mourned by old and young.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER FAY (1349).

He was a noble Puritan. Was Deacon for many years of the 1st Congregational Church in Marietta, Ohio, and afterwards in Springfield, Ohio, he served in the same office in the 1st Congregational Church until his death in 1892.

His minister bore witness "to his stalwart manliness, to his transparent integrity, and to his whole manner of life as husband, brother, citizen and Christian."

REV. SOLOMON PAYSON FAY (1350).

He was born in Westboro, June 21, 1820. In his youth the family moved to Marietta, Ohio, and he graduated at Marietta College in 1844, and at Andover Theological Seminary in 1847. He was ordained pastor of the Congregational Church in Hampton, N. H., Sept. 6, 1849, and remained there as pastor until 1854 when he became pastor of the Congregational Church in Dayton, Ohio. In 1859 he returned East and was for a time agent for the American Tract Society. In 1861 he became pastor of the First Congregational Church in Fall River, Mass. In 1863 he removed to Boston and for two years was acting pastor of the Salem St. Congregational Church. In 1866 he accepted a call to the Hammond St. Congregational Church in Bangor, Maine, and remained there thirteen years. In 1881 he was settled over the village church at Dorchester, Mass., and was its pastor in 1896.

CATHARINE AMELIA FAY (1351).

She is the daughter of William and Elizabeth Crane (Lankton) Fay. Was born in Westboro, July 18, 1822, and is a sister of Rev. Levi and Rev. Solomon Fay. She was, for ten years, a Missionary of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions to the Choctaw Indians. When she was compelled to give up her missionary labors she took up the work of Public Children's Homes. This plan she worked out and fostered until she saw it put through the Ohio Legislature and now the "Children's Homes" in each county is a recognized institution as much as the County House. She was the real originator and mother of that system.

She writes, "God has never blessed us with any children of our own but we have always had children living with us." This shows the benevolence of her heart and the motherly yearning for the welfare of the little ones. She is now (1895) still living in active usefulness in Marietta, Ohio. She d. Apr. 3, 1897.

JAMES EDWARDS FAY (1359).

He fitted for college at Thetford Academy, Vt. Graduated from Williams College in the class of 1856, a classmate of President Garfield. Studied law (after a few terms of teaching) with Judge Chapman of Springfield, afterwards graduated at Harvard Law School. He united with the Westboro Church, Sept. 1, 1855. After graduating he was for a short time in the law office of Hon. William Windom in Winona, Minn. About 1860 he entered upon the practice of Law in Chicago, Ill. He has been for many years an Elder in the 8th Presbyterian Church of Chicago. He married Julia Anna Bush, daughter of Wingate Bush. The Bush family were found in Marlboro as early as 1690. Mrs. Fay was educated in a young ladies' seminary in Springfield, and was a teacher before her marriage.

Their son, Benjamin Wingate Fay, graduated from the Chicago High School and is engaged in the printing business in Chicago.

GEORGE WHITFIELD FAY (1367).

"He fitted for college at Thetford Academy, Vermont, and graduated from Williams College in the class of 1857. A severe illness during his college life so undermined his constitution that he abandoned the thought of studying Theology, which had been his purpose. After a winter in Alabama, spent in teaching, he studied medicine and graduated from the School of Baltimore, where he resided and practised during his life. He acted as surgeon at the Patterson Park Hospital during the War of the Rebellion and was for some years the physician of the Baltimore City Dispensary. He made for himself a good reputation as a surgeon. He united with the Westboro Church, June 7, 1849. Was for many years Elder in the 2d Presbyterian Church of Baltimore. He was very fond of the natural sciences and was once urged to take a college professorship. Dr. George W. Fay died May 2, 1872, in the 40th year of his age, at Savannah, Ga., on his return from a winter in Florida, in search of health. His disease was consumption."

BENJAMIN BATES FAY (1369).

"He assisted his father on the farm till the time of his father's death. Was educated at Wilbraham and East Hampton. United with the Westboro Church, Oct. 11, 1850. He engaged in mercantile business, first in Hopkinton, Mass., afterwards in Dubuque, Iowa, and after the great fire in Chicago removed there for business.

ELLEN TOWNE HATCH (1379).

She was married Aug. 20, 1856 to Hon. William Windom, who died suddenly in New York City, Jan. 29, 1891, after delivering an address before the Board of Trade at a public meeting. The following are extracts from the memorial sermon at the funeral service in Washington, D. C., by the pastor, Rev. Teunis S. Hamlin, D. D.

"A gentleman of charming affability, of unfailing courtesy, of quiet dignity, of beautiful refinement; a lawyer of wide reading and marked talent; a legislator of unwearying industry, and of undaunted courage; a cabinet officer of broad views, of sound policies, of abundant aggressiveness, joined to safe conservatism; a man of unsullied integrity; a citizen of unflinching patriotism; a friend, husband, father, of tenderest, manliest love; a Christian of sturdy faith, sincere humility, unostentatious piety—such was Mr. Windom. He was born in Ohio. His parents were devout and godly Quakers. His early training was moral and religious. He was familiar in his youth with the hardships and privations of pioneer farm life. He studied law and was admitted to the bar when but 23 years of age, and practiced law in Mt. Vernon, Ohio, for two years when he was elected prosecuting attorney for the county by a majority of 300, which meant a change of 1,300 votes, a striking presage of the popularity that was always thenceforward to attend him.

In 1855 he removed to Winona, Minn., and after four years was elected to the 36th Congress, and re-elected four times, after which he declined further candidacy. These 10 years in Congress covered the periods of the Civil War and of reconstruction, in all those great movements and measures he was prominent and influential. Four months after his fifth term in Congress, he was appointed a senator to fill a vacancy and was twice elected to the same office, thus serving nearly 13 years on important committees. In 1876 he was Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, the herculean labors of which he patiently and successfully performed. President Garfield called him to the Portfolio of the Treasury, but he resigned after the accession of Gen. Arthur to the Presidency. He was also Secretary of the Treasury under President Harrison and died holding that important position.

Mr. Windom was not a statesman of the spectacular school but he always dared to do the thing he saw to be right; he always believed that in the end the right thing would receive the endorsement of the country that he loved so dearly and served with such incorruptible patriotism. He was as courteous to the messengers and laborers in the Treasury as to his fellow-officers in the Cabinet. His character was as simple, as transparent as a child's, and everybody was his friend, and even those who were his political opponents paid the highest tribute to his memory. His plea for sound currency and honest finances on the evening of his death was clear, far-sighted and statesmanlike.

The House of Representatives, the Senate, the Cabinet, these are all great places, and Mr. Windom did great work in them all.

Still the man outweighs the statesman, turn we then from his public service to his private life. His handsome face, his majestic head, his noble form, his beautiful smile, his genial greeting, attracted all eyes and won all hearts. Display, pretense, ambition to outshine all others, were simply alien to his nature. What wonder that everybody loved him, that all in this city, in his State—indeed, in all the land where he had ever been—only the kindest thoughts are entertained, the kindest words spoken about him.

So honest that after a public life of 30 years he leaves behind only a modest fortune; so just that in the tremendous pressure for official appointments at his disposal, no applicant, however disappointed, ever felt himself wronged. So patient that in all that furious struggle his closest and most constant observer testifies that he never saw him ruffled. So loyal to duty that he has been working on these last months regardless of known peril to life. So kind that 35 years of domestic life have left behind nothing his family would have erased or changed. Gentle, yet manly; firm in principle but always open to conviction; ever approachable, yet ever dignified; courageous, but not rash; progressive, but wisely conservative; with settled opinions, yet never consorious of those that differed from him; open-eyed, clean-handed, pure-minded; a man to be admired, esteemed, trusted, loved.

Mr. Windom stood for purity in political life. He was sharply criticized, as all public men are, but no scandal ever clung to him. When defeated for re-election to the Senate, he said to a friend: "Well, I have lost my place, but I have kept a clear conscience, and that is better than office." He stood for all moral reforms. The people knew exactly where to find him on every such question. He had long felt that something decisive must be done to check the audacious agressions of the saloons, which he antagonized without a moments thought of its effect upon his political fortunes, as he stood firmly to his last hour, and spoke with his last breath, against the importunate demand for unlimited coinage of silver. This unfaltering conscientiousness won him the warm regard of the people, without distinction of party; and since the night of his death, men of all shades of political opinion have vied with each other in laying on his bier their tributes of perfect confidence in his integrity.

But, best of all, he was a Christian; an avowed, aggressive, consistent Christian, whether practicing law in a Minnesota village, or sitting in the Senate of the United States, or administering the nation's finances at the head of the Treasury. He found nothing in locality, or position, or office that made it impracticable to be an outspoken follower of Jesus Christ. He found nothing in this city, that prevented his living up to the principles that had proved right and wise in less conspicuous places and in humbler spheres. In a conversation with him, a few years ago, it turned upon Sabbath observance, he defined his own custom of regular Church attendance and of spending the rest of the day quietly at home. He said: "You cannot imagine the pressure brought upon us here to abandon our principles and habits, but I stand firm. I have never accepted an invitation to dine on Sunday, and I never shall accept one." This was from no narrow Puritanical notion about the Lord's day, nor from any tradition of his childhood; it was a free, final determination of his mature life. The basis of it he thus expressed to another: "The world crowds me hard six days in the week; I cannot afford to let it have this one, I do not know how it is with others, but for myself I need this rest from worldly care, and the opportunity to turn my thoughts to themes which the occupations of the week disallow."

At a reception given to a large body of returning delegates from the National Convention at St. Louis of the Christian Endeavor Societies, a message was wanted for these young people from Mr. Windom. He said: "My official duties tax my strength to the utmost, I come from my office at night too weary to read my evening papers. But I do not believe it is right for a Christian man to work so hard that he is incapacitated for his religious duties. I will come because I know I ought to do it." He came and spoke such wise and loving words of counsel as cheered and strengthened many hearts.

What wonder that a lady who had been a guest at his hospitable home, said in parting: "Good-bye, Mr. Windom; I am a better woman for having known you these three days." Another guest said: "His prayers at the family altar were so tender and pleading that I could not restrain my tears." What wonder that one of the most eminent jurists of the land after more than 50 years of public life, and an almost unequalled acquaintance with eminent men, said of him: "I have known Mr. Windom well for more than 20 years, and he was the most consistent Christian I have ever known in public life." Nor was this Christian living any matter of superficial emotion, or of the compulsion of mere habit. He was a genuinely humble, devout, unostentatious follower of Jesus Christ. The foundations of his piety lay deep and strong. About a year ago, conversation leading in this direction, he said to his wife: "Lest I might go, and leave you without an opportunity to say this then, I want you to have the comfort of knowing that if I were to die today it would be in the sure and certain hope of a blessed immortality. That hope is based not on any worthiness of mine, but solely on my abiding trust in the living Redeemer."

The debt of gratitude we owe our departed friend is large and varied. For a steady influence in favor of sure and wise legislation through 23 years; for ready voice in behalf of every reform; for escape from financial disaster on more than one occasion, we are all his debtors, but most for the quiet, unheralded demonstration that no official place, how heavy soever its burdens, need prevent one from being an avowed, consistent Christian. That such a life should end nobly on earth is only natural and fitting. To disregard, upon the simple sense of duty, the sharp and repeated warnings of a mortal disease; to deliver to leading and representative business men of the metropolis that masterful speech which summed up his knowledge and his principles of finance; to know that he had carried his auditors' minds and hearts, and to feel the thrill of a supreme hour in a matured life; and then, within two minutes of uttering the last word, while the applause is still ringing in his ears, to pass beyond earth's vexed problems into the peace and joy of immortality—this is not death; this is translation!" The chariot of Israel and the horseman thereof!"

What a heritage, not only for the nation that mourns today, but for the household that mourns with a nearer and deeper sense of loss! To have partaken of a life so pure, so useful, so beautiful; to have only bright and sweet memories of every day; to have no awful questions about that life's blissful continuance beyond the veil; all this means grief for an irreparable loss, but no murmuring, no despair. It means the right to take the fullest comfort from every promise of God; to look away from the tomb into the open heavens.

Patriot, legislator, statesman, loyal citizen, kind neighbor, faithful friend, tender husband, loving father, true man, devout Christian; "until the day break, and the shadows flee away"—hail and farewell!

ALBERT NATHAN FAY (1483).

Son of John M. and Mary E. Fay, died Jan. 25, 1860, aged 22 years. He had been residing in Keene, N. H., for the last fourteen months before his last sickness, engaged in the jewelry and fancy goods business, where he had gained the love and entire confidence of those with whom he was connected in business.

In Aug., 1859, he came to his father's where he was detained six weeks by inflammatory fever, which left him as it found him with a severe cough, but being an ambitious, energetic character, he returned to his business at Keene, but was only able to stay about six weeks, when he again returned to his home, this time to die. He took his bed the next day after he reached home to which he was confined (except a few days when he was able to sit up for a few moments at a time) for three months and a half during which time his sufferings were very severe. During the last few weeks of his life he was very happy in the prospect of soon crossing the "dark river" and entering the bright mansions of his Redeemer. He felt that it would be sweet to exchange this burden of sin and suffering and to behold the beauties which "eye hath not seen nor ear heard" to dwell forever in the presence of his loving Father.

His last words were, "Don't weep 'tis God who has done it and it is well!"

His loss was not only mourned by his parents, brothers and sisters, but by a large circle of relatives and acquaintances, to whom he had endeared himself by his loving and affectionate disposition.

Dearest Brother thou hast left us,
    Here thy loss we deeply feel,
But 'tis God who hast bereft us,
    He can all our sorrows heal.

He was very much interested in the genealogy of the "Fay family," even when confined by sickness. He died of consumption.

BLENDENA MILLER MATHEWS (1499).

Daughter of David Mathews, married John Hicok, Aug. 14. 1867. He was born in Homer Cortland Co., N. Y., Mar. 25, 1844. He attended college in his native town, and in 1861 entered Hamilton College at Clinton, N. Y., taking the classical course and graduating in 1865 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Three years later he was further honored by having the Degree of Master of Arts conferred upon him. After leaving college he studied law and in 1879 he removed to Flint, Mich., and entered the law office of Long & Gould. He was admitted to the bar of Genesee Co., the first year of his residence in Flint, and engaged in the practice of his profession until April, 1895, when he took the office of Postmaster, appointed by President Cleveland, discharging his duties in a capable and acceptable manner. In 1884 he was appointed City Attorney and subsequently held the office of City Clerk, and was also Secretary of the Genesee Co. Agricultural Society, serving from 1881 until Jan. 1, 1891. He took an active interest in matters pertaining to agriculture.

Prior to his residing in Michigan he was for several years supervisor of Homer, his native town. He was possessed of qualities of character that attracted to him the friendship of all with whom he came in contact, and was held in high esteem in the wide circle of his acquaintance, and the announcement of his sudden demise carried with it sincere and widespread regret. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church and evinced a keen interest in the work of that denomination, being for some time superintendent of its Sunday school.

In political circles he had always been an active worker in the Democratic party, but in the sadness that came with the announcement of his sudden death, no differences along this line are remembered by his friends in other political parties, and all united in paying tribute to the memory of one who in every respect was a good citizen.

He died at his home at No. 713 Liberty Street in Flint at ten o'clock, Aug. 24, 1896. He had been ailing less than two days and his death came as a profound and painful surprise to his most intimate friends. On Saturday evening, Mar. 22, he was taken with an effection of the heart, to which he had been subject at times, and was driven to his home in a hack from the postoffice. His condition was such as to occasion his family considerable concern, but the possibility of a fatal termination of the attack was not seriously entertained until the morning of his death, when a change for the worse occurred and the end came quickly. He leaves a widow who survives him, with four children, John Holly, of Hancock, Mich., Elizabeth Steele, Florence Mary and Edward.

EMILY E. FAY (1602).

She married John Bunce Griswold. Educated at Thetford, Vt., Academy. Graduated Dartmouth College, 1860, and Bangor Theological Seminary, 1863. His pastorates were, Solon and Bingham, Me., 1863; Rockport, Mass., 1864; Holland, Vt., 1864-5; Braintree, 1866-8; Westford, Conn., 1869; Willington, 1870-1; Ordained Jan. 28, 1872 Talcottville; acting pastor, East Hampton, 1871-4; Millington, 1877-80; acting pastor Congregational Church, Lisbon, 1883-6, without charge; farmer, South Manchester; after burned to death in a forest fire, Apr. 16, 1896.

HENRY G. GREEN (1683).

Enlisted at Southbridge, July, 1862, as a private in 34th Regt. Mass. Vols., discharged in Feb., 1864. For a year following his discharge from service he had charge of the dispensary of the Readville Hospital in Mass., and in 1865 went into a drug store in Fitchburg, where in 1868 he succeeded to the business. In 1867 he enlisted as a private in the "Fitchburg Fusileers" and was afterwards promoted to Corporal, Sergeant and 1st Sergeant. In 1871 commissioned 2d Lieut., and in 1873 was 1st Lieut., Captain in 1875 and Major, Dec. 10, 1878. That year the militia was reorganized and the 10th Regt. was swept out of existence and Major Green was transferred to the 6th Regt. as Major, and in 1880 he was chosen Lieut. Colonel. In May 16, 1884, he was elected Colonel, which position he resigned in 1889. He was present at nineteen successive camps of the State Militia. In 1878 he was appointed Deputy Sheriff, which he still retains (1897) and resides in Fitchburg, Mass.

He is said to be a typical Fay in his complexion and is a kind and loving brother, father, citizen and friend.

MYRON D. GREEN (1702).

Enlisted at Westboro, Nov. 23, 1863, for three years in Co. B., 57th Regt. Mass. Vols., when about 16 years of age. He was wounded in his right hand before Petersburg, Va., June 24, 1864, and was discharged at Washington, D. C., May 11, 1865, by order of the War Department. His guardian, a bad man, chosen by friends who thought because he had three sons he would be a faithful man, took a false oath that the boy was 18, and sent him out to war in order to get the $500, bounty money offered by the State and $125 by the town of Westboro, all of which he appropriated for his own use, and not one cent did the boy get of it.

DELIA W. GREEN (1710).

In Memoriam, Mrs. Delia W. (Green) Putney from The Sturbridge Journal, Mass., July 15, 1897. She was the youngest child of Charles P. Green and Hannah (Fay) Green.

"For the sake of those who knew and loved Mrs. Putney these hastily gathered reminiscences and tributes are woven into a garland to her memory. She was born in Westboro, Dec. 25, 1850-1, and "the golden cord was loosed" July 5, 1897, at Memorial Hospital, Worcester, Mass.

One who knew her in early childhood said of her that "she was a bud of rare promise;" and when her friends looked upon her beauty and noted her happy sunny ways, they felt the future held much of joy for her. But the shadows fell early over her life-path, for in 1857, within eleven days of each other, both parents went to "that bourne whence none return." An elder sister, Mrs. George H. Hartwell, Sr., took the little orphaned child to her heart and home; and as she grew in years and in strength she became more and more endeared to her adopted home circle. She never knew what it was to miss a mother's care, because her sister gave to her all that a mother could bestow. Still Mrs. Putney secretly cherished the memory others held of her own mother, and was always pleased when told she was like her. She was educated in the public schools of Sturbridge, but a severe rheumatic fever prevented her graduation from the High School. This illness left her with shattered health and a heart trouble, and for the last ten years she has been a great sufferer.

It is much to say of one that is nervously weak from physical suffering that she was cheerful and uncomplaining, but this is the testimony of her friends. She had by inheritance a fine nature. "Truth was her watchword," says one who knew her well. Books were her dear companions in hours of health and suffering. Music was a delight, and in her girlhood years she showed marked talent in this direction. In 1874 she married Newton E. Putney, who, with their four children, her three brothers and three sisters, will miss the frail sufferer in all the walks of Earth-life.

We cannot but remark the heroism with which she awaited the operation which held her last hope of life. She talked freely about the possible fatal end, to her sister in Worcester, who was with her during the last two days of her tarrying here. She talked too of the happy hours of early childhood in the paternal home where all were innocent, happy and glad. She left nothing unsaid to her loved ones, writing last messages with her own weak hand to the children whom the mother heart was loath to leave. And now for her the vail is rent, and she has entered into "the fullness of life."

NATHAN FAY (1737).

He was born in Richmond, Vt., (then Williston) at that time an unbroken wilderness, and the surrounding country of a bold and rugged character, thinly settled for more than half a century after he was born. "Camel's Hump" and Mansfield mountains were in full view of his birthplace, and but a few miles distant. All of his education was obtained at the district school which at that day was quite limited; and as soon as age and strength would permit he was taken from school and put into the field to assist his father and older brothers in clearing the land for cultivation, to satisfy the wants of life which were then heavy upon his parents. Farming was his principal occupation through life.

He was Capt. of Militia, Justice of the Peace for many years, and represented the town of Richmond in the State Legislature five years, served as selectman and overseer of the poor for more than twenty years, was town clerk and constable to some extent, all in the town of Richmond.

He obtained a land warrant from the government for services in the war of 1812, but he never boasted of any brilliant exploits or hair breadth escapes. Born in the wilderness, his cradle a rude log dug out like a "sap trough." He lived most of his days on the same farm where he was born. His father died in 1838 leaving the "old homestead" on his hands. He was in good health when nearly 70 years of age, was without an enemy in the world, was proud of his ancestry and had quite a collection of family history.

THEODORE SEDGWICK FAY (1899).

He was an American author and Diplomatist. He read law and was admitted to the bar in 1828 and commenced practice, but he soon relinquished it for the more congenial pursuits of literature, by contributing articles to the "New York Mirror," of which paper he finally became one of the editors for several years. In 1832 he published "Dreams and Reveries of a Quiet Man."

He was appointed by President Van Buren, Secretary of Legation at the Court of St. James from whence he was transferred, at his own request, to Berlin where he acted in a similar capacity from 1837 to 1853 until the accession of President Pierce, when he was made minister resident to the Swiss Republic from 1853 to 1861, during which time he gathered the materials for his "History of Switzerland" which he afterwards published. His Journal of Travel in Europe gave him distinction as an author. His first novel, "Norman Leslie" was published in 1835 and went to a second edition the same year. Some of his other works are, "Sidney Clifton" in 1839 "The Countess Ida" or the "Voices" poems in 1851. His best known fugitive contributions are his papers on Shakespeare. In his case, we see a noted example of the "mantle of the father" falling upon the shoulders of the son.

RICHARD SULLIVAN FAY (1913).

He graduated at Harvard College 1825, was a merchant of Boston and resided here. He had a beautiful summer residence in Lynn, Mass., and was much interested in forestry and lanscape gardening. A few items are given from Newhall's History of Lynn concerning his residence there. "In 1847 he purchased the estate (and many acres of adjoining territory) on which was the mineral spring, popularly called the "Red Spring," its waters having a reddish hue. About the century 1600, Dr. John Casper Ritcher Van Crowningshield, the ancestor of the Crowningshields of Salem, purchased the adjacent lands and settled on them, the celebrated Cotton Mather among others visited him and partook of the waters of the spring, and in one of his elaborate works extols their virtues. The situation is delightful. The little lake which has received the pretty name, "Lynnmore" nestles so cosily and smiles so brightly between the thickly wooded hills, that it might almost be imagined there had been a compact that it should be shielded from the wild winds that should agitate its bosom in return for the refreshing exhalations it might send up to renovate the drooping foliage. Upon the western bank which rises gracefully to a considerable height was erected in 1810, the edifice long known as Lynn Mineral Spring Hotel. It was a favorite summer resort and no inland retreat could be more charming. There was fishing in the "Pond," fowling in the woods, and beautiful drives in all directions."

In 1847 Mr. Fay purchased the estate and improved it greatly by planting a great many varieties of rare and beautiful trees, many of them are foreign. England and France are represented, the Black Forest of Germany, even Russia and Liberia. There is a pleasing variety of grove and lawn, pasture and arable ground, woodland and meadow, and altogether the landscape is one of uncommon freshness and vigor. In traversing the grounds one is forcibly reminded of feudal days and baronial domains, and if the ivied walls of an ancient castle could be discerned peering from some rocky crest across the lake the illusion might be complete. This beautiful estate is still in possession of the Fays which they continue to improve and beautify. The family leave their city home early in the season to enjoy the loveliness of their beautiful estate, where they remain until late in the autumn. Mr. Fay died in Liverpool, England in 1865, aged 59 years. Mrs. Fay was living in 1886.

REV. CHARLES FAY (1914).

He graduated from Harvard in 1829. He married the daughter of Right Rev. John Hopkins, D. D., Bishop of Vermont. He has been a scholarly gentleman, his grand father, Jonathan Fay, graduated in 1778; his father, Samuel P. P. in 1798; his brother, Richard S. in 1825; his son, Charles N. Fay in 1869; and his grand nephew, Dudley B. Fay in 1881. So it seems that Harvard has been their Alma Mater for several generations.

His 2d wife was a widow of W. White, a lawyer in St. Albans, Vt. He was an Episcopal Clergyman and had parishes in Montpelier, Ga., Bayou Goula, La., New Orleans, La., St. Albans, Vt., Marquette, Mich., and at one time lived in Burlington, Vt., and did a great deal of church work there and in that vicinity. In 1886 he had no parochial charge, but divided his time between Chicago, where his son, Charles N. Fay, and three of his daughters reside, and Grand Isle.

JOSEPH STORY FAY (1921).

His father graduated at Harvard, 1798, and one of his classmates was the Hon. Joseph Story, for whom Mr. Fay was named.

He was a merchant for many years in Savannah, Ga., but for over forty years has been a resident of Woods Holl at the southwest extremity of Barnstable Co., Mass. (Cape Cod), his winter residence being in Boston. It was formerly called "Woods Hole," but for reasons which are given in the "Track of the Norseman" (A monograph by Mr. Fay in which the visit of the Norseman in the 10th Century is given in an interesting narrative) the post office department changed the name of the post office to Woods Holl, in response to the petition of the inhabitants.

Mr. Fay is much interested in "Forestry" and is a member of the American Forestry Congress. He has several hundred acres on his farm, comprising wood, arable and pasture land. He has planted about 100 acres with pine seed which has grown successfully, and this area, formerly worn out, and treeless, is now a thrifty forest and adds much to the shelter and value of the land as well as beauty to the landscape. The following is a part of the account of the Forestry Congress Excursion to Wood's Holl in Sept., 1885; "The Forestry Congress, though a formal adjournment was made on Thursday, really continued its meeting through Friday by enjoying an excursion to Wood's Holl to inspect the forest of 200 acres which Mr. Joseph S. Fay of Boston has grown there from seed planted at different times within the past 25 or 30 years. On the arrival of the train at Wood's Holl, Mr. Fay was at the station with a sufficient number of carriages to contain the members of the Congress and two hours were spent in driving about the forest and hearing Mr. Fay's explanation of the method of his work. On as barren and wind swept a piece of ground as can be found perhaps along our coast and on poor soil Mr. Fay began years ago to scatter in the trodden down grass the seeds of our common yellow or Pitch Pine and here today is a demonstration of a dense body of wood, in places almost impenetrable, many of the trees being 50 or more feet in height. Having gained a foothold of pines and thus raised a screen against the drying winds from the ocean, Mr. Fay planted behind them the seeds of other trees, evergreen and deciduous and with unfailing success. The members of the Congress were delighted with this proof that forest trees can be so easily raised from seed under such unfavorable circumstances. It was a confirmation of what they had believed and taught and nothing more convincing or encouraging could be asked. Mr. Fay said emphatically that farming had not paid and would not pay in such a situation, but raising forests would. After inspecting the forest the members of the Congress were invited into the house to partake of an excellent collation. Mr. Fay d. June 17, 1897, at Wood's Holl.

Very truly Yours
Geo A Fay

REV. GILBERT FAY (1925.)

He graduated at Brown's University, 1826, and studied Theology with Rev. Dr. Ide of Medway. After two years' labor in various places he was ordained to the gospel ministry at Westboro, Oct. 6, 1830, as an Evangelist and went under a commission of the A. H. Missionary into the Western Reserve. He preached as stated supply at Wardsworth until his death at the early age of 32 years. He was much loved and lamented by his church and brethren in the ministry. His years were too brief to develop his full abilities. They were, however, signally blessed. The little church of eleven members at the commencement, numbered seventy at his death.

GEORGE AUSTIN FAY (2013).

George Austin went to Meriden, Conn., in 1859, and was in a telegraph and express office two years. He then entered the law department of Yale University. Graduated there in 1863, he began to practice law in Meriden. In 1873 he represented the 6th senatorial district of the State Senate. He has continued to practice law in Meriden, where he res. in 1898.

JULIUS AUGUSTUS FAY, JR. (2100).

He was a graduate of Williams College of the class of 1860. In 1862 he left his law studies to serve his country on the battlefield. He entered the army as first Lieut. of the 35th N. Y. Vols., and became Lieut. Colonel. He had the command of the regiment which took Petersburg, and to him was delivered the keys of the city by the mayor. After the war was over he resumed his law studies and practiced law in Elizabeth, N. J. He died Sept., 1891, leaving no children. His wife was a lineal descendant of Jonathan Dayton, the 4th speaker of the House of Representatives.

WILSON WAKEMAN FAY (2112.)

He served in the Civil War four years. He enlisted Oct. 1, 1861 in Co. A, 95th Regt., N. Y. Vols. Was transferred to Co. D, 56th Regt., Mass. Vols. Mustered as Capt., Dec. 29, 1863 (being promoted for gallantry on the field). He was discharged May 15, 1865, by General Order, No. 82, discharging paroled prisoners of war. He had a knee strained at Gettysburg and received a bayonet thrust in the leg at Petersburg. When he was taken prisoner an officer demanded his sword at the point of the revolver and he was obliged to give it up. Capt. Wilson W. Fay happened to be engraved on the hilt; the officer who took it was probably shot, for sometime after it was picked up on the field after a battle. A few years ago the person who had the sword began to inquire in Washington for a Capt. Wilson W. Fay. A man who knew him as a soldier heard of this, obtained the sword and sent it on to Mr. Fay, and it was put side by side with a gun that was carried by one of the Fays in the battle of Bennington.

CHARLES VOLNEY FAY (2462).

An autobiography by Charles V. Fay of Cleveland, Ohio. "I have often listened to my father as he related his experience as a pioneer. The Indians were numerous. The corn for family use was crushed in an iron mortar. Fifty miles was the nearest point where wheat was converted into flour. At one time my father assisted in the capture of two Indians who had murdered a white man. They had an impartial trial, were convicted and executed. The pioneer minister was a frequent visitor at my father's house as he came to fill his appointment, and a horn would be blown to notify the neighbors that he had arrived, and that there would be services. The Bible, the inspired word of God, was received and taught as such in those days, and I think men and women were the better for its teachings, and put in practice its teachings. I think I should have liked to have lived in those days, when the word of God was not subject to the higher criticisms of wise critics (so-called) as at the present time.

In politics my father was an old time Whig of the staunch kind. A few years before his death he predicted that the North and South would cross swords on the slave question. He was correct, and when the thunders of Fort Sumter echoed and re-echoed over the land and traitors sought to destroy the Union established by our fathers, Abraham Lincoln's call was heard over the land. As I recall the names of my ancestors who stood so boldly in defense of the colonies, I am glad to know that the same spirit of loyalty and patriotic devotion to their country still manifests itself in the breasts of their descendants.

My brother, Chapin S., was enrolled in the 2d Colorado Cavalry; Ezra S. was a member of the Chicago Mercantile Battery, and your humble servant, the author of this sketch, Charles Volney Fay, was enrolled in the 101st Ohio V. Inf. The surgeon refused to pass me and I was rejected, but was more fortunate in a short time and was enrolled in the 166th O. V. Inf., and passed on to the front, though I was a little short. Although I am incapacitated from manuel labor to this day from an injury received in the service, I am the only one of the three left to tell the story. That we have an united country is because of the loyal sons of the North, the East and the West who faced death in its defense."

REV. CYRUS HYDE FAY (2555).

He was born in Lebanon, N. H., a pleasant and thriving agricultural town on the Connecticut river, Nov. 18, 1815. His advantages for an education, up to the age of 19, was such as most of the youth in our inland country towns in New England were allowed somewhat more than a generation ago; the village schol house with its "master" in winter and its woman teacher in summer, its "spelling bees," declamation exercises, and the visits made to it by grave looking committees at examination time. He was blessed with worthy parents. They were diligent toilers and had a large family as an inspiration to their work of daily life, but they were considerate and true in reference to the higher moral and religious interests of their children. From a narrower faith, they had come to the convicition of the truth of that gospel which reveals God as the loving Father and Christ as the complete Redeemer of all souls. When about 19, Mr. Fay entered the University at Norwich, Vt., under the instruction of the distinguished Capt. Alden Partridge. From Sept., 1837, to May, 1839, he was employed as a teacher of youth in Baltimore, Md., which was a work quite agreeable to his inclinations, and while he followed it in that city he received the approval of those who gave him their patronage. But he could hardly feel satisfied with an occupation that in the end brought him more honor as an instructor than just compensation for his services. From early youth, Mr. Fay had looked to the ministry as the profession of all others deemed most desirable to him. During his course of study at Norwich he was partially diverted from what had been his intended life course, and at the commencement of his residence in Baltimore his mind was quite unsettled for awhile in regard to a choice of a profession. Some of his reading and thinking had led him into doubts of the Divine authority of the Bible. It was in the midst of this temporary theological bewilderment that he concluded to study law, at the earnest advice of his friends in that city. He says in a letter to a friend, "I went to the office of the Hon. Lewis McLane to register as a law student. This visit I shall never forget. I now ragard it as a pivot upon which hung the destiny of this life at least. As I reflect upon it I am deeply impressed with the truth that " there's a divinity that shapes our ends." I cannot give the reason why I did not leave my name with him, but I did not. After a pleasant conservation I took my departure."

Soon after this Mr. Fay became acquainted with Rev. J. D. Williamson, the pastor of the First Universalist Church in Baltimore, and was for some time an attendant on his ministry, which proved a ministry of blessing to him. In April, 1839, at the recommendation of his pastor, he left Baltimore to supply the pulpit of the Universalist Society in Hartford, Conn., where he preached his first sermon. In the following August he visited his "Alma Mater" and pronounced an oration at the annual commencement. He afterwards, for a few months, supplied the pulpit of the Lombard St. Universalist Church in Philadelphia, Pa., and on Oct. 3, 1839, he was united in marriage with Miss Ann Hyde Minifie in Baltimore by Rev. Williamson. In Jan., 1840, he was invited to become pastor of the North Universalist Society in Woodstock, Vt., in which place he engaged for one year, a very agreeable union with his people. In 1841 he received an invitation to become pastor of the Universalist Society in Roxbury, Mass. He accepted the invitation and his ministry was a successful one. In Mar., 1849, he resigned his pastorate in Roxbury and it was a step regreted by all the congregation. His reason assigned was failure of his health. He felt that he needed the rest which a change might give him. In answer to a strong invitation on the part of the Orchard Universalist Society in the city of New York, Mr. Fay entered upon his pastorate there May 1, 1849. The locality of the church edifice was not favorable to the prosperity of the parish nor afforded very high encouragement to the pastor. It was during the second year of his ministry in N. Y. (June 18, 1850) that one of the heaviest trials of his life was realized by him. His beloved companion, the faithful mother of his children, departed this life under circumstances peculiarly afflicting. In somewhat feeble health and while on passage from N. Y. to Boston, she was suddenly missed by members of her family and other friends accompanying her. She could not be found on board the steamer. Mental abberration, it was presumed was the cause of this event which brought keenest sorrow and anguish to many hearts. There could be no other reasonable explanation of the mystery. She was loved by the many who knew her, and she was no where happier than in her own home. The body was afterwards found and interred in the family enclosure at the Forest Hill cemetery.

On the 5th of Aug., 1851, he was married by Rev. E. H. Chapin to Mrs. Betsey Ann Blossom, the oldest daughter of Stephen Smith, Esq., of N. Y. City. In this companion he and his family have found a kind and faithful friend. His next pastorate was of two years' continuation in Nashua, N. H., it was one of much active work in the parish and out of it. During the thirteen months which succeeded his resignation at Nashua he had charge of the Universalist Society in Stamford, Conn., having his home with his family at the country seat of his father-in-law at Port Chester, N. Y. Mr. Fay's settlement at Middletown, Conn., commenced in Nov., 1826, and continued two years and it was a very agreeable one. His reasons of terminating it were mainly the prospect of a wider field of usefulness in the city of Providence, R. I., to which he had been invited and the prospect of a salary more adequate to meet his expenses. In Dec., 1858, he entered upon his connection with the 1st Universalist Society in Providence. His pastorate here was a successful one and at its termination resolutions in his favor were passed unanimously by the society. He was connected with the parish ten years. From Providence he returned to his old parish in Middletown in 1869, and was still there in 1873. He is now (1886) living in Brooklyn, N. Y.

The mental qualities of Mr. Fay are such as serve to render him a successful Christian minister and pastor. He has a good share of that excellent gift, common sense, is an easy, clear and logical reasoner, has the power of ready illustration and of making plain and strong points in his discourses and his fund of anecdotes is by no means small. His affectionate traits are suited to his calling. His sympathies are strong and in the office of a consoler he has rendered his ministries especially effective and blessed to the cast-down and afflicted, the bereaved and mourning. In the philanthropic reforms of our age he has borne and still bears an honorable part.

The poetical powers of Mr. Fay have been the occasion of frequent demands upon him for the exercise of them. Besides the occasional hymns and rhymings of less note he wrote several poems on special occasions. One was "A Poem in Commemoration of the 100th Anniversary of the Charter of Lebanon, N. H.," delivered July 4, 1861. Another was "A Poem at the Semi-Centennial Memorial of the Universalist Church in Roxbury, Mass., Jan. 4, 1871." Another was "A Poem at the Half Century Memorial of the First Universalist Society in Providence, R. I., Apr. 12, 1871." These poems were written with a free and ready pen and were well suited for the occasions for which they were written. He had a family of nine children, one of whom is Prof. Charles E. Fay of Tufts College, College Hill, Mass.

PROF. CHARLES ERNEST FAY (2558).

He is professor of Tufts College, Mass., was born in Roxbury, Mass., Mar. 10, 1846. He was named Charles Hyde, when of age to avoid possible confusion with the title of Rev. Charles Hyde, his father's name (as he was intending to enter the ministry) he changed it to Charles Ernest.

He graduated from the Providence High School, 1862. That winter he began to teach in a country school No. 1, Nashua, N. H., and closing a term of seventeen weeks was appointed to the charge of a mixed school in Bristol, R. I. Here he came under the influence of Mr. Joshua Kendall, then principal of the State Normal School. As the result of which he determined to go to college. His engagement at Bristol continued about a year and a half. His fitting in the classics began under Mr. Kendall and was completed under the tuition of Prof. Deerborn at Tufts College, where he entered as a freshman in 1865. His previous opportunities enabled him to shorten the course by a year and he graduated in 1868. He was then appointed special instructor in mathematics, holding the position for one year, during which time he preached to the Allen Street Unitarian Church of North Cambridge, Mass., and afterwards in the 3rd Universalist parish of Cambridge. He preached during his last college year chiefly at Canton, Mass. Resigning the instruction of mathematics in 1869, he was appointed instructor of modern languages, with leave of absence to spend a year in Europe. This year was passed chiefly in Dresden, the leading Italian cities and Paris. In Florence he met Miss Lincoln who became his wife. His appointment as professor of modern languages dates from 1871 and since that date up to 1886 he has been engaged in this department.

REV. HENRY CLINTON FAY (2647).

Resided, 1895, in West Somerville, Mass., 10 Wallace St. A clergyman. Was a student in Bangor Theological Seminary in 1854 to 1857. Ordained to the gospel ministry, Dec. 29, 1858, at Northwood, N. H. Congregational Church. Pastor at Richmond, Me., 1857-1858; Northwood, N. H., 1858-1864; Norton, Mass., 1864-1868; Hubbardston, 1868-70; Harwichport, 1870-72; Townsend, 1873-76; Ayer, 1876-77; Centre Brook, Conn., 1877-80; Holden, Mass., 1880-82; Northwood, N. H., 1882-85; Londonderry, 1885-88; North Reading, Mass., resided West Somerville, Mass., 1888-96.

Rev. H. C. Fay, under date Jan. 30, 1896, writes as follows:—

"I have been preaching forty years since I was licensed and though 69 years old preach still, though I have no regular charge. For the last eleven years I have been a member of the Boston Presbytery, but still am a member of the Congregational Church, which I served so many years of my ministry. I have never been kept from the pulpit from illness in all this time."

ABBIE ANN FAY (2660).

She was b. Nov. 28, 1830, m., Apr. 7, 1855, Burt Newman. He was b. in S. Egremont, Mass., Sept. 29, 1827, son of Samuel & Pamela (Curtiss) N. and soon after went to Minnesota to live, thence to Akron, Ills., where she taught in the public schools, her husband also being a teacher in the same school. From that point they removed to Delevan, Ill., where they now (1898) reside. Mrs. Newman has been a teacher for 35 years, having taught for 25 years in the primary grade at Delevan consecutively. She is also prominent in church work and literary circles.

CAROLINE ELIZABETH FAY (2693).

She married Rev. Christian Mowrey, who died at New Ulm, Minn., Oct. 1, 1887. He was a Godly missionary, had won a great victory and was just beginning to reap the fruits as a Home Missionary among a foreign people, and the field was one of the most difficult in the land.

When he was nine years of age his parents emigrated from Switzerland and settled in West Virginia. He served in the army in the late war, as a private in Co. D, 11th W. V. Regt. He enlisted Nov. 15, 1861, and served during the war, was discharged June 17, 1865, and the exposures incident to a soldier's life sowed the seeds of the disease which did not permit him to live beyond the prime of life. After his discharge from the army he became a Christian and at once consecrated himself to the work of the ministry. Against poverty and lack of early culture he struggled bravely through Marietta College and Yale Seminary, where he graduated in 1876 and was ordained at Coolville, Ohio, where he did fruitful service for four years. When called to the apparently hopeless field at New Ulm, his faith saw beyond the German Infidelity and Romanism of the place and he entered upon the work in April, 1882, hoping to spend his days there. He proved to be the right man for the place. He built a neat Chapel and organized a church. His humility, faithfulness and beautiful Christian life won a large place for Christianity in that community and the whole town was his friend. He loved all the people of New Ulm, and they all loved him and their universal kindness to him was a touching manifestation of their esteem. He preached in German and English, and although the place had a population of 4000 his was the only church in which the English language was used. He leaves a wife and four little children to mourn the loss of an affectionate and loving husband and a beloved and tender father.

Mrs. Mowrey was the daughter of a Home Missionary, the Rev. Levi Lankton Fay, who labored nearly 50 years in Moss Run, Ohio and vicinity.

REV. GEORGE H. JOHNSON (2725).

He was a son of Dr. Henry F. and Eunice Sophia (Fay) Johnson. He was born in Worcester, Mass., Dec. 29, 1850. When he was three years of age his parents moved from Worcester to the ancestral farm of the Johnson family in Southboro, Mass., where they remained until the spring of 1867 when they removed to Cambridge, Mass., where he was fitted for college, graduating at the High School, 1869. Four years later he graduated "with honor" at Harvard College. Having decided to study for the ministry he entered Andover Theological Seminary in the Fall of 1873 and preached his first sermon at Kenduskeag, Me., July 12, 1874. Leaving Andover Seminary he completed the Seminary course at Bangor, Me., graduating in 1876. Before being settled he had preached for the churches in Kenduskeag, Old Town, and Brewer Village, Me., and in Freetown and Uxbridge, Mass. He was ordained without installation at the First Church in Cambridge, Mass., July 6, 1877. The sermon on this occasion being preached by his uncle Rev. Solomon Payson Fay, and the installing prayer being offered by the pastor of the church, Rev. Alexander McKenzie. In Sept., 1878, he went to Amherst, Mass. to fulfill an engagement with the North Congregational Church of that town and there he was as pastor, July 3, 1879. In the Spring of 1885 his labors were blessed with a gracious revival of religion, and as a result of this, 25 persons united with the church at one time, a number greater (with but two exceptions) than had ever united at one time before. After ten years' service with this church, he was in 1888 still its pastor, having welcomed to church membership during his pastorate there 98 persons, 57 of them by confession of faith. The missionary offerings of the church during this period amounted to $7,099.90.

In the summer of 1885 he received an earnest invitation to the pastorate of the Congregational Church in Ripon, Wis., which he felt constrained to decline as he had previously declined an invitation to settle in Helena, Montana. In 1892 he settled in Lowell, Mass., as pastor of the John Street Congregational Church.

REV. WILLIAM E. FAY (2747).

He was a son of Dea. Samuel E. Fay of Springfield, Ohio. He entered the preparatory department of Marietta College, Ohio, in the Fall of 1867, but after a year and a half he went with his father to Springfield, Ohio. After nearly three years' absence he returned to Marietta, entering the Freshman class in the Fall of 1874, and graduating with the class of 1878. In the Fall of the same year he entered the Junior Class of Oberlin Seminary and graduated in 1881. Previous to his graduation he had been accepted by the A. B. C. F. missions and was designated to their new mission in West Central Africa. Before starting to his station he spent six months in northern Michigan preaching in a home mission field. He sailed for Africa March 9, 1882, and reached his destination in July of the same year. In Nov. 1883, he was appointed one of the missionaries to explore the adjoining country and if deemed advisable to establish a new station. This was done and in March, 1884, he was on the ground and hard at work. Before he had been there three months, Portuguese intrigues were laid for his expulsion. Their lies followed the line of native superstition, and so were more powerful than the truth from the lips of the missionaries, and after a long endeavor to break their distrust he was compelled to leave with what little he could save of his effects. It was either this or a resort to force and he was sent there to convert, not to kill, the natives. Upon reaching the coast he at once set out to return home to his father's house in Springfield, Ohio, where he was in the home work in that city in May, 1885. He hoped to return to Africa and resume his work there, and he was united in marriage March 10, 1886, in Watertown, Mass., to Miss Annie Marie Rezoux Kimball and soon sailed again for Africa, where his former people were ready to welcome him to his work of enlightenment among that benighted people.

The Missionary Herald published an account of his return to Africa, and nearly every month has extracts from his letters, detailing the results of his labors in connection with other missionaries in the same field. His sister, Miss Louise B. Fay, joined him, leaving her home in Springfield, Ohio, July 9, 1894, and arriving in Bailundu, West Central Africa, Oct. 13, of the same year. She graduated from Oberlin College June, 1894.

HARRY C. FAY (2980).

He enlisted in the 92nd Regt., N. Y. Vols., in Nov. 1861, in the war of the Rebellion and served till discharged in 1865, as Captain, Major and Colonel. He was wounded three times. At the close of the war he located on a farm in Irasburgh, Vt., and from there he drifted to Claremont, N. H., where he has since resided. He has published the "National Eagle," in Claremont since 1881, a thirty-six column paper printed every Saturday, at $1.25 per year, established in 1834. He established the "Courier" and "Freeman" in Potsdam, N. Y., and published it twelve years before he went to the war in 1861. After he left Irasburgh he was in Waterbury, Vt., about four years, then was in Burlington, Vt., a year and from there went to Claremont, as noticed above. His brother, Elliot, was at work with him on his paper in Potsdam, N. Y., before the war.

ARNOLD FAY (3003).

He was a soldier, enlisting Aug., 1862, was mustered Oct. 10, 1862 as 1st Sergeant, Co. F, 13th Vt. Vols. He served in the defense of Washington, doing picket duty and whatever else he was called upon to do, with an occasional visit from Moseby and Stewart. In one of Moseby's raids he captured our Commanding General with several horses, which calls to mind President Lincoln's remark when informed, "he was sorry to loose the horses, as they were worth $100 apiece, but he could make a General in a minute."

In March, 1863, he was promoted to 2d Lieutenant. In June his brigade, the five, nine months' Regiments from Vermont, under the command of Gen. Stannard followed Lee on his Northern tour, arriving at Gettysburg at dusk July 1st, too late to take any part in the first day's struggle. July 2d the 13th Regt. retook a battery and captured two pieces from the enemy. He was in line all day and was there on the third day ready to meet Picket's grand charge. How well they performed their duty history narrates. He was only too proud to say that he belonged to the 13th and was at all times with his Regiment.

Soon after the battle of Gettysburg they were sent to Brattleboro, Vt., and were mustered out. During the next six months his time was mostly employed in the recruiting service. In April, 1864, seven companies of the 17th Vt., were sent to "the front." In June, Co. H., and in August, Co. I joined them. He re-enlisted in July and began recruiting for Co. K., the last Co. of the 17th. They secured their complement of men and were organized in Oct., with Mr. Fay as 1st Lieut., and immediately joined the Regt. in front of Petersburg, being a part of the 2d Brigade, 2d Division of the 9th Army Corps, and it was said that they performed their part well during that winter of continuous hammering. In the charge of the 2d of April it was their fortune to find Fort Mahone directly in their path, the right of the Regt. made a lodgement on the outside of the Fort, remaining there till dark when they returned to their line; the left were crowded a little past the front of the Fort, where finding it too warm and too few in number, they fell back to the starting point. At daybreak the next morning they charged again, finding but little opposition, and as Mr. Fay says, "The finest sight of my life was when we reached the ridge which overlooked the city of Petersburg, with our army as far as we could see each way on the run for the long coveted city." Their corps followed the retreating army, guarding railroads, etc., and were at Burkeville when Lee surrendered. They were soon ordered to Alexandria and remained there till after the "Grand 'Review," when they were discharged. Mr. Fay was in command of Co. A. during nearly his entire service with the 17th. He was commissioned as Brevet Captain for meritorious conduct in the charge on Fort Mahone.

EDWARD FAY (3007).

He was born at Onondaga Hill, N. Y., and when young moved to the township of Cicero, Onondaga Co., N. Y., in sight of Onondaga Lake. He remained there only a year or two and then went to Springwater, Livingston Co., N. Y., and subsequently to Norvell, Mich., in 1836 with three yoke of oxen and a covered wagon, put in 40 acres of wheat and returned to Springwater. In the spring of 1837 he moved with his family to Norvell, where he now (1887) lives. His brother, Amos S., died unm. His brothers, James and Barnabas live in the same township where he resides.

GEORGE H. FAY (3008).

He was educated at Adrian College, Mich., attending there in the years of 1867 and 1868 and in 1869 and 1870 at Cornell University, N. Y. In 1872 he began the study of law with Judge David Johnson of Jackson, Mich., and was admitted to the bar Jan., 1874, and practiced law in Jackson until his death, Apr. 7, 1886.

DR. CHARLES E. FAY (3009).

Brother of Geo. H. Fay, obtained his education at the High School in Brooklyn, Mich., except completing the Freshman year at the Mich. State Agricultural College, taking his first course of lectures at the Mich. University, Medical Department. Graduating from the Detroit Medical College, Feb. 28, 1877. He began practice at Jackson, Mich., moving from there to Plymouth, Mich., and in 1885 he went to Assyria, Barry Co., Mich., and was still practicing there in 1888.

HARRIET M. FAY (3070).

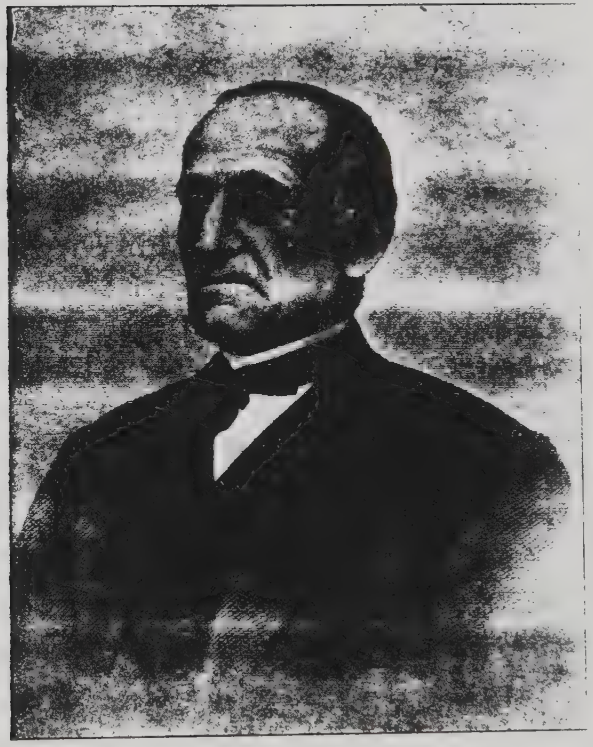
She was familiarly called "Zina." Author of a book on "Co-operative Housekeeping," also a pamphlet on the "History of the Democratic Party," which Mr. Gladstone had read with great interest. She has also written various articles for the Atlantic Monthly and Music and Art Criticisms for numerous papers in Boston, N. Y. & Chicago. . She has written a pretty severe review of "Daniel Deronda." She dislikes George Elliot's "No Religion." She married Charles S. Peirce. She was once an intense Democrat and refused to sit on a platform at a meeting of women with Horace Greeley.

Mr. Peirce's father is Prof. Peirce of Harvard College, from which Mr. Peirce graduated in the Class of 1859. He was the author of the "Logic of Relatives" in the memoirs of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences of 1870, and various papers on Logic, published in the proceedings of that academy in the Journal of Speculative Philosophy delivered before the Lowell Institute at Boston, and at Harvard University about 1869, also a memoir on Observations on the Light of Fixed Stars, presented to the American Academy in 1875. He is now (1876) in the service of the United States Coast Survey, engaged in pendulum experiments to determine the density of the earth. (Peirce Family Genealogical Record.)

LAURA MATILDA FAY (3072).

She and her sister, Rose Emily, have written a great deal in the way of short essays and critical notices for leading journals in N. Y. and Chicago. Rose Emily has also some local reputation in Chicago as a decorative artist and teacher of drawing and painting. The following is a notice of her marriage, "Chicago, May 7, 1890. The wedding of Miss Rose Fay and Theodore Thomas, the famous orchestra leader, took place this evening at 8 o'clock in the chapel of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension, which was beautifully decorated with flowers and crowded with representatives of Chicago's prominent families and guests from abroad in honor of the event. The music performed at the church was especially selected by Mr. Thomas and included Bach's "Toccata" and his "Wedding March;" airs from the "Meistersinger" and the "Walkure," and Beethoven's fifth symphony. After the ceremony a reception was given at the residence of the bride's brother, after which Mr. and Mrs. Thomas left for Cincinnati, where Mr. Thomas is about to conduct the May musical festival. Among the large number of wedding gifts were rich rememberances from the Philharmonic Society, of New York, the Festival Association of Cincinnati, the Cambridge Child's Aid Society and the Amateur Musical Club of Chicago. Miss Rose Fay is a daughter of the late Rev. Charles Fay of Cambridge, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas will make their home in New York.

Another sister, Amelia Muller Fay, is professor of music and author of "Music in Germany." She resided in Chicago in 1882.



MARK FAY.

MARK FAY (877).—Page 71, part I.

MARK FAY was a descendant in the sixth generation of John Fay 1, who, born in England? about the year 1648, was among the first settlers of Marlboro, Mass. Mark Fay was born in Southboro, Jan. 29, 1793. In his younger days he was a cabinet maker, later he engaged in farming. Still later he became identified with the banking interests of Marlboro. One of the incorporators of the First National Bank, he was its first president, and served it as a trustee until his death. He also assisted in procuring the charter of the Savings Bank, of which he was president and treasurer for ten years.

It was through his instrumentality that the South Acton and Marlboro Branch Railroad was built. The fortune he acquired by his industry and frugality, enabled him to gratify a desire to help the poor and needy. In 1871 he gave $5,000 to various clergymen for distribution among the poor, and in 1874 he presented the town with an equal amount of money as a fund for the industrious poor.

Mark Fay was one of a committee, whose names were on a circular, dated in Boston, March 31, 1859, recommending Rev. Abner Morse, and instructing him to trace the genealogy of the "Fay family," and prepare the same to be printed. The wife of Mr. Fay, Sophia, was a daughter of Jotham, or Jonathan, Brigham. He was married Dec. 5, 1817 and had 7 children, only two of whom are now living (1898). He had 19 grandchildren and 16 great grandchildren.

Page 60, under No. 575.—4. WM. WIRT, son of Capt. Joel Wood Fay, was a commissioned officer in the Civil War. He had two sons in the war with Spain in the 2nd Mass. Regt., one of whom was a lieutenant, and has in his possession, besides his own commission, his father's commission, his grandfather's commission (Capt. Joel W. Fay), and also the commission of Col. Joel Fay (his great grandfather).

He was with his regiment when they received such an ovation in Baltimore, and went on the steamer "Yale" with General Miles. His father was first lieutenant in Co. K, of that regiment, and Robert was sergeant of the same company. He had typhoid fever while in service, but recovered and came home on the steamer Bay State, on a furlough; but it was not known whether he was to be mustered out or be ordered away.

SAMUEL FAY 2 AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

He settled in that part of Marlboro now Westboro, perhaps in the Southwest part, and was one of the first inhabitants of that new town after it was set off from Marlboro in 1717. He and his wife offered themselves for baptism in the Marlboro church in 1701. His wife is enrolled July 7, 1727, in the First Congregational church in Westboro. It might have been her daughter, Tabitha Fay, and they perhaps retained their membership in the Marlboro church, as he died a few years after the Westboro church was organized. He left a will, which was not proved. His estate was settled by the consent of his heirs.

He was chosen Surveyor in 1718-1720 and 1721 was Tythingman, which was in those days considered a highly honorable position, and was given to none but men of sober character and good standing in the community. He also filled the office of Town Clerk, succeeding his brother, John, in that position. In 1728, 1729 and 1730 he was Sealer of leather.

He owned land in Southboro and purchased a large tract of land in Brookfield.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES OF THE DESCENDANTS OF SAMUEL FAY (2.)

SAMUEL FAY (12)

He settled on his father's land in Southboro where he had a family of 25 children recorded. This is the largest Fay family on record. He had two wives and by his first wife had 14 children and by his second wife 11 children, the youngest died when only an infant.

He was over 70 years old when the youngest child was born. Morse says of him "his first wife died after delivering to him 14 children in 20 years giving him the privilege of marrying another wife which he was patriotic enough to embrace, by whom he had 11 more."

In 1756 his sons Solomon and Samuel were in the King's service at "Crown Point" as soldiers.

He and most of his children cease to be reported in Southboro after 1775. He probably settled in Reading, Vt. or near there. He or his brother were offered their father's tract of land in Brookfield of 1000 acres and one of them attempted to settle upon it but became discouraged and resigned it to his brother Ebenezer.

His wife was his cousin, Deliverance Shattuck, and his mother was Tabitha Ward, and his children had Fay, Shattuck, Ward, and Brigham blood, as his grandmother was Mary Brigham.

EBENEZER FAY (15.)

He settled in Sturbridge near Attom Pond at a point which took the name of "Fays Cove" which was then in the midst of a dense forest one mile or more from where there had ever been any public road. He afterwards built on a portion of his large tract of land near the residence of Cyrus and John Fay.

He was very fond of fishing in the Pond above named and he used to go on horseback and get his saddlebage full of fish, this was after his removal from Fay's Cove.

Some of his children lived to a good old age, his son Jonathan was nearly 100 years old at the time of his death and the wife of Jonathan also lived to be 100 years old.

He was a farmer. He came from Shrewsbury and located in Athol, when the town was new, going to the place by marked trees, there being no road cut out for the last few miles. He was deeded a grant of land in the west part of the town from the Mass. Bay Co., in 1760.

He was one of a family of 25 children. He was a soldier in the "Crown Point Expedition" in the French and Indian war 1755 and was in the battle on Abraham's Heights in the engagement under Gen. Johnson which regiment was attacked by the combined forces of the French Canadians and Indians under the command of Baron Deiskau. In this attack the French were defeated by a smaller force. The morning of the battle 150 men were sent out to scour the country for the enemy. The French and Indians lay in ambush one each side of the road while said 150 were passing along, when fourteen of them had passed within their line they were fired upon and killed, also many of the others before they could return to the Fort.

SHEREBIAH FAY (32.)

He settled first in Reading, Vt., then in Litchfield, N. Y., living there about three years, then to Augusta, Oneida Co., N. Y., residing there six or seven years. In the Spring of 1801, imbibing the spirit of emigration, which was so common at that time, he sought a new residence farther in the wilderness. After securing 100 acres of land and erecting a log cabin he returned to his family and made preparations to move to his newly selected home; availing of the first good sledding which did not occur till the month of March, he packed his ox-sled and after a journey of seven days arrived at his cabin, April 1, 1802, in what is now the town of Watertown, N. Y. In this settlement he spent the remainder of his days and was respected by all who knew him.

He led an active and a laborious life, was three years in the service of his country in the War of the Revolution, and had seen much of the hardships of a frontier life. He died aged 81 years.

EZRA FAY (41.)

He settled in Reading, Vt., in 1790. Purchased 200 acres of land heavily wooded, which he cleared off with his own hands, rearing a numerous family of children. He was one of the early settlers of the township and endured the hardships and privations of frontier life.

He was elected Major of the Regiment in the Militia in 1796.

MOSES FAY (42.)

He was a soldier and served under the command of Capt. Edward Ruggles to put down "Shay's Rebellion," or insurrection, serving from Jan. 22nd to Feb. 21, 1787. Sharing the perils and sufferings of that terrible night march from Hadley to Petersham, one of the most fatigueing marches ever performed in America, resulting in the utter dispersion of the rebel army. See Hist. of Hardwick, p. 132.

Possibly this Moses might have been another of the same name.

Benjamin A. Fay of Fenton, Mich., writes Feb. 12, 1887, as follows: "I was told in my early days that two Fays, who were brothers, settled in Mass., prior to 1740. I am not certain of their names, or of their origin, one of them settled in Northampton the other one, which was my great grandfather, settled in Sturbridge. I was told that he was the father of 17 children, some of whom lived to a good old age, my grandfather being one of them, his name was Jonathan, lived to be nearly 100 years old. He married one whose maiden name was Anna Chapel who also lived to be 100 years of age."

Ebenezer resided in Sturbridge and had 18 children, but one of them died very young, and as the next child bore the same name, the one that died (as was frequently the case), might not have been carried on the family register. This would leave 17 as above.

Jonathan Fay resided in Brimfield.

SYLVANUS FAY (94).

He was a cooper by trade. Was an undertaker over 25 years whose business was to dig graves and attend to the duties of burying the dead.

He laid away to their rest many of the citizens of Monson, where he resided. His time came, but not until he had attained a good old age. He also rang the town bell every day at noon, night, and on the Sabbath day, and to inform the town of deaths, by the bell giving the age at which they died, and also tolled the bell at funerals while the procession marched to the grave.

Thus his time was taken up, but he was faithful to his trusts, and "Cooper Fay" as he was familiarly called at that time, was respected by all who knew him.

BENAJAH FAY (95).

Ebenezer Fay, No. 26, had a son Benajah who was born in Sturbridge in 1773. Cyrus Fay writes, "I had an Uncle Benajah, who went to Ohio." Hudson also locates him in Ohio and the following inscription is on a tombstone in the old cemetery in Cleveland, Ohio., "Rhoda Edwards, widow of Lyman Rhoades, wife of Benajah Fay, b. Mar. 10, 1798, d. Mar. 29, 1859."

In the "History of Cuyahoga County" Ohio, page 338, the author speaks of Benajah Fay and his wife, whose name was Ruth Wilcox, and that he was born 1777 in Mass., and that she was born 1781 in Lewis Co., N. Y. In 1816, they came to Cuyahoga Co., O. and settled in Parma Township, where they lived till their death. She died Sept. 16, 1831 and he in March 1862 and that they were the parents of 3 children, Mabel, Jeremiah W. and Ruth and again that Eli (or Ely) was the son of Benajah Fay Jr, who was born in "York State" in 1806, that he was 10 years old when he, with his father and the family came to Cuyahoga Co., O., where he spent his youthful days in Parma Township and where he was married to Lois Hodgman who was born in 1808. They first settled in Parma where they lived for some time and then removed to Brooklyn Township, where they resided until their death. He dying with the cholera in 1849 and she lived until Nov. 27, 1877. They had a family of 4 sons and one daughter. Eli being the oldest child.

It would seem that Benajah Fay Sen., had 4 chil., 3 by wife Ruth (and if only three) that he must have been married three times. Several letters have been writen to his descendants in Parma, and elsewhere, with the hope that a satisfactory solution of the case will yet be secured.

NEHEMIAH FAY (183).

Nehemiah Fay, the ancestor of the western New York branch of the family, was born Dec. 20, 1776. He received the usual district school education, and on attaining young manhood spent some years in traveling about the country, threshing grain by the bushel. He was a natural born musician with a good voice, and his songs and stories made him a welcome guest at the farmhouse gatherings during harvest time and at the age of 27 (in 1803) he married Miss Achsah Stratton, a young lady some seven years his junior with whom he had been acquainted since childhood. He was a member of the minute-men militia of Massachusetts and was called out to assist in the defense of Boston when that city was beleived to be threatened by the British during the war of 1812, and during his service in the militia he was company cook, and his talents in the line of songs and stories soon gave him the same popularity he had enjoyed among the young people at home. In 1815, Nehemiah, in company with his brother Benjamin, made an overland trip to what is now Boston Corners, near Springville, Erie Co.,

N. Y., where they cleared up a farm and settled. The journey was made from Boston with ox teams and the family traditions assert that it was accomplished in a few days over a month, but considering the condition of the roads in those days, it is quite probable that this statement will bear a little stretching. Three children, Abigail, Fanny and James were born before the family left Massachusetts and another son, Alcauder, was born at Boston Corners in 1816. In 1837, Nehemiah sold his interest in the farm at B. C. to his brother and removed to Little Valley, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., and in a few years to Great Valley in the same county.

During these years he worked the greater portion of the time at Shingle-weaving (i. e., making shaved shingles) and for many years he had a great deal of trouble with his eyes and during the last few years of his life was almost blind; but he continued to make shingles until almost the day of his death. As an old man he retained his love of song and jest and was a great favorite among the children and young people of the neighborhood. Those yet living still have pleasant memories of evenings spent before the old fire-place, listening to "grandpa's" songs and stories.

He had always maintained that when he should lose his voice he would be ready to die and his prediction proved true. During his last illness (he suffered from consumption), he awoke one morning to find his voice almost gone, and turning to his daughter-in-law he whispered, "Lecta, I can't live long; I can't sing any more!" Before night he breathed his last.

Mrs. Fay survived him 14 years, dying in 1870 at the age of 88. Of the children of Nehemiah Fay, Abigail married Obadiah Russell, a young man from Massachusetts; Fanny married Asbail Fields. Both had large families. James married Mary Ferry of Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., and had three sons and three daughters, and Alcauder married Electa Clements of Little Valley, and had five sons and two daughters. James seems to have been the black sheep of the family, he left his wife and family and lived a more or less dissipated life, finally settling down at West Valley, N. Y., living a hermit's life and died at that place. Alcauder remained at Great Valley during his whole life except two years (1849-1851) spent in the West. He was a cooper by trade and spent most of his leisure time in hunting, at which he acquired quite a reputation in western New York and Pennsylvania. During the civil war he enlisted in the army, but owing to sickness saw but little actual service. His son, Adrian F., was in the 105th Regiment, N. Y. Volunteer Infantry, and served four years; the last nine months being a prisoner in Andersonville. Marcus M., another son, was in the 9th N. Y. Cavalry and served during the last year and seven months of the war. Alcauder is still living (Oct. 1898) and is a hale and hearty old man. He recently walked nine miles in two and one-half hours and did not appear fatigued. His first wife died in Great Valley, N. Y. in 1886 at the age of 72 years. All of Alcauder Fay's children but one are living. Adrian is a resident of Bradford, McKean Co., Pa.; Marcus lives in Salamanca, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y.; Charles W. in Humphrey, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y.; Asa A. and Henry F. in Great Valley; Fannie E. (Fay) Lougee, the only living daughter, also resides in Great Valley and Mrs. Mary (Fay) Wilder is survived by one son Willis M. of Cattaraugus, Cattaraugus Co., N. Y.; and Adrian has three sons and three daughters living and one daughter dead.

Marcus has two sons and two daughters living and one daughter dead; Charles has two sons; Asa, three daughters; Fannie Lougee, three sons; and Henry F. one daughter.

BENJAMIN FAY (201).

He moved to Concord, Erie Co., N. Y., in the autumn of 1811. The war with Great Britain occurring the following year and residing near the frontier, he was repeatedly called out and afterwards volunteered and saw active service at Queenstown Heights, the sortie on the enemies batteries at the siege of Fort Erie and the burning of Buffalo. Being a single man at that time he was expected to go to the frontier at every call and of course neglected to a great extent the improvement of his little farm, and after the war he had to struggle with all the privations and hardships of the times and place.

An account of his life would be the history of a new settlement cut off from most of the comforts of civilized society. In his town and county he received repeated tokens of the confidence of his fellow citizens by being placed in positions of trust. Soon after the war he was elected Colonel in the New York Militia and held his commission till he resigned on account of the draft upon his time and means, which he could illy afford to bear. In the organization of the affairs of the town he took an active part for many years, almost always holding some office though he was never an office seeker.

He retained the traits of his Puritan ancestors and New England training, industry and frugality, neighborly kindness and strict integrity leaving to his children a noble example for them to imitate.

JOHN FAY (226).

He was born in Reading, Vt., and when he was between nine and ten years old he, with his father, settled in Watertown, N. Y., in what was then called the "Black River county." His "Log Cabin" was almost entirely surrounded by an unbroken wilderness, where the wild bear and wolf held their midnight revels. It was easy to determine what his occupation was to be for years to come, for as he increased in years and gained in strength he was employed in felling trees, clearing up and fencing and reducing to cultivation the land which his father had purchased. He toiled on but the experience of each revolving year proved that this work was putting his powers of endurance to a severe test. Not being very robust by nature his constitution "recoiled" (as he expressed it) and it was evident that he must seek some other vocation for a living. He became anxious to add to his very limited education, and he lost no opportunity that would enable him to accomplish so desirable an end. Before he had attained his majority he engaged in teaching school and such was his success that he soon found he had a reputation for efficiency in that useful calling. In the summer of 1815 he passed over into Canada and taught school in the dominion of King George the Third, returning to his home in Watertown again in the Fall. He soon became enamored with the idea of studying the healing art and for about one year he was under the instruction of Dr. Reuben Goodale of Watertown, but in view of the hardships and fatigue incident to the profession, especially in a new country, he abandoned the study of medicine altogether.

The year of 1816 proved a year of adversity to him, for a great portion of the time "fever and ague" was his constant companion. Soon after his prospects brightened, he was elected constable and collector of the town of Watertown. He was appointed deputy sheriff also soon after, which arrangements proved to him a great boon as the kind of exercise the discharge of his official duties involved had a salutary effect upon his constitution, and he held these positions including three years as sheriff, for the space of 18 years. While acting in the capacity of "Under Sheriff" he was called upon by the sheriff of Jefferson Co., N. Y., officially to assist in the public execution of one Evans, who had been convicted of the crime of murder. Evans met his fate on the 22nd of Aug. 1828 at Watertown. As his conviction and execution were the first that ever occurred in that county it brought together a large concourse of people. Evans was an acquaintance of John Fay and he resolved he would never witness a similar transaction if he could avoid it, for he could never obliterate it from his memory.

He was a soldier in the war of 1812 at Sackets Harbor and there witnessed the execution, by shooting, of seven soldiers, for desertion and one by hanging for some other crime, under sentence of a court-martial, all in the presence of a large army, but the tragical character of the last mentioned scene could bear no comparison to the former one in his mind for he was satisfied that Evans was an innocent man. The witness who swore the murder upon him, "fled his country" a few days after the execution and public opinion was not slow in pronouncing Evans "not guilty of murder."

In the War of 1812, Mr. Fay in three short campaigns, on the frontier near Sackets Harbor in the 76th Regiment, N. Y. Militia, and in the absence of the adjutant of the regiment he performed the duty and received the pay that officer was entitled to during a considerable portion of the time he was in the service at that place. It was not his fortune to come in contact with the enemy, consequently his military achievements were neither numerous or very brilliant.

He was elected sheriff of Jefferson Co., Nov. 1828, and served one term of three years. During the 18 years, he was employed as constable, deputy sheriff and sheriff, when engaged in the execution of both civil and criminal processes, he encountered some sharp personal conflicts, but none of them are preserved among the family legends. He held a subordinate appointment in the Custom House department in the district of Sackets Harbor for the four years' administration of James K. Polk as president of the United States.

Mr. Fay narrates the following incident, to illustrate how ineffaceable early impressions sometimes prove. He is indebted to his mother and his uncle, Jedediah Stanley for the story, which occurred while they were on their way to Reading, Vt., on a visit, when he was between two and three years old. Stopping at a hotel for refreshments, it being in the winter, a negro came into the room, when his uncle caught him up in his arms, and approaching the negro, proposed that he should kiss him. He indignantly repelled the proposition exclaiming, "I wont: he is too crockey." Whenever this incident was referred to in after life, even when he had passd his "three score and ten years," he retained a vivid recollection of the novel and revolting appearance of the negro. He also speaks of the blazing fire in an old fashioned fire-place.

In 1839, he left Watertown and for the ensuing twelve years he resided in Lyme and Adams, same county. In 1850, he went west in search of a new home, which resulted in his resolve to emigrate to the "beautiful and glorious West." On the 5th day of April, 1851, with his family and effects, he embarked on the big Oxford near Sackets Harbor, for Detroit. During the first night they encountered a terrific thunder storm, but the captain of the boat had a crew of active and determined men and with their help he was master of the situation and they were borne safely through the peril. While the storm was raging they witnessed an atmospheric phenomenon, or what they called a Jack O Lantern, a small flickering light on the topmast about the size of a small candle which seemed to have settled on the mast, but it soon disappeared. After passing the Welland Canal the weather was pleasant and after eight days they landed in Detroit, Mich., where they shipped their goods for Chicago, while he and his family took the M. C. R. R. and remained in Chicago about three weeks waiting for their goods, finally reaching their home at Gage's Lake early in May, where they remained seven years engaged in agricultural pursuits. He afterwards went to the vicinity of Waukeegan, Ill., where his two sons George and William tilled the farm and where he spent the remainder of his life. It was not without many regrets that he left his old home in Jefferson Co., N.. Y., where he had lived nearly half a century, and passed within its borders the gay season of youth, the prime and vigor of manhood and the grave responsibilities of more advanced years; but he felt compensated where he finally spent his last days in his "Western home."

NAHUM FAY (351).

From "The History of Summit County," Ohio:

"Nahum Fay was born in Reading, Vt., July 26, 1811. He was educated in the common school and academy; raised on a farm and from eighteen years of age he taught school six consecutive winters; then entered the employ of the map publishing firm of Lewis Robinson & Co., as salesman and copperplate printer. In July 1836, he came to Akron, O., where the company established a map manufactory, working for the company summers and teaching school winters for six years.

"In Oct. 1843, he was elected county recorder and re-elected in 1846, holding the office six years and served as deputy county treasurer from 1849 to 1855. Afterwards as grain buyer for several years. Akron village recorder, 1842-43-47. Township clerk, 1844-45-46-47. Village councilman, 1844. Township assessor of personal property, 1847-51-52-54-61-62 and 1864. He also served several times as assessor of real estate, school enumerator, etc.

"In 1860, he commenced the manufacture of cordage twine, etc., by hand machinery, supplying the local market with that class of goods for more than 20 years."

He was twice married, had three children and was living in Akron, Ohio in 1897 in his 86 year.

BETSEY FAY (373).

She married Joel Norcross of Monson, Mass., whose ancestry can be traced back to about 1550, to Thomas Norcross who lived in London, Eng., and was a merchant there. His son Jeremiah was the first to come to this country in 1638 and settled in Watertown, Mass., in 1642.

The old homestead is where the United States Arsenal now stands (1885). It remained in the Norcross family until 1803, a period of 161 years. Mr. Norcross was one of the most prominent men in Monson and held many town offices and was county commissioner for many years. He was greatly interested in education and was one of the founders of Monson Academy, one of its largest benefactors and a trustee from its commencement in 1804 up to the time of his death, May 5, 1846. He was a merchant in the firm of William Norcross, Son & Co., from 1798 to 1803. He was also largely interested in the manufacture of cotton and woolen goods, being a large owner in the Hampden Cotton Manufacturing Co. He was very public spirited and did much to make Monson the beautiful little town it is today.

In the Hampden Journal and Advertiser of Sept. 16, 1829, is found the following obituary of Betsey (Fay) Norcross, who died Sept. 5, 1829, at Monson, Mass., wife of Joel Norcross, Esq.:

"When individuals who are pious, amiable and useful, are removed by death we may justly lament the event, and we may speak of their example for the benefit of others. Few have sustained with greater fidelity and propriety the duties of her station than Mrs. Norcross, humble and retiring in her disposition, it was in the bosom of her family and among those who observed her in domestic life that her prudence and affectionate devotion to the happiness of all around her appeared most conspicuous as a wife, a mother and a friend. The benevolence of her heart and her sincere frankness secured the confidence of all her acquaintance, alive to the affictions and sufferings of others, it afforded her the highest pleasure to administer to their relief. In the good works and alms-deeds which she did, she manifested, that she had imbibed largely the spirit of Him "who went about doing good." As a Christian she appeared to be without partiality and without hypocrisy. Under severe afflictions which she was repeatedly called to endure in the sickness and death of children and other friends, her character shone with greater brightness and she seemed to be ripening for that rest in heaven to which we have reason to hope she has gone. Peace of mind and even the joy of assured hope in Christ sustained her in her last illness and cheered her soul in death. The family though greatly afflicted are comforted with the hope that 'death to her was gain.' 'Blessed are those whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered and to whom the Lord will not impute iniquity.' "

RUFUS FAIRBANKS FAY (383).

He was a thrifty farmer and owned a farm bordering on the town of Palmer and about three miles from the meeting house in Monson, Mass., where he and his children felt it their duty and pleasure to go every Sabbath. He was greatly interested in the Congregational Church and his seat was never vacant unless sickness or the severity of the weather prevented. He was a good neighbor, a kind friend and one who was beloved by all.

The following is from the "Palmer Journal," 1859:

"Golden Wedding of Rufus Fairbanks Fay."

"It was the happy privilege of a large number of the children of Mr.

Fay of Monson, to meet at the home of their childhood and with their loved parents who still retain much of the vigor and joyousness of life and the little ones who enliven so many of their homes, to greet and bless each other in the happy celebration of their parents' and grandparents' Golden Wedding. The many choice gifts to the honored pair, the overflowing tribute of kindness and affection, the glad greetings and kind wishes for their future welfare and happiness, rendered the family meeting most cheering and lovely. The bridegroom and his bride at the good old age of 74 years and notwithstanding the trials and cares of so many sultry summers and the bleak winds and storms of cold winter, are yet youthful, at least, in joyous hearts and affections.

In the pleasant gathering of five sons and four daughters were mostly represented, although some were too far removed by our Great Father's call to meet no more on earth. All of the nine children have married and still live in the enjoyment of health, happiness and prosperity. Two sons and one daughter have each buried a loved companion. The sons have married again.

The wedded pair of 1809, with children, and children's children and their husbands and their wives, now bring an honored catalogue of forty-three. May life yet be long and pleasant to them all and if kind Heaven shall favor, may many a "Golden Wedding" yet be celebrated in this family and their friends of today be there to see.

WILLIAM B. FAY (388).

He was a farmer in the western part of Brimfield, Mass., near the Munson line. He was a member of the Congregational church in Brimfield and greatly interested in its affairs and although he lived nearly three miles from the church, he was accustomed to attend regularly. He was held in high esteem by the members of the parish as well as by all who knew him.

CHARLES PRESCOTT FAY (392).

Brother of William B. Owned a farm about two miles north of the Monson meeting house on the road to Palmer Depot and he was considered one of the best farmers in town. He was a useful member of society and highly esteemed by his neighbors and friends and by all who knew him, also by all who had business dealings with him. His death was truly a loss to the town of Monson.

CYRUS MASON FAY (431).

Son of Cyrus, was born on the 17th day of May, 1805. in the town of Northampton in the then county of Montgomery, N. Y. His earlier years were passed at home assisting his father; the season of labor being relieved by attendance at school during the winter months. Feeling a higher impulse stirring within him he sought an opportunity to procure a better education than the small village school could furnish. He commenced his career by teaching to provide the means necessary to gratify his desire for learning. Success followed him and in a short time he found himself pursuing his studies in Lowville Academy and after two years absence he returned to the parental roof prepared to enter college. Having thus demonstrated that he had the "stuff" in him his father provided him with the means of continuing his course of study. He entered Union College, N. Y., in 1828 and graduated with the class of 1831. During the whole period he pursued his studies with ardor and unusual success; than he, none can present a better, and few as perfect a record of scholarship and standing. In reply to a letter addressed to the venerable President Dr. Nott, it is stated, "He uniformly received the highest grade (100) in all his studies, mathematical and classical and the same likewise for his conduct and attendance."

Fully impressed with its responsibility and importance he adopted the profession of teaching, as most congenial and well calculated to yield a wealth of return in the virtue and intelligence it would call into existence in the world around him. Possessed of that frank, kindly nature that attracts the young and wins their love and confidence and of a natural talent for imparting instruction, he was admirably qualified for the profession of his choice.

In connection with E. E. Barney, a companion of his studies (now of Dayton, Ohio) he took charge of Lowville Academy, an institution that has sustained a high character. They entered with zeal on their responsible duties and in a very short time had the gratification of witnessing the happiest results in the flourishing condition of their institution. Such was the excellence of the system adopted and the noble spirit of generous emulation excited, it seemed that a new era in teaching was about to open, so rapid and thorough was the advancement of their pupils. Many an one can now date his first inspiring draught of the "Pierian Spring" to the efforts of these then young men just entering on the stage of action as if they would lay the world under contribution to science and learning.

After a few years Mr. Fay removed to Buffalo where he continued the office of teacher with uniform and justifying success and for a period of twelve years or more was well sustained by the most influential and wealthy of its citizens and at a later day had the charge of the public schools of the city. Early in 1849 owing somewhat to the confinement of the school room and the character of the climate of Buffalo, his health had failed him and consumption in the most rapid form seemed imminent.

Several of his acquaintances of Buffalo, excited by the stories of sudden wealth to be realized on the shores of the Pacific, were at this time forming a select company to proceed overland to the new found region of gold. Mr. Fay was advised by his physician that a trip across the plains would be calculated to arrest his disease and restore his health and his wife and friends ready to embrace any plan that promised relief, consented that he should make the venture. The company composed of twelve persons were in Cincinnati, Ohio, providing an outfit when he joined them and they soon after proceeded on their way supplied with everything health and comfort could suggest for their tedious journey. The bounds of civilized life had not been left far behind before some of their number were attacked by that terrible and mysterious scourge the Asiatic cholera. While they could they moved on in hopes of getting away from it but they fled in vain. Ere they reached Fort Larime, four of their number had found a last resting place on the boundless plains of the Far West. Among these were their physician and Col. Fay their commander, who served in the Mexican War. The cholera did not reach the Fort and after recruiting, the broken band resumed their toilsome march onward. Before they reached the South Pass their ample outfit had been mostly thrown away and abandoned and in crossing the plains they moved so slowly that fear of want and suffering before they would reach the Promised Land were entertained by some. Finally he and one other of the company separated from the others and pushed on over mountains and barren wastes. Mr. Fay some of the time being unable to mount and dismount his horse without assistance. After unusual hardships and privations they reached the Pacific side. Mr. Fay found a home with his relative, Capt. John B. Frisbie at Bienecia, where he passed the winter and ensuing summer most agreeably. His health returned and in his own estimation he became entirely well. Considerable of his time was passed in visiting various portions of the country and examining it in reference to its agricultural advantages intending to publish the result of his examination and his views of the country generally, on his return to New York. But this work with an account of his trip over the Plains was lost during his sickness at the time of his death. In August he prepared to return and left San Francisco in the steamer, Northerner, but was taken sick on the way and did not live to reach home. The sad intelligence that the husband, parent and brother, friend and Chritisan, was no more, fell like a funeral pall over wife and daughter, brother, sister and friend. Funeral services appropriate to the occasion were held in the North Presbyterian church, Buffalo, of which he was an elder.

Mr. Fay possessed a most genial disposition and the most agreeable social qualities. No selfish, unworthy motive ever had a place in his mind, he looked on the cheerful side and was more disposed to see good than evil in those around him.

At a meeting of the Buffalo Teacher's Association, held Feb. 3, 1851, Messrs. Dole, Stanton and Benedict were appointed a committee to express the sense of the association in regard to the death of Cyrus M. Fay, A. M. The resolutions they reported were unanimously adopted and published in the daily papers of that city and in the Journal of Education, and a copy was presented to the widow of the deceased.

ELI FAY (462).

He was a grandson of the late Benajah Fay, who came from Lewis Co., N. Y., with his family, to Cuyahoga Co., Ohio in 1816 and settled in Parma Township where he died when about 85 years old. The father of Eli Fay was Benajah Fay, Jr., who was born in "York State" in 1806 and consequently was ten years old when he with his father and the family came to Cuyahoga Co. His youth was spent in Parma township where he was married to Miss Lois Hodgman who was born in Boardman, Lincoln Co., in 1808. They first settled in Parma township, where they lived for some time and then removed to Brooklyn township where they resided till their death. The father died with cholera in 1849. The mother lived until Nov. 27, 1877. They had a family of four sons and one daughter.

Eli Fay was the eldest of the family. He was born in Parma township, April 22, 1828. He was quite young when his parents moved to Brooklyn township, where he grew to manhood and remained till he came to Middleburg township in 1865. Mr. Fay was married to his second wife, Miss Betsey E. Dunham, April 4, 1866 in Rockport township, Cuyahoga Co. She was born in Middleburg township April 2, 1842; she was a daughter of Almond and Eunice (Corbin) D. Mr. and Mrs. Fay have one son, Ira E. who married Ida West.

Mr. Fay has not been an office-seeker. In 1847 he went to Cleveland and learned the blacksmith's trade which he has followed in connection with farming. He owns 56½ acres, which he has improved and whereon he has erected good buildings. Mrs. Fay is a lady of education and intelligence, a member of the Congregational church.

JEREMIAH FAY (468).

This sketch is from "The History of Cuyahoga County, Ohio," p. 338. "Jeremiah W. Fay, a well known native and pioneer of Parma Township, was a son of the late Benajah Fay and Ruth (Wilcox) F. His father was born in Massachusetts in 1777, and his mother was a native of Lewis Co., N. Y., where she was born 1781. In 1816, they came to Cuyahoga Co., O., and settled in Parma Township where they lived till their death, he died March, 1862; she died Sept. 16, 1831. Jeremiah W. Fay was born March 8, 1822 in Parma Township were he was reared to manhood and where he has always resided. His principal occupation is farming, and he owns a farm of 78 acres which is well improved. He has held the office of township treasurer six years and that of township trustee for one term and has served as justice of the peace for three terms. He has taken an active part in all local affairs. In politics he is a Republican, taking a good degree of interest in these matters. He has been a member of the I. O. O. F. since 1855.

EMERSON FAY (476).

He was a surveyor and civil-engineer. He taught school 30 winters, till by overwork his health failed, and that painful trouble, the dropsy, developed and after suffering for two years and at great expense for physicians and other assistance, he was relieved by drinking a tea made from the leaf of the garden artichoke which reduced his size seven inches around his body the first week, since which time, for seven years he was able to attend to business. He was a prominent citizen frequently honored by the votes of his townsmen of New Salem to represent them in the State Legislature of Massachusetts. He was several times elected to office as Superintending School Committee, served as chairman of the Board of Selectmen, was assessor and overseer of the poor over twenty years, also engaged in probate and other public business under eight judges of probate in Worcester and Franklin Counties, Massachusetts, and was also a guardian of minors, spendthrifts and insane persons.

REV. LYSANDER FAY (477).

His parents were poor and hard working people and he was a striking example of industry and perseverance, his opportunities for an education in early life were limited to from eight to twelve week's session each year in a district school. He began to teach at the age of seventeen years and continued for nearly twenty years in this employment, having taught twenty-eight district and select schools, 92 writing schools, total 120 schools with nearly 4,000 pupils. He was desirous of taking a college course and had nearly fitted himself to enter college, when failing health and the care of his aged parents changed his plans.

In July, 1828, he united with the Baptist church in Athol, Mass., of which he was ever after an honored member. Sept. 5, 1830, he was appointed to preach. In 1834, he was ordained as an evangelist and his work was constant and well done. June 20, 1859, he says: "I have preached 3,092 sermons, attended 289 funerals, baptised 108 members and solemnized 149 marriages, labored in Erving, Warwick, South Orange, Petersham, Royalton, Wendell, Winchendon, and New Salem, and always resided on my father's farm in Athol and preached more or less in that town." As was truly said at his funeral, "all along these hills and valleys are scattered the faithful witnesses of his godly life and noble service."

In 1848 he was chosen to represent his town in the State Legislature.

BERIAH W. FAY (481).

He was born in 1819. His education was obtained in the public schools of and at New Salem Academy. In early life he was a popular school teacher, having taught in the Athol schools for eleven winters, conducted several select schools, and was teacher of penmanship.

About 1850, he took up surveying, and for nearly half a century he did much of that work in the towns of northwestern Worcester, and throughout Franklin County.

He was prominently identified with town and public business. In 1861, he was appointed a justice of the peace and in 1872 was elected one of the special commissioners of Franklin County, both of which positions he held continuously for over 25 years. In 1865 he was a member of the legislature, representing the district including New Salem, Orange and Warwick. For 39 years he was a member of the school committee of New Salem, serving most of the time as chairman of the board. He also served his town for several years as selectman, assessor and overseer of the poor and was recruiting officer for the town in 1864.

LEVI B. FAY (534).

He was born in 1843. During the late war he enlisted in Co. E., 53rd regiment and was with his regiment during its entire campaign in Louisiana and Mississippi.

In 1873, he entered into partnership with the late Orrin F. Hunt in the sale stable, carriage and sleigh repository business, and the firm of Hunt & Fay did an extensive business throughout this part of the country. This partnership was continued until Mr. Hunt's death, and since that time Mr. Fay has conducted the same business.

He is one of the leading business men of the town, a trustee of the Athol Savings Bank, of the Worcester Northwest Agricultural Society, and one of the executive committee of the Athol Board of Trade.

ELLEN DOUGLASS FAY (616).

She was born in Watertown, N. Y., and married at McConnelsville, Ohio, Oliver Hazzard Perry Scott. They emigrated to Farmington, Iowa, and resided there several years.

At the breaking out of the Rebellion in 1862, he raised a volunteer comapny of cavalry, received a commission as captain and was attached to Col. Bussey's regiment, the 3rd Iowa Cavalry. He and his oldest son, Straughn, belonged to the army of Gen. Curtis and took part in the bloody battle of "Pea Ridge" but came out unhurt. He led to a successful charge, a battalion of his regiment against a band of "Texan Rangers" vastly superior in numbers. Perhaps the best comment that could be made on his conduct was that he received a major's commission for gallant services rendered on that occasion. In 1863, he was stationed at Helena, Arkansas.

JAMES GAGE FAY (618).

He was born in Watertown, N. Y., and married July 1855 in Buffalo, N. Y., to Antionette Holmes. His occupation has been somewhat diversified. He served ten or twelve years in a flouring mill, but afterwards engaged in trade for five or six years, but the mercantile business not proving as successful as he anticipated, he retired to a farm; but was afterwards employed as a clerk in an Internal Revenue office in Chicago, Ill., and was also an insurance agent.

BENJAMIN WILLARD FAY (679).

He was born in Westboro, April 15, 1804. He was named after his mother's father, Benjamin Willard, Jr., who was a clockmaker, a brother of Simon and Aaron Willard also noted clockmakers. At the age of four years he with his parents moved to the farm of his great grandfather, Abraham Temple, in Grafton, where he ever after resided. At the age of nineteen years he was given his time and soon afterwards came in possession of the farm. His mother, brothers, and sisters living with him, he being the eldest of the family.

In 1823, he united with the church in Grafton. He was one of the seceding members when the church separated from the parish in 1832 and was ever a strong Trinitarian Congregationalist.

Aug. 11, 1833, he married Martha Brewer, daughter of Colonel Samuel Brewer of Wendell, Mass. She was a faithful and loving wife, a true helpmate, the forty-nine years they lived together and bravely performed life's duties the twenty years she survived him.

He was quite a horse and cattle dealer, buying them in Vermont and Canada, at first driving them down, later they were brought on cars. He was fond of a good horse.

He was interested in agriculture, being an active member of Worcester, Westboro and Grafton Agricultural societies. He was also interested in good roads, and petitioned the county commissioners for the re-location and grading of the county road from his residence to Westboro, which was granted.

He was a tax collector, when a young man, afterwards a member of the board of selectmen for three years.

The following is an obituary written by his pastor, Rev. John H. Windsor, shortly after his death:

"In the recent death of Mr. Benjamin Willard Fay the town has a valuable lesson on the worth of a contented life in cultivating the soil. He was born, brought up, lived, labored and died upon the homestead of his ancestors. The large and valuable farm has been in the possession of the family for more than a hundred years. Children of the third and fourth generation are today living on and developing the unexhausted acres.

"At the ripe age of seventy-three, in the presence of and attended by members of his own family; respected and relied upon by a large circle of neighbors and friends; for more than fifty years a member of the church at the centre of the town, he has been gathered home, "a shock of corn, in the autumn of nature as of life, fully ripe.'

"The influences of a life of industrious toil, quietly passed in tilling the land, may be of slow and even unnoticed growth, yet it is sure as the seasons and fruitful as the autumn tide."

FRANKLIN LEWIS FAY (699).

From the "Boston Journal" Sept. 11, 1895:

"Mr. Fay died at his home, No. 148 Commonwealth Ave., Boston this morning, aged sixty-seven years. He was widely known in the business community and was highly respected both in business and in private life. He went to Utica, N. Y. in early life, where he engaged in the shoe trade in company with a brother. About the year 1845 he went to Boston, engaged in the leather business on Fulton St., and continued there several years.

About 1850 he formed a partnership with Mr. Ellis Jones and under the firm of Fay & Jones carried on a wholesale boot and shoe trade. Subsequently the firm became Jones & Stone and in 1858 to Fay & Stone. In 1871 Mr. Fay retired from active business.

He was one of the originators and Directors of the "National Bank of the Republic" but severed his connection on the organiation of the "Manufacturers National Bank" in which he was a Director at the time of his death.

He leaves a widow, one son, and five daughters.

JOEL W. NORCROSS (765).

He was the youngest of the nine children of Betsey Fay and Joel Norcross of Monson, Mass., born 1821, Nov. 15th.

He is the author of a "History and Genealogy of the Norcross family" which he has deposited in the New England Historical Genealogical Society, for safe keeping and for the benefit of all who may be interested in the past history of the Norcross family. It contains the record of nine generations, about 400 families and 2000 children. He has traced back to about the year 1550. The first to come to this country was Jeremiah Norcross who arrived in 1638 and settled in Watertown, Mass., and was one of the earliest proprietors.

Mr. Norcross has also been much interested in the record of the "Fay Family", having collected material, and added to it the records of several hundred families that were traced by Rev. Abner Morse, which represents about 2300 children. This work he was employed to prepare by several of the prominent Fays in Boston and vicinity, and is also deposited in the New England Historical Genealogical Society.

Note—We have exchange records and corresponded largely for more than 10 years. O. P. Fay, Vermontville, Mich., Mar. 18, 1896.

RUFUS FAIRBANKS, JR. (771.)

He was asscoiated with Henry Merrick for over four years, the firm name being Merrick & Fay, in the manufacture of straw goods, doing a very extensive business in that line and employing many persons in their factory. They did much to add to the prosperity of the enterprising little town of Monson, Mass., and in his death Monson lost one of its most useful and esteemed citizens.

He passed his early life at the old homestead, enjoying in the winter season the benefits of such education as the common schools of his day afforded. After attaining the age of 21 he entered the mill of the Rockville Manufacturing Co., at Rockville, Conn., remaining there three years he returned to Monson and engaged in the manufacturing of straw goods (as above stated), making palm leaf hats, and the first Shaker hoods made in Massachusetts. This was the firm of Merrick & Fay and was one of the first straw goods manufactories in the country, and this co-partnership continued until the death of Mr. Fay in 1879. The firm extended their business from the making of Shaker hoods and other lower styles of straw goods, to the highest grade of straw goods, which always found a ready sale at remunerative prices.

While occupying a business standing in the community Mr. Fay always declined to accept any of the public offices that fell in his way, preferring to devote his entire time and attention to the conducting and developing of his business and family, believing that weakness is the natural result of divided duties.

He was a member of the Congregational Church, uniting in 1828.

FARWELL F. FAY (800.)

He was a successful teacher in the Athol schools, and was the second principal of the High School, which position he relinquished to engage in the study of law in the Harvard Law School, entering the school at Cambridge in 1857. He was admitted to the bar in 1859, appointed Justice of the Peace for Worcester County, and for many years had a large and lucrative practice in Athol.

In August, 1862, he recruited Co. E of the 53rd Regiment, of which he was chosen Captain September 13, 1862, and was commissioned by Gov. Andrew of Massachusetts five days later. At the time of the surrender of Port Hudson he was in command of the regiment. In July, 1864, he was commissioned as Assistant Adjutant General of Massachusetts to recruit for the commonwealth in the Department of Mississippi, in which he did successful work.

In 1862 he represented his district in the Legislature, was president of the Worcester Northwest Agricultural Society in 1868, and also represented that society for three years as its delegate on the State Board of Agriculture.

The last years of his life were spent in Boston, where he was engaged in the practice of the law, and where he died in 1888.

SERENO E. FAY (810.)

In early life he was a school teacher, having taught for six years in Athol and adjoining towns. He engaged in the grocery business in 1861 in what is now known as the City Hotel block, where he remained for five years, when he purchased the property on the opposite side of the street, where he continued the business for twenty-two years. When he retired from business, in 1888, there was not a person in the village in trade that had continued in business that length of time. He was for several years a member of the School Committee.

Othello A. Fay

He has been prominently identified with the Baptist Church for many years, having been clerk of the church for more than twenty years, and also for several years was Superintendent of the Sabbath School. At this date, 1897, he is caring for his aged mother, who is 91 years old. She had the misfortune to receive an injury that caused fracture of the hip and for ten weeks he cared for her night and day. He writes that probably her limb will always be perfectly useless, and that she will need hourly care. She died Feb. 3, 1898, In 1895 Mr. Fay and his brother (No. 822) visited the principal cities of the Eastern continent, in company with 450 others from 32 of the States and Canada. He wrote 40 letters, which were printed in the local papers of Athol. (Note received too late for insertion here).

OTHELLO A. FAY (822.)

He is the youngest son of Rev. Lysander Fay. When 18 years of age he went to work in the sewing machine shops at Orange, where he continued for three years. He then entered into partnership with his brother Sereno E., in the grocery business, which they continued for twenty-two years. They had stores in both villages, Othello A., having charge of the store in Athol Centre.

He has been engaged in the lumbering business for more than fifteen years, operating extensively all through Massachusetts, and is now (1897) engaged in that and the brokerage business.

Mr. Fay is one of the most prominent Masons in this part of the country, having taken the degrees of that order up to the thirty-second. He has been a director of the Athol National Bank for several years.

REV. AMASA C. FAY (848.)

He was converted when 19 years of age and 12 years later he was called to the General Secretaryship of the Y. M. C. A., of Gloucester, Mass., where he remained nearly two years, after which he pursued the same work for six months in Middleboro, Mass. In Dec. 17, 1890, he was called to supply the pulpit at Southville, Mass., which he accepted, and in a few months was licensed to preach by the Middlesex Association of Ministers. Dec. 3, 1891, he was regularly ordained to the Christian ministry by a council of eleven Congregational churches in Central Massachusetts.

His educational advantages were not of the regular line, as it was not his privilege to pursue the regular course incident to the ministry, but he studied as best he could and qualified himself for the work which the Lord had in many respects gloriously blest where he had labored. He remained in Southville one year and eight months and Aug. 14, 1892, he began his work in Fitzwilliam, N. H., where he is still preaching (in 1896).

JANE FAY (912.)

Eldest daughter of Benjamin Willard Fay, married May 1, 1860, Benjamin Alden Nourse, only child of Joseph Joslin and Sarah A. Nourse, born in Westboro, Mass., July 19, 1836.

His father died when he was not quite two years old, leaving the son to the faithful and judicious care of his mother. Through her efforts he early began to develop those habits of character which rendered his life such a blessing not only to his family, but to the community where he lived. A bright active boy, the first in all his classes, it was no light trial to see his classmates leave home to prepare for college while he must remain to assume the burden of the farm and share in the care of an invalid grandfather. Though denied the advantages of the college, he was an educated man, making the most of the opportunities at his command. He was a thorough Bible student. Amid all the cares of later life nothing was allowed to interfere with the short study of the Sunday school lesson in the family each morning.

At the age of 13 years he united with the Congregational Church of Westboro, in connection with which he showed such a consecrated life that at the early age of 25 years he was unanimously chosen to the office of deacon, which he held during his life, discharging the duties with rare fidelity. Neither summer's heat or winter's cold kept him from taking the drive of two and a half miles to be present and give some help at all meetings of the church. He was superintendent of the Sunday school many years.

His love for the Master he served and the church of his fellowship was his very life. He was honored and trusted by his fellow-townsmen as one who would always use his influence for the right.

He served on the School Committee several years and was on the Board of Selectmen from 1872 to 1876. He twice represented the town in the State Legislature, the first time in 1876 and again in 1896, holding that office at the time of his death.

He was a progressive farmer from his youth, successfully carrying on the large farm on which he lived. He belonged to the Worcester and to the Westboro Agricultural Societies and was an esteemed member of the Westboro Grange. He was a strong and unyielding temperance advocate, but always courteous in bearing wherever he might be or whatever opposition he might meet.

He died afer a short illness, Feb. 2, 1897. Three sons survive him. Two—Willard Joslin and Ernest Morrison—graduated at Amherst College, and are lawyers in Colorado. Arthur Merriam graduated from the Agricultural College at Amherst, Mass., and with his mother is on the old homestead.

DAVID FAY 2 AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

He inherited the homestead on the north side of Clean Hill. He settled in that part of Marlboro which was set off to Southboro, east of Wolfpen Hill, and with Robert Horn, about 1731, built a grist mill on Stony Brook in the southeast part of the town.

He united with the church April 2, 1710. Before the incorporation of the town of Southboro he was placed on a committee to seat the meeting in Marlboro, and the next year he was chosen Constable of Southboro, where he was also elected Selectman in 1730, 1733 and 1735.

He was by occupation a weaver.

His wife at the time of her marriage was an heir to Edward Larkin of Charlestown, where he and his wife, Sarah, Jan. 27, 1709-1710, sold for $150, to Joseph Kent of Charlestown, land formerly owned by John Larkin. Jan. 28, 1706-1707, he exchanged land with Isaac Temple.

He and his family, also the families of Moses Newton, John Newton, Widow Johnson, Moses Newton, Jr., and James Cady, were assigned to the "Garrison" of Isaac Howe for protection from the Indians.

Biographical Sketches of the Descendants of David Fay

DEA. JOHN FAY (6.)

The town right of his ancestor, David, purchased of Peter Bent, which his uncle John of Westboro had drawn sundry lots, was wholly partly inherited by him, for it was in his possession, and by him sold in 1 "for a valuable sum." He sold June 5, 1770, to John Mathis of Marlbor 16 acre "right," which had been bought of Peter Bent to be taken up in common land of Marlboro. He settled where his great grandson, Ebene afterwards resided in Southboro, and commenced with a log house.

Tradition says he was a man of ardent devotion and chose as his a a place beside a rock in a graveyard near his house, to which he wo repair every morning to offer up his private devotions to Him who is Lord of the morning and evening. He was elected deacon of the church Southboro in 1766, and was chosen Selectman eight times in ten years. was Town Treasurer three years. In 1768 he was honored with the comma of a military company.

Living at a time when the rights and privileges of the Colonies w contested by the British Parliament, a public man like John Fay could be neutral, nor did he hesitate for a moment when the resolution was ta not to import, nor purchase of importers, or consume articles on which G Britain had imposed a duty for the purpose of raising a revenue in Ame to sustain the home government.

A covenant was drawn up in which the signers "solemnly pledge th selves to non-importation and non-consumption of articles thus taxed." covenant bears the name of John Fay and ten others of the name of Fay that this "family" united cordially with the other patriotic citizens of So boro in adopting those measures which in the end completely baffled arbitrary acts of Parliament and gave us a place among the nations of earth.

ROBERT FAY (8.)

In 1749 he purchased of Jacob Wheeler a farm situated in South about one and a half miles east by south from the center, where he is posed to have reared his great family of 20 children, which could ha have allowed him time to serve the public in any office. He however, Surveyor and Collector of Taxes in 1747, Constable in 1755, Tythingman in 1763 and 1768. He served in the French and Indian and attained the rank of Captain before the close of the war.

An unparalleled circumstance occurred with Robert Fay and his bro

. Each married two wives, and had 20 children. Each wife had ten en, and of each wife's children there were seven sons and three daugh- total in the two families of 28 sons and 12 daughters. Tradition renders ain that Aaron duplicated the family of his brother in every particular.

ike his brother Robert, he also served in the French and Indian Wai tained the rank of Captain before the close of the war. He, too, had 20 en, ten by each wife, and of each wife's children seven were sons and were daughters.

le settled on the Stow farm in the southeast part of the town of South- Nearly on Stony Brook he built a mill, which was afterwards rebuilt by randson, Col. Fay. Afterwards he moved to the original seat of the north of Clear Hill, where he spent his last days, and left an accumu- of family papers which were totally destroyed in consequence of their id illegible, antique character, and with them much of the early history family is supposed to have perished. He appears to have paid no l to the registration of his children.

'he old house in which he is supposed to have been born and in which d, was a good representation of the best class of dwellings first erected arlboro and is supposed to have been built by his grandfather, John, diately after King Philip's War. It was a two-story house, sharp roof, wo large rooms below and two chambers. A back linter was at a later l added to the original house. It was pulled down in 1795 except one chambers, which had a superior finish, was let down and preserved thin a few years, but has, like the precious old papers, been utterly de- ed. The ancient elms in front of the place hold their own, but are said not ve expanded in the recollection of the latest generations. The well or north of the house, from which he first dipped his beverage, is now in the meadow, a few paces from the bank, deprived of a dry walk to obably by the decay and evaporation of the great roots that lifted the nd made a walk.

He filled various town offices, was Tythingman in 1766, 1767 and 1768, seer of the Poor 1767 and 1768, Selectman 1769, 1774, 1775, 1776 and and was a Captain in the Southboro militia.

He died very suddenly in his carriage near the Stony Brook Depot in boro.

JOHN FAY (29.)

He enlisted early in the War of the Revolution. He was in the Battle of er Hill, where his right and left hand man were shot down, and the stock own gun was shattered in his hands by a musket ball from the enemy. as in several campaigns and returned to Marlboro and married Lovina nam. His first two children were born in Marlboro, from which place ent to Fitzwilliam, N. H., where the rest of his children were born and he died aged 83 years. He lived to see the first born of the fifth gen- on, viz., Abel Angier. His widow, Lovina, died 1841.

ing to Fitzwilliam when the town was new and there being no mill in lace, he is said to have carried a sack of flour from Marlboro to his new , a distance of fifty miles, on his back.

He was Captain in the militia.

MOSES FAY (39.)

He spent the early part of his life in and about Southboro, Mass. He waiter to a chaplain in the Revolutionary Army named Fessenden. He af wards lived in Barre, Mass. (which was the northwestern part of Rutlar and was made a town in 1774. He had three children, some or all of th born in Barre—Samuel, Betsey and Polly. In 1778 a deed was given in Winchester, N. H., by Moses Fay, hou wright, to Moses Fay, Jr., Yeoman, signed as to "right of dower" by Han Fay. resided in Southboro.

DEA. HEZEKIAH FAY (127.)

He was a carpenter, farmer, and Revolutionary soldier. Tradition says, ne Revolutionary service he was once attached to a body of men called Briar Hill Guard and stationed near New York. The enemy entering city at the time, were so near capturing them that he felt himself to be risoner. At this crisis General Putnam arrived, having ascertained the ar Hill Guards were not called in he left the retreating army for their ue, and succeeded in drawing them off in safety. This brave act, so itly performed, excited such emotions of gratitude and admiration in Mr. that he declared if he ever had a son his name should be Putnam. That esponding action followed these emotions may be seen by the record of family, as his first born was named Putnam.

Soon after his marriage he settled upon a small farm and for many s divided his time between agriculture and mechanical pursuits. There g a "mill privilege" on his premises, in process of time he erected a mill thereon, and for awhile performed the part of miller. He was ored with civil and military offices and was also deacon of the church, as his father before him.

His son Willard was a farmer occasionally engaged in other business, ne time manufacturing cabinet ware at Reading, Mass., when about 48
s of age he advertised for a wife; responding to this call the postage on returned to Mass. and in Sept. he married Sophia Nichols, also born in Fr ingham in 1785, and came to Portland, the second time arriving in November.

He was in the War of 1812 at Black Rock and Buffalo. He was the oldest settler in town in 1873. Mr. and Mrs. Fay were converted in 1817 and joined the Methodist church and afterwards the division known as Wesleyan and were zealous and influential members. Mrs. Fay died Oct. 1850, and was buried in Evergreen Cemetery. He was a farmer and died Jan. 31, 1881 in P.

NATHANIEL FAY (220).

He was born Jan. 25, 1785, in Westboro, Mass., and went to Portland, N. Y., in the spring of 1806, with his brother Elisha. He located on part of lot 12, June 10, 1810, in 1873 owned by his son Franklin. In July 1816 he was married to Lydia Barnes, daughter of Calvin Barnes, who was born Jan. 17, 1798, in Norway, Herkimer Co., N. Y.

Mr. Fay was a man of sterling integrity and was much in town office, once elected Supervisor. He was in the War of 1812 at Black Rock and Buffalo. He was a farmer, in religion a Universalist, in politics first a Democrat and afterwards a Republican. He died May 15, 1853, and his wife died Sept. 4, 1872.

HOLLIS FAY (231).

He was born in Southboro? Mass., Apr. 10, 1793 and went to Portland, N. Y., with his brother Elijah in 1811. In 1818 he returned to Mass. and married Phebe Mixer and started for Portland with ox team and covered wagon, being six weeks on the road. Resided on their farm until 1851, then went to Corry, Erie Co., Pa. They were both members of the Baptist church.

Mr. Fay was a Whig, afterwards a Republican and never failed of voting at an election from the time he was old enough to vote. He died July 27, 1868, and his wife died Oct. 19, 1868; both were buried in Westfield and Portland Union Cemetery.

He was a miller and a farmer, having owned three mills of his own. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and was at Buffalo at the time the British burned that place.

COL. ARTEMAS FAY (270).

He married Hannah Dickerman, daughter of John of Hopkinton, a descendant of Thomas Dickerman of Boston, originally from Lincolnshire, England. Her father was one of the boys who threw the tea overboard in Boston harbor, and greatly aided the Whigs of 1775 in smuggling arms and ammunition out of Boston. Col. Fay enlisted in the Continental army and served in different capacities during most of the war. He drew a pension for years previous to his death, Mar. 6, 1873, in the 82d year of his age.

He is mentioned in the Southboro Records as Sealer of leather in 1825, Selectman 1826, 1827, 1829, 1830, 1833 and 1834. He became a member of the Pilgrim Evangelical Society in Southboro, 1832. He was engaged in trade as a manufacturer of boots, shoes and bonnets.

ELIJAH FAY (272).

At the age of seventeen he went to Roxbury, an apprentice to Abijah Marion, to learn the trade of tanning leather. He remained there about two years, then went to Northboro and served about two years more as an apprentice in currying leather. When he was twenty-one he was master of trade. He then went to Paxton in business for himself, continuing there four years and soon after was married to Martha W. Knight, Nov. 19, 18

Her father, Isaac Knight, was among the first to volunteer in the defe of the Colonies.

Soon after the birth of Mr. Fay's first child he moved from Paxton Southboro, where four more children were born. Here he added to his bu ness that of manufacturing shoes, which, however, did not prove to be v lucrative on account of the hard times and money panic that followed election of Gen. Jackson as President of the United States and the enfor ment of his policy of modifying the tariff, removing the deposits from banks and vetoing the bill for renewing the charter of the U. S. Bank. T country was not prepared for such revulsions in trade and Mr. Fay w among the sufferers. After losing what property he had accumulated sought other means by which he could sustain himself and support his you and growing family. Moving to McDonough, N. Y., he engaged in lumber business, remained one year, had one more child, then went to Ad son, N. Y., continued in the business of manufacturing lumber and raft it down the Canisto and Susquehannah rivers, and finding a market fo in Harrisburg and Baltimore. While living in Addison he had three m children, making nine in all. In the spring of the year 1836 he had a la quantity of lumber which he constructed into rafts to float it down the ri and in passing one of the numerous rapids in the Susquehannah, his ra were stove to pieces and in a few moments the labor of the past winter a the wealth he had accumulated in the business that had for the last five six years proved successful, was floating beyond his control, while he a his men narrowly escaped with their lives. Thus was the entire product years of industry destroyed by an accident that was beyond his control, a left him without means of support and with large liabilities against him a time when every branch of industry was embarrassed; but he never tered, his trust was in Him who has said, "the righteous shall not be saken nor his seed beg for bread."

His family beginning to be of an age whereby they could be of so help to him in farming, he resolved in the early part of 1837 to move w where lands were cheap and productive, conscious that he could better condition and support his family with greater ease. In the month of May started with his goods and chattels and children and wife, going by canal crossing the "Lakes" in a schooner, arriving late in June at Racine, Wis., while his crops were maturing, for days and weeks all the bread his fam had to eat was made of buckwheat flour that they ground in a coffee m there being no mills within two or three days' travel, and as he had no ho team, this was the only alternative. Among his new acquaintances he fo warm friends, whose kindness and sympathy helped to sustain him unt length a brighter day dawned upon his pathway.

In 1840 he moved to Elgin, Ill., where his brother, Rice Fay, had b living. His brother Harrison was also living about forty miles from Rac at a place called "Big Bull Flats." Mr. Fay rented the farm of his bro Rice, (who had been living in Elgin for several years) and carried on dairy for two years, and farmed other lands in the vicinity. In a short ie had so improved his condition that he bought lands of his own, and with he help of his boys, they opened their new home, and soon luxuriant fields of rain and beautiful groves of trees decorated their prairie home as the re- ard of their untiring industry, where he was enjoying the fruits of his own oil in 1859.

He was a man of more than ordinary force of character, above the me- lium height and size and quite fleshy, his weight being about 220 pounds. lis operations in business were upon a scale of more than ordinary enterprise nd were it not that accident and misfortune befell him, his plans of business vere of sufficient magnitude to have numbered him among the most exten- ive and successful operators of our country. When embarrassed by losses, nd tried by adversity he never faltered, nor became discouraged, but tried gain to better his condition and by so doing, in his old age he had a com- etency upon which he could lean, and his children and grandchildren were lways welcomed around his board, while he and his beloved consort always njoyed their visits, as they partook of the delicious fruits of their own hand lanting. They had always had a standing with the Baptist church, in which aith they had the pleasure of seeing most of their children enrolled. He was deacon in the church for many years and was also Justice of the Peace and ommissioner of Highways. He was a man of few words, and of stern in- egrity. His wife had more of the emotional nature, always cheerful and appy, which rendered their home pleasant and agreeable.

JONAS FAY (309).

About two years after Jonas married, during the last war with Great ritain, at the time the British burned Buffalo, the settlers hearing that the ritish and Indians were coming, many of them volunteered to go against he enemy. James and Jonas, sons of Israel, and Levi, son of Timothy Fay, vere among the volunteers. In the battle that followed Jonas was killed by he Indians, as was supposed. Three weeks after the battle, Jesse Fay, brother f Jonas, and Mr. Hoar, father-in-law of Jonas, went on to the battlefield in uest of their friends. They opened a pit in which eight of the dead bodies vere buried, and found the body of Jonas. He had been shot through the ody and tomahawked. James Fay was taken prisoner and taken to Canada, vhere he remained until his brother Jesse procured his release.

EDWARD FAY (343).

He was born and lived in Plainfield, Mass., until he became of age, when e moved to Vermont and married his cousin, Sally Day, a daughter of Sam- el and Joanna (Fay) Day. Samuel Day was a former resident of Plainfield, nd was a soldier in the Revolutionary army from the time of the battle of unker Hill until the final surrender of Cornwallis at Yorktown.

Edward Fay was a resident of Jericho, Vt., for more than fifty years. Ie was a farmer and a Free Will Baptist preacher. He was an invalid for orty years previous to his death in 1860. His youngest daughter, Betsey, vho lived in the house in which he died and cared for him in the long ill- ess, writes as follows: "My father was a traveling preacher and he was read- ng or studying his sermons nearly all of his time. I never heard him say nything about his ancestors. He was confined to the same room I now occupy for six years, and my husband took care of him. His was a triumphant death."

DEA. ALVAN FAY (360).

The following obituary is from the Rockford, (Ill.) Daily Gazette: "Dea. Alvan Fay died at the residence of his son, Orson C. Fay, of this city, June 16, 1881, at the age of 83 years, 9 months. He was born in Holland, Mass., Sept. 19, 1797. When seven years old his parents moved to Madison Co., N. Y. At the age of twenty he united with the Baptist church of Smithfield, later known as Fenner. In 1820 he was married to Roxselina Ballou with whom he lived fifty-two years. She died Dec. 1872. The February after her death he left the old homestead, severed his connection with the church, where for many years he had been an efficient member and a deacon, and came to Rockford and identified himself with the First Baptist church. For three months before his death he suffered with dropsy, but he bore with patience his affiiction, yet longing for the end to come."

On the last Sabbath of his life he said he hoped never to see another Sabbath's sun on earth. His wish was gratified, for ere another one dawned he was rejoicing with his Saviour in heaven.

LUKE FAY (404).

Being one of ten children, he was largely the life and light of a most affectionate family circle; idolized by his father, adored by his mother, and devoutly loved by his brothers and sisters. Many persons surrounded by influences of this nature, become overbearing in their disposition, but in his case these things seemed to make his life more simple, correct and unassuming, becoming not only an example but an adviser of every member of the family and in his intuitive judgment all placed the greatest reliance. It was as natural for him to do right as it was to exist, and we can recall no act during his life time which needed rebuke or reprimand, instead of that he was a peacemaker in any differences among his friends and neighbors. His actions were exponents of moral principle and upon that basis of right he could never be diverted. If any one trait of his character was more desirable than another, it was his constant fidelity as a follower of the Golden Rule which clung to him to the end, and when on his death bed, unable to move, unable to read, unable to speak, one could decipher from the expression on his countenance the sentiment evidently uppermost in his mind which he was powerless to utter, "It is God's will, Thy will, O Lord, be done.".

He was in the wholesale pork business in Faneuil Hall Market for many years, retiring about 1840. He never had a partner. His residence was on Hancock St., Boston, No. 11, where he lived and died. His children had always the greatest respect for their father and were always taught to believe that whatever he did or said was right beyond any question. He was as constant at church as the day came around, and but once does any one remember of his absence. He attended Dr. Barret's church.

Of the nine children of Luke Fay, in 1886, seven were living; of twenty-eight grandchildren, seventeen were living, and eleven great grandchildren living out of eighteen. He was sixty-seven when he died.

The newspapers of the day gave obituaries of his life as being one of Boston's most honored citizens.

COL. DEXTER FAY (420).

Fayville, Mass., was named in honor of a large portion of its former business men, among whom was Col. Dexter Fay. He commenced life in poverty, but with energy, perseverance and pluck he made his way up "the ladder of life." He filled nearly every office in the town and four times he represented it in the General Court. He was frequently put on important committees. He rose from a private to the Colonel of his Regiment and filled the office well.

He commenced business as a butcher and afterwards built a small store about fourteen feet square, but his trade so increased that he had to enlarge his store from time to time, which soon became a famous place for trade and eventually the yearly sales exceeded $125,000. His brothers were formerly more or less interested with him in this business. He was also a farmer and a noted cattle dealer and was a constant attendant at the Brighton cattle market for forty years, selling the fat cattle for the farmers of the town, as well as the adjoining towns, and in the Fall of the year he would bring in large droves of cattle to sell the farmers, by that means he was a great benefit to the town.

His honor and his word never passed at a discount. He was the savings bank of the town for more than thirty years. In the latter part of his life he gave up his business to his sons, Emery B., Caleb T. and Sylvester C. He was a level-headed, cool, dispassionate man and was frequently consulted for advice.

COL. FRANCIS BALL (423).

He was born in Southboro. His parents were poor and his schooling consisted of a few weeks attendance during the winter months before he was fourteen years old. He had no books, but his thirst for knowledge led him four miles away to borrow and almost commit to memory the dozen books which constituted the library of a retired sea captain. He served various families in different capacities until his sixteenth year when he engaged in a country store. At eighteen he bought his time of his father for $80 a year until he should be twenty-one, at which time by the closest economy he had saved as a capital $50.

During the winter of 1811 and 1812 he "tended the public scales" in Dock Square, Boston, near Faneuil Hall. During 1812 and 1813 he found employment in a stall at Boyleston Market and drove a market wagon between Southboro and Boston. In 1814 during the embargo, he made three trips with horse and wagon to Philadelphia and Baltimore with leghorn straw bonnets that he collected in the towns near Southboro, and next we find him butchering and driving a meat cart in Southboro and vicinity; his hours of labor being from two in the morning to six or eight in the evening. Soon after he opened a grocery business in Boston and became also purchasing agent of straw goods for a Philadelphia firm.

From 1816 to 1824 he was very active in the militia of Worcester Co., holding various offices, and rose from private to be Colonel of the regiment and came very near being Brigadier General. It was a "tie vote" between him and Col. Lee of Templeton, and after spending one day in voting, the contest was given up and they put in Col. Holman of Bolton. He was a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company from 1821 t 1823. His military commissions of Governors Brooks and Eustis are preserved. From 1817 to 1821 he was a postmaster and proprietor of a countr store in Southboro. In 1822 he became a partner at Southboro of hi brother Dexter, who was for so many years a highly respected merchan in that town.

He represented his town in the General Court three times, filled man of the important offices of his town, always discharging his duties faithfully He represented the county of Worcester as Senator, and in 1824 was appointed its Deputy Sheriff and held that position six years.

In 1831 he became agent for the Chelsea Ferry and Land Company removing to Boston for that purpose, and in that capacity he superintended the laying out of most of the early streets of Chelsea, and purchase the first ferry boats that ran from that place to Boston. In 1833 he remove to Chelsea, building the seventh house in that place. Here he represente the district in the Legislature in 1834, 1835, 1836 and 1840, and in 1843 an 1845 was Senator for Suffolk County.

About this time he entered the wholesale grocery business in Nort Market street, Boston, forming with Lyman Farwell the firm of "Fay & Farwell," which firm afterwards established a branch house at St. Loui Mo., under the style of L. & A. G. Farwell & Co. Lyman A. and A. G Farwell being the resident partners. Later, with Hon. Thomas G. Care as special partner, the well known house of Fay & Farwell was forme which for a number of years did the largest western produce commissio business in Boston. This partnership terminated in 1851., A. G. Farwe having sold his interest in 1846 to Frank B. Fay. Col. Fay during thes years as a merchant fully sustained the reputation which he had alread earned as one whose "word was as good as his note," and it has always bee a modest pride with him that in all the various callings in which he ha engaged, he was never called upon to pay less than a hundred cents on dollar.

In 1852 he was elected a member of Congress from the Essex distric (which then included Chelsea) to fill the vacancy caused by the death c Hon. Robert Rantoul. He was the originator of the reform school for girl and in 1854 he became associated with John H. Wilkins and Henry B. Rodgers as commissioners to select the location, prepare the plans and a syster of organization and government for what is now "The State Industri School for Girls," at Lancaster. Acting in this capacity the commissione raised $20,000 by private subscriptions in addition to the State appropriatio of $20,000, purchased 100 acres of land, erected four buildings arranged o the family system, "for the instruction and employment, and reformation c exposed, helpless, evil disposed and vicious girls." Here he acted as truste with energy and enthusiasm until 1864, and he has often been called 'th father of the institution.

In addition to these various callings he was the first President of th Chelsea Savings Bank, for many years director of the First National Ban of Clinton and of Boston, Clinton & Fitchburg Railroad. In 1857 he wa elected the first Mayor of Chelsea, declined re-election and removed t South Lancaster in 1858, in order to be near the Industrial school for gi which he was so deeply interested. In 1868 he was elected Senator from orcester County, being then seventy-five years of age.

During his whole life he was a generous, but unostentatious contributor y purse, talents and time to worthy objects, whether of private charity or ublic weal. A notable example of his public benefactions was his donation f $500 to the town of Southboro for a public library (Peter Fay of South-oro says it was $1,500). In presenting this gift to the citizens of that town e spoke as follows: "Fellow Citizens: Fellow Townsmen: I was born Southboro, nurtured, rocked and reared in your midst. I am one of you nd you are dear to me and now as you are dear to me, nd my heart and hand are drawn to you in affection and as e enlightenment and elevation of your minds are things near y heart, therefore if all together, or any one of you will give a like sum, will give these 500 pieces of silver to form the nucleus for a town library, hich shall be free for all the inhabitants of the town to use for their imrovement and for their children's children forever." The town approprited an equal sum and directed that as a token of their esteem for the gen-rous donor it should be called "The Fay Library." (History of Worcester).

He was emphatically a "self made man," keen in his judgments, suc-essful in business, respected and honored in the several communities in hich he lived, social, genial, intelligent and honest. His early want of oportunity for acquiring knowledge was always regretted and he never ceased be a student. At fifty years of age he applied himself under private intruction to the study of English and Latin grammar.

His face was always lighted up with a smile and he had a good word for verybody. He one day went into the office of Banker Willis on State street nd said, "Mr. Willis, I have all the money I want in this world." Mr. Willis king him by the hand, said, "I want you to go with me to the protograph ffice. I want your picture taken to hang up in my office; I want to show every man who comes into my place that there is one man who has all he money he wants in this world. Truly it is not all of life to live."

In 1869 the "Golden Wedding" of Mr. and Mrs. Fay was celebrated, ut owing to the infirmities of Mrs. Fay the visitors were composed entirely f relatives, about forty of whom were present. Several who could not be here sent words of congratulation and respect to the aged pair; many eautiful presents and bouquets were given. The children of Mr. and Mrs.
ay, partaking of the like impulses always manifested in the actions of their arents, presented their father and mother with a splendid china breakfast nd dinner set, embellished with gold band and letter F, and dates 1819 and 869. Hon. Frank B. Fay, their oldest son, made the presentation speech.
ther presents with speeches were presented, to which Col. Fay responded nd concluded by thanking the donors for the various manifestations of love nd good will towards himself and his companion, after which the company artook of a bountiful repast provided for the occasion.

Mr. Fay died Oct. 6, 1876, aged 83 years, at South Lancaster, Mass., nd the funeral services were held at his late residence. Rev. George M. artol, who had been his pastor of late years, officiated. After the services in outh Lancaster the remains were taken to Chelsea and services were held the Church of the Redeemer, and was numerously attended by all classes of citizens. All the places of business were closed and the several flags wer at 'half mast" out of respect to the occasion. The present members of th city government, as also many past members, attended in a body and man festations of respect were general. Rev. George M. Bartol, on account c the sickness of Professor C. H. Leonard, who had been Mr. Fay's pasto in Chelsea, pronounced the eulogy, which was brief but it was a beautifu and truthful tribute, full of respect, affection and love. The casket wa borne to the hearse and under the escort of members of the city governmen the remains were taken to Woodlawn cemetery, and while the funeral cor tege was passing through the city the fire alarm bells were tolled. At meeting of the Chelsea Bank directors, resolutions were read.

HON. SULLIVAN FAY (425).

He filled about every office in the town of Southboro to the acceptanc of his fellow townsmen and was frequently called to important committees i the town. He represented the town in the General Court three years, wa Senator one year for Worcester county, was a member of the constitutiona convention, postmaster for a number of years, Justice of the Peace, Truste of the "Fay Library," President and director of the Framingham Bank clerk of the Agricultural Branch Railroad Company, President of a medica college in Worcester, Mass., a conveyancer of real estate, and at one tim had thirty estates on his hands to settle.

He was a feeble man in body all his life, but he did more brain work tha any man of his age that ever lived in Southboro.

These three brothers, Dexter, Francis B., and Sullivan, were cradled i poverty, but it never took away any of their manhood but made it brighte They commenced at the lower round and gradually ascended to the top, model trio of noble manhood.

SIMEON DANIELS (440).

His mother's name was Lydia Bemis, daughter of Phineas Bemis an granddaughter of Elisha Bemis; his grandmother was Sarah Childs befor marriage, and his great grandmother's maiden name was Reid. His mother' great uncle was killed in the battle of Lexington; his name was Asahe Reid.

Mr. Fay was a soldier in the Mexican War; he was also in the lat war and was engaged in the battle of Shiloh, April 6 and 7, 1862. (50 year old.) He belonged to the 18th Regt. Wisconsin Vols. The regiment suf fered great loss and was demoralized, and as he says, "I fought on my ow hook." Then he joined the 36th Illinois Regt. They were driven back an he joined the 32nd Illinois, Co. B, and led them by a flank movement bu was outflanked by the enemy after suffering severe loss and was compelle to retreat. Next he joined the 15th Michigan, and soon after went into th 57th Illinois, and after sanguinary fighting they were victorious at four o five o'clock and drove the rebels from the field. He was introduced to Gen Harvey the 18th of April, who promised him a commission, but he wa drowned April 19th sometime during the night. The papers regarding th service of Mr. Fay at the battle of Shiloh were found in the pocket of th General and were also published in the "Madison Journal," the "Milwauke Sentinel," the "Wood Co. Reporter," and in the "Oxford Express." In th egiment he belonged to the Lieutenant Colonel, the Colonel, the Major and is Captain (Compton), were killed. Col. Bouck of the 2nd Wisconsin

egt. took the command. His company then wanted him to take the posion of Lieutenant. Col. Bouck refused to approbate him on account of his ge. At the great battle of Corinth, Oct. 3 and 4, 1862, Major Jackson reuested Col. Bouck to give Mr. Fay a commission, but he again refused on ccount of his age. Afterwards he went into the 8th Wisconsin or "Eagle" egiment, and participated in the different battles of that regiment, too umerous to mention. He has been an invalid since the war on account of a unstroke July 21, 1865, at Selma, Ala.

Mr. Fay is responsible for the following statement: Josiah Fay, son of obert (?) served at the commencement of the Revolution as Captain and oon rose to the rank of Major. He was poisoned by a treacherous doctor hile in the war. The doctor was soon after put to death and made his conession that he had killed thirty men in the same way. He sorrowed and re-retted that he had poisoned Major Fay because he said he considered him very nice man. (See letter of Mr. Fay, May 17, 1885).

The following is from the "Kilbourn (Wis.), Mirror": "Simeon D. Fay f Oxford, Wis., who is visiting in town, affords one about as pleasant an nterview as can be found in man. He has fought through the Mexican War, nd those who knew him at the time of Shiloh and other battles say 'he was lways found where the bullets were thickest.' He is a 'walking encyclo-edia' of dates and war reminiscences as far back as history goes. Though eventy-five years of age he is yet equal to a long day's march."

PUTNAM FAY (447).

He was a carpenter of more than ordinary skill and ingenuity, possessing frank and generous disposition. Thorough in his vocation and zealous in he performance of social and patriotic duties, he was entrusted with many ffices of a public character, but was more esteemed for private worth than istinguished for public services.

He was born in Cambridge, Mass., settled after marriage in Watertown nd subsequently resided in Brighton and Newton. In 1815 he moved from he latter place to Conway, where he resided until his death.

His son, Putnam, Jr., through an amanuensis, wrote in regard to the enealogy of the Fay family over thirty years ago as follows: "Desirable as uch a work is, nineteen years of blindness renders pecuniary aid from me mpracticable, being dependent for subsistence, with no remunerating means xcept the labor feeble health permits me to perform unaided by sight."

LUTHER H. TRASK (500).

From the N. Y. Evangelist, Dec. 6, 1888: "End of a useful life. Luther H. Trask was born in Millbury, Mass., Feb. 15, 1807, and died in Kalamazoo, Mich., Nov. 14, 1888. He married Oct. 15, 1828, Louisa Fay, daughter of Deacon Brigham Fay of Southboro, Mass. On the sixtieth anniversary of heir marriage they received calls and congratulations from their friends nd a month afterwards he entered into the 'land of pure delight,' leaving his eloved wife to mourn her loss, but cheered by a calm and bright faith, lookng for a joyful reunion at a day not very distant. She was then 86 years of ge: her only son died in New York city several years ago and her only daughter, Mrs. Hannah Cornell remains the comfort and support of her mother. Mr. Trask and family were among the first settlers in Kalamazoo, which they have seen grow to a thriving and delightful city of 20,000 inhabitants. He has taken an active part in whatever tended to promote its business prosperity or its intellectual, moral and religious welfare. He was long a trustee of the Asylum for the Insane and a trustee and liberal supporter of the Michigan Female Seminary from its foundation. He was a Christian from his youth, having been a church member nearly 70 years; an influential elder in the Presbyterian church of Kalamazoo from the time of its formation, and he often represented it in Presbytery and Synod. He was active in the Sunday school and a constant and helpful attendant at the prayer meeting. His efficient services and large gifts will be sorely missed. He was awake to the interests of foreign missions, was a constant reader of the New York Evangelist for half a century and exerted his influence to introduce the missionary magazines of the church into the families of the congregation. In him was fulfilled the promise made to them who are planted in the house of the Lord, "They shall flourish in the courts of our God, they shall bring forth fruit in their old age."

ANTHONY FAY (501).

He was a man of remarkable enterprise and by untiring perseverance amassed wealth. He was one of a lumber company in Olean, N. Y., of four members, viz: S. W. Bradley of Olean, Benjamin Barker of Fall River, Mass., and David Harrower of Bradford, Pa. He was also in partnership with Daniel Stickney in Cincinnati, O., with the firm name of Broadway Planing & Flooring Mill of Fay & Stickney, manufacturers of doors, shutters, blinds, sash, door and window frames, mouldings of every size and pattern, flooring, weatherboarding, shelving, mantles, base pilasters and pump tubing. He was also a wholesale dealer in pine lumber, lath, shingles and lumber in the rough of all kinds.

The maiden name of his wife was Mary Vail, a descendant of the Vail family of New Jersey.

SAMUEL FAY (682).

Memorial services at the funeral of Mr. Fay were held at the Kirk Street Church, Lowell, Mass., May 9, 1880. Sermon by the Rev. C. D. Barrows from Psalm lxxxviii: 18, "Lover and friend has thou put far from me, and my acquaintance into darkness." The day was devoted by Kirk Street Church and Sunday school to the memory of the late Samuel Fay, who had been a worshiper there since its foundation; of late years a deacon, and prominent in every department of church work. The attendance both morning and evening was very large; on the former occasion limited only by the capacity of the edifice and comprising many from other places of worship; members of Old Residents' Association; persons engaged at the Lowell Company, and friends and acquaintances of Mr. Fay from all walks of life gathered to render the last tribute of honor and affection to him who was so highly esteemed. The services were deeply impressive and of the most appropriate character to memorialize the transition of a Christian from time to eternity. For though so recent and so great a loss could not be considered without sadness, yet there was naught of gloom; everything looked beyond e grave and spoke of resurrection. Beautiful flowers, fresh callas and ight geraniums upon the altar symbolized it; the sermon impressed it; the blime hymn of faith, "I know that my Redeemer liveth," emphasized it, id there could have been none present who failed to feel that such was the ervading influence.

He was born in Warwick, Mass., Jan. 5, 1817 and was sixty-three years age when he died. He seemed to combine, in a peculiar manner, the best ualities of his paternal and maternal ancestors. The pecuniary embarrass-ent of his father required that his son should be taken from school when nly seven years of age, and he was compensated for this privation by the mark of his father, that he would like to have Samuel continue in school, ut he can be of more service to me than any two of my hired men." Said
r. Fay once, in relating that incident, "I grew six feet taller and twenty ears older when I heard that remark, and I never saw the hour when I condered myself so important to the human race as I did at that moment."

His father was the proprietor of the village hotel, and owned a large rm and he thought it was needful that his son should be taken from school id placed in a position of service to him in the work at home and on the rm, but his mother unwillingly consented, and Samuel brought home his hool books and applied himself to the duties to which his father called him.
e was frequently entrusted with the task of purchasing cattle and he learned price them by weight, after looking at them a few minutes he could gen-ally determine their exact weight. Thus by constant practice he reduced e matter by a mathematical science and was a walking encyplopedia, a ving table of weights and measures. At ten years of age it was no unusual ing for this boy to be seen with his father's team, loaded with farm merandise, on the road to Boston, at one time making the trip alone, returning six days with goods for the consumption of the family and the guests of e village hotel, of which his father was the proprietor.

Every hotel had its alcoholic drinks, and they were used with freedom, s temperance was then a thing unknown, and Samuel took his potion with e men. One night he bethought himself that drinking was not a good ing for old or young and the next morning he said to his father that he did ot believe in drinking rum and had concluded never to touch another drop, ut his father told him it was needful for his health and commanded him to ontinue the practice which he did for a few months, but again he informed is father that he did not propose to continue it any longer unless ordered by im to do so. The order his father never gave, and from that hour he opped the use of liquors from his own conviction of right, with public pinion thoroughly opposed to him and for more than fifty years was a total bstainer.

It was in these early days that he received his first impression of religious uth, which he never lost, and which grew into that stalwart faith which as finally his rod and staff through the dark valley as it clung to the cruci-ed and risen Christ.

How singular that he should thus early in life be enabled to escape from e moral contamination to which he was daily exposed in the bar room of his ther's hotel. One little incident in his experience decided him to begin the hristian life, even at the risk of being ridiculed by those who frequented the bar room. A revival had occurred in an adjacent town where one of th regular teamsters, who drove through Warwick lived, and who had rise for prayers, and when he arrived with his load curiosity was alive to see if h was really a changed man, and Samuel among the rest. He followed hin early the next morning to the barn, taking his station in the dark where h could, with the light of the teamster s lantern, see him arrange his loa ready for his start at sunrise. It so happened that the man received a hur from one of his boxes falling on his foot, and in a moment, without though he gave vent to an oath, but dropping on his knees he confessed his sin an asked forgiveness of his God in tones that indicated his sorrow for the dee This was enough for Samuel and creeping out of the drakness he went bac to his little chamber fully satisfied that there must be something in the religion of Christ which nothing else could equal. The influence of that teamster's example led Samuel to such a confession of Christ as no skepticisn could overthrow.

At the age of sixteen he left his father's home and accepted a positio as clerk in a dry goods store in Lowell, Mass. After a time he was offere a position as office boy on the Lawrence Corporation, then under the agenc of the honored Mr. John Aiken, one of the founders of the church and one c the leaders of his age. In this new position his salary was less, but he ha more leisure time, and he arranged with a gentleman to teach him arithmeti and some other studies during these leisure hours, from the mill, and in hi diary charged that off to one year's schooling, reckoning his pecuniary los in the change from the dry goods store to the mill as so much spent for hi education. He mastered Colburn's arithmetic on his way to and from th mill, and was able in a few months to state and solve from memory ever example in that hard book of mental gymnastics, which had puzzled many youth in daily routine within the walls of a school room.

Few young men are treated with more consideration than was Mr. Fa at this age of his life, and he was often consulted upon matters connecte with the mill by Mr. Aiken, who soon found that his office boy was composed of no ordinary material, and that promotion awaited him by the Lowe Carpet Company, in whose employ he became paymaster, and steadily ros by his own merits to the highest position possible in the gift of that or another corporation. His first pecuniary investment was in a lot which h bought at his own price of a man who was a sharp man at a bargain an who wanted more than Mr. Fay offered, but was obliged to accept the offe as Mr. Fay was leaving his office when the man called him back, made ou the deed, received the cash in full for payment as soon as the deed was finished. He kept the property two years, paid the taxes, etc., selling it at a pric which yielded him a net profit of nearly $500. After he had been in th employ of the Carpet Company about six years, in 1852 he became agent fo them, and by his untiring perseverence he won his way up to the position c Treasurer of the company in 1874, performing its duties with the same assiduity and unswerving integrity that had always characterized his dealing with every one.

He was an originator, a born leader in the various departments wher he moved and he was always governed by Christian principle which was marked characteristic within him. He had the highest type of religious cor viction and Christian manliness. As a deacon of the church, teacher in the Sunday school, and in every position in the church that he held, the people and pastor knew that he could be relied upon as a tower of strength. In business, too, his Christian principle was apparent. He asked God every day to guide him, and to give him the wisdom he needed. He used his strength to its very limit every day of his life, so that when his last sickness came his bodily vigor had reached the bounds of its capacity. He succumbed without one struggle and with hardly a dimming of his mental powers he quietly fell asleep to awake amid the glories of that world he was so well prepared to enter.

CLINTON SNOW FAY (691).

He lived and died on a portion of the old homestead in Brocton, N. Y. He became a deaf mute when about one year old, occasioned by severe illness. He was educated at the New York deaf and dumb institution and learned the painter's trade, but followed the occupation of a farmer and engaged in the business of raising silk worms and the manufacture of silk, but on account of the high price of labor, which rendered it unprofitable, he relinquished it after a few years. He then turned his attention to the culture of grapes in Brocton and vicinity, with his father and brother who were pioneers in that industry.

JOSEPH BELKNAP FAY (693).

He enlisted in the army in the war of the Rebellion as Captain of Co. E, 154th Regt. N. Y. S. Vols. He was taken prisoner at the battle of Gettysburg and was confined in Libby prison for several months, but was exchanged and rejoined his regiment. His sufferings in Libby prison, however, proved to have unfitted him for active service in the army and he was discharged soon after he had returned to his command. He was a member of the Assembly from the first district of Chautauqua Co., N. Y. for the years 1866 and 1867. He was a farmer, also a miner.

LINCOLN FAY (730).

He resided at Portland, N. Y., and was the originator of the celebrated "Fay's Prolific Currant," nearly as large as a red cherry and much richer in taste than the common currant, and finding a ready sale in the market at remunerative prices. The roots also selling for No. 1, at 25 cents per root. One acre of these bushes of three years' growth, in a good season, will produce 75 to 80 bushels of delicious fruit. Under favorable circumstances the clusters are from four to six inches in length.

PLINY FAY (757).

He and his brothers, Seneca, Solon and Ela, removed to Cincinnati, O., in May, 1833. In 1835 to Alton, Ill.; was in the wholesale grocery and pork business. While in Cincinnati Solon was in the coach manufactory and the other three brothers were in the mercantile business.

In April, 1837, Pliny and Ela went to Muscatine, Ia., where Ela was the first postmaster and afterwards was in the State Legislature. Pliny resided in Muscatine thirty-six years, was postmaster four years, from 1842 to 1846, and County Judge one year. He was United States Assessor of Internal Revenue for the second district of Iowa four years and three months, under President Lincoln.

He and his wife were members of the Congregational church in Muscatine and for thirty-two years he was a deacon of that church. In Oct., 1873, he removed to San Francisco, Cal., and after two years settled in Santa Cruz as a druggist in company with his son Hamilton. He was also a druggist in Muscatine over twenty years, but on account of his health went to California, where he says "The climate is simply grand, neither too hot nor too cold." He found himself much benefited, as he had been suffering from pulmonary complaints and several of his brothers had died of consumption. He was the youngest and the last of the family.

HAMILTON FAY (759).

He was a druggist and resided in Muscatine, Ia., till 1872, was in Illinois two years. In 1875 he was in Santa Cruz, California, in company with his father in the drug business.

He was a soldier in the late war. Enlisted in Co. D, 35th Regt. Iowa Vol. Infantry, which was mustered at Camp Strong, Sept. 18, 1862, and was discharged Aug. 10, 1865, having taken part in twelve battles and twenty-two skirmishes.

ELLEN FAY (761).

She was a daughter of Pliny Fay and married Rev. Joshua Metcalf Chamberlain, pastor of the Congregational church at Eddyville, Ia., and in the Autumn of 1868 he was elected Treasurer and financial agent of Iowa College at Grinnell, Ia., where they resided in 1875. He kept the ladies' boarding house from 1869 to the Autumn of 1875, and was editor of the "Grinnell Weekly Herald." He was at Dubuque, Ia., from Feb. 1, to Aug. 1, 1859, and at Des Moines, Ia., from Oct. 1, 1859, to Oct. 1, 1865. He was western soliciting agent of the American Missionary Association in 1865 and 1866, and was agent of Iowa College 1866 and 1867. He graduated at Dartmouth College in 1855.

ADDISON GRANT FAY (829).

He was born in Southboro in 1818, where he lived, except during the time of his education, until April, 1842, when he located in Concord, Mass., which place continued to be his home during the remainder of his life. During the first few years of his residence there he was a clergyman of the Universalist denomination, and during that time he preached to a not very strong congregation. It is not impossible that his unyielding adherence to his convictions, and his unwillingness to modify his expressions of them even among those who held different views, may have produced results that made it clear to him that he had mistaken his calling.

In 1846 he engaged in the manufacture of lead pencils, among the firs in that industry in the United States, and his name continued in that con nection during his life time.

In 1855 he engaged in the manufacture of gunpowder with the firm o A. G. Fay, Potter & Cilley, establishing the Massachusetts Powder Work at Barre, Mass. This firm was merged into the American Powder Co., i 1864, and he continued at its head as its managing officer until in the dis charge of his duties of supervision he was killed by the accidental explosio of one of the mills under his charge, March 24, 1873. By this sad accident at the powder mills, the death of Mr. Fay, his fellow citizens were deprived of one of their very best men in every sense of the word.

Perhaps in the management of town affairs no man has for many years had so universally the respect and confidence of the town for his integrity and sturdy, wholesome and entire independence of character. His standing in the town afforded an admirable instance of the usefulness to which a man may attain in a neighborhood by such qualities as those exercised without apparently the slightest regard to party or partisans, and with entire indifference as to its results, except such as had a bearing upon the standing of the town and the welfare of its citizens. In 1852 and 1853 he was second clerk in the Treasury Department at the State House, Boston, having the confidence of both the coalition and Whig administrations under whom he served. In politics he was a "Free Soiler," and in opinion an abolitionist of the most direct kind. For many years he filled the most important offices in the town, the only question which ever arose concerning him being, whether or not he was willing to take them, and at the time of his death he was chairman of the Board of Selectmen.

The death of his daughter caused him great grief and gave a tinge of melancholy to his life, but in no degree diminished his activity or usefulness or impaired the sense of humor which characterized his intercourse with all who knew him. He was a fine specimen of the New England Townsman, Selectman and man of business. The people of Concord will long mourn over the disaster which has taken away one whom the people all loved and respected and one who had long filled his cup full and had left behind him a career of usefulness in their service.

In the Town Report in the town of Concord, Mass., for 1873, which had been compiled by him, was found the following: "In Memoriam. We cannot permit this report to go to press without referring to the dire calamity which so suddenly deprived us of the chairman of our board. On the 24th of March, as is well known, Mr. Addison G. Fay, while in the disharge of his accustomed duties as agent of the American Powder Co., was killed by an explosion at their mill in Acton. Our whole community was shocked and appalled by the event so terrible and its suddenness. Mr. Fay's services during the thirty years of his residence in Concord and his public spirit, energy and faithfulness in the discharge of the many responsible duties to which he had been called by his townsmen and the usefulness of his life among us render the tribute to his memory and worth appropriate to this his last report. Deeply sensible of the loss we have sustained we tender to his afflicted family in their sore bereavement, to his friends in their loss, and to the town in the sudden death of one of its most prominent and honored citizens, our sincere and heartfelt sympathies."

Mr. Fay was greatly interested in the work of collecting the "Record and History" of his ancestors and their descendants. He was one of the first to originate, encourage and sustain the work of Rev. Abner Morse, and subsequently that of Mr. Charles Hudson, who were employed to search for the members of the Fay families. In 1884 his widow was living with his son, Addison Orville Fay, in Xenia, Ohio, who succeeds his father in the manufacture of powder and high explosives.

MARTHA ANN FAY (827).

She married in St. Charles, Ill., Oct. 21, 1841, Lyman Hall, M. D. His grandfather, George Hall, was a volunteer in the Revolutionary War under Gen. Gates, and was in the battles of Saratoga and Stillwater, and served in the capacity of quartermaster during that campaign and soon after the war he moved to Hancock, Mass., and died there, 1823. His eighth child, Reuben Hall was the father of Dr. Lyman Hall, who at the age of eight years left his father's house to shift for himself, and found employment by which his wants were provided for. At the age of fourteen he united with the Baptist church in his native town, in which church he was a zealous and energetic worker.

In 1836 he went to Oneida Castle and in 1837 he set out alone for Illinois, traveling by canal and steamboat on the lakes, arriving at Elgin Ill., in twelve days, where only three houses were then built. Here he soon became acquainted and took an active part in all efforts to build up the place and to establish religious institutions. He tried to qualify himself for the ministry, but being without the means to pursue his studies he turned his attention to farming until he could satisfy his mind with a more congenial calling. In 1846 he began the study of medicine, attended a course of lectures, and located in Oregon, the county seat of Ogle county, Ill., and became a successful physician. In 1851 he removed to LaSalle, which soon after became an important place of business. Here he soon found a field of great usefulness in ministering to the sick and suffering, regardless of his own comfort or health. By his devotion and indefatigable perseverance he soon had a large practice, by which he secured a liberal competency.

In the year of 1858 his life was threatened with an organic disease o the heart, which clouded his brilliant professional career in the midst of his usefulness and he was ever after a suffering invalid. His wife was a woman of few words, and in this respect she inherits more of her father's temperament and ways than she does that of her mother. She was possessed of an amiable disposition and was reserved in her deportment. By this she was often a check upon her more impetuous husband and her home was the place of all her enjoyment. Her children bear the impress of her mora training and frugal mein and no doubt her influence will live for good in her progeny long after she has passed away; and though they will not bea the name of Fay, yet the Fay blood will nevertheless flow in their veins, and their social relations are such that under our policy of government they wil be connected with associations that will be identified with the history of ou country.

She was a devoted Christian, uniting with the church when fifteen years old. Her moral impress and economy have added much to the succes of her husband, both mentally and physically. In 1859 they moved to Elgin Ill., where they were to make their future home and spend the evening o their days.

LUCY WEALTHY FAY (869).

She was married in Elgin, Ill., July 3, 1845, to Charles Hemenway. Sh first became acquainted with him while she was living with her sister, Mrs Hall. She supported herself by teaching school. She was a woman of rar thematical attainments and during her teaching days, no mathematical oblem could be submitted to her but what she could readily solve. She s "master of her calling," and no doubt her fine cultivated mind will make impress upon the intellect of her descendants for many generations to ne. They are a family of marked resemblance, sandy hair and fair com- xion, and they will not have to go beyond their own circle to find the ne of their own affinities and highest enjoyment.

EDWIN WINSLOW FAY (877).

He was an industrious farmer, possessed of no ambition for popularity to mix in the turmoil and political strife of the day, but pursued the even or of his way, with his life adorned with all the Christian graces. He was oved and respected by all who knew him.

ELBRIDGE ELIJAH FAY (888).

He married Mary Goble; her father was a native of New York: he mar- d Sarah Green of Virginia and removed to Rockville, Ind., where Mary ble was born Feb. 24, 1834. Her parents moved to Burlington, Ia., where y both died, after which she came to LaSalle, Ill., in 1858, where she was roduced to Mr. E. E. Fay by Dr. Lyman Hall.

Mr. Elbridge E. Fay, soon after he was twenty-one years of age, en- ged in buying produce at various railroad stations, not always, however, h good success, and in 1856 he turned his attention to farming in the vn of Elgin, an occupation most sure to reward honest toil with a bounti- harvest.

DR. FRANKLIN G. FAY (891).

All of his school life was spent in Elgin, Ill., Academy, from which in- ution he graduated in 1881. After a year's private study under a pre- tor he entered the Bennett Medical College in Chicago and after three years of instruction there he graduated and went to California, locating Sacramento City.

EVELINE ELVIRA FAY (894).

She first became acquainted with Mr. Gaius C. Howard at Dr. Lyman ll's, with whom she made it her home, carrying on dressmaking. In son she had a commanding physical appearance, auburn hair, reserved conversation, and a perfect symbol of the Fays. She was economical, in- trious and well calculated to turn every transaction to the best use and fit. Mr. Howard was a farmer and they resided in La Salle, Ill.

FRANKLIN MORELL FAY (897).

He was born in McDonough, N. Y., Nov. 29, 1829, and died unmarried Rockford, Ill., Nov. 18, 1853. He remained at home with his parents il he was twenty-one, helping them clear up their prairie farm from its ive wild, to an agreeable and pleasant home. In 1849-50 he went to egon, Ogle Co., Ill., with a view to reading medicine with his brother-in- , Dr. Hall, and after a few months he returned to Elgin, where he en- ed in buying produce and shipping it to Chicago. His profits were such he was soon enabled to extend his business. By judicious management successful career he soon won the confidence of bankers, grain commissioners and all other business men, by which he could command all money he desired to carry on his business. When the Chicago, Gal Union R. R. was extended to Rock River he located at Rockford, Ill., wh he built a warehouse and permanently established himself in business. his sound discretion, frugality and industry, he was fast extending his bu ness and increasing his wealth so that a few years would have been s to rank him among the most extensive and successful operators of West; but in the midst of his prosperity the frost of death nipped the b of so much promise. He was taken with a fever and obliged to call i physician, who did not look upon his symptoms as at all critical, but p dicted that in a few days he would be able to resume his business aga But on the same night, when his brother Elbridge was about to give hin drink of water and place a wet cloth upon his head, he heard somethi snap with a loud noise and turning to him found him struggling if in a fit. In a few minutes he ceased to breathe and was numbered amo the dead. The immediate cause of his death was, no doubt, the laceration a blood vessel in his head.

In person Mr. Fay was tall and straight built, which gave him a co manding appearance, with a frank, open countenance, affable in his wa and easy of address, with an independent mein. He had an individuality his own, yet so easy and natural that it was not calculated to give offen but rather to command respect and friendship. His life was short but b liant. He sleeps in the Elgin cemetery.

PRESCOTT PEARL FAY (898).

He was born in Addison, N. Y. In the winter of 1852, when he w twenty years old, he went to Aurora to assist his father in buying produce which place he made the acquaintance of Miss Adalaide A. Chauncey, whom he was married Dec. 1853, and in the May following, with his wi father, crossed the plains with an ox team, to California, and arrived Shaster City in September, at which place he engaged in farming. But hand of adversity was upon him; sickness, loss of property, with their wi ering influences, seemed to be his lot. But with all his misfortunes he h a fixed determination of right, to which he adhered with all the tenacity life, resolving to do right, let the result be what it may.

He was a large, portly man, of a frank, open countenance, auburn h that hangs in ringlets around his brow that beams with benevolence, brig ness and beauty; possessed of an even temperament and inheriting ma peculiarities of his father. He was generous and kind hearted towards with whom he associated, and had he remained in Illinois no doubt would have been saved from many of his sad experiences.

This sketch was first written over thirty years ago, during which ti he may have been able to retrieve all his misfortunes, as he was th young enough to rise to a life marked with brilliant success, happiness a wealth.

DR. ISAAC KNIGHT FAY (900).

In person he was tall and built like his brother Franklin. When was ten years old a disease developed which afterwards proved to be chro asthma, rendering him incompetent to perform heavy labor. At an early had an eager desire to acquire an education and a profession. At the age seventeen he went to Oregon, Ill., and spent the winter with Dr. Hall, tending school and reading medicine, returning in the spring to Elgin, worked upon his father's farm, taught school the next winter, keep-g in mind his fixed object to prepare himself for a profession.

In 1855 he went to Kansas with a view to becoming a citizen of that rritory, but the unsettled state of society there, the anarchy and bloodshed at was connived at by the federal officers at that time rendered life and operty unsafe, and he soon resolved to leave the place. He started East-ard and was often accosted on his way by "Southern chivalry,' armed with owie-knife and revolvers, inquiring of his destination and future intention;
ereby satisfying themselves that he was leaving the territory, they let him ass with the solemn injunction never to set foot in that territory again.
e arrived in LaSalle in a very feeble state of health. After being nursed by s sister, Mrs. Hall, a few days, he left for his father's home in Elgin. In a w days after reaching home was taken with a fever and for several days e lay in a critical state; all the cruel wrongs that had been perpetrated be-re his eyes in Kansas were continually running through his fevered brain, nning it into the wildest delirium imaginable. Soon after he recovered e again started for Kansas, but stopped at Maysville, Mo., with a Mr.
ell where he found some government lands, upon which he settled and soon und friends in whom he could repose confidence. In the autumn of 1856 e sold out his interest at Maysville and again returned to Elgin with a w hundred dollars as the reward of his persevering industry. He com-enced reading medicine with Dr. Winchester in Elgin. The next summer e tilled some land near his father's farm and went to Centralia, Ill., in the all of 1857, but in the Spring of 1858 he again returned to Elgin, calling LaSalle he found Dr. Hall very sick and remained a few weeks, all the hile storing his mind with knowledge from the extensive library of his rother-in-law, Dr. Hall. He further pursued his studies under his old receptor, Dr. Winchester of Elgin, but his health was not yet restored. By e middle of August Dr. Hall and his family visited the old homestead and e two invalids rusticated together. Late in September Mr. Fay and Dr.
all started South, in company with the Doctor's family, making a short ll at LaSalle and then he went to Centralia a few days and from there to . Louis, Mo., to attend a course of medical lectures. He finally located in illersburg, Ill., where he soon entered upon a successful career of practice.
ere he had the esteem of the entire community. He was modest, unas-ming, industrious, a close student, a judicious practician, and an honest an, admired and beloved by all who knew him for his substantial worth d sterling merit. He possessed a clear head, sound judgment, and was a hristian man.

GILBERT HARRISON FAY (901).

He was the youngest of nine children and was also rather smaller than ther of his brothers. He was enterprising and persevering in the pursuits business, bound to possess the "nimble sixpence," a lover of horses, full fun and mirthful glee, inheriting many of his mother's characteristics.
lways looking on the sunny side of every event of life, cheerful and comnionable, thereby he always had warm friends. He left his father's house soon after he attained his majority, without having any particular place view; but in a few months he found himself in Maysville, Mo., at the pla his brother Isaac had formerly lived. He located here upon a small far where he was vigorously pursuing his vocation when last heard from.

ELISHA FAY (920).

He commenced studying for the ministry about two years before death. He was the first one who commenced a Sabbath school in No Wilbraham, in 1820, with the children of four families, which continued many years.

He was a promising young man of eminent piety, but his work on ea was short. He died at the age of twenty-three years, of consumption.

ELIZA FAY (922).

She sustains a good standing in the M. E. church. It seems to be l lot to take care of the sick in the families of her friends. She is now (18 watching over the declining years of her aged mother, who lives with l son, Marcus W., who is almost helpless from a paralytic shock, leaving o side paralyzed. It was Eliza's loving privilege to smooth the sick and dyi bed of her sister, Mrs. Jemima F. Rice, more than six months, until s peacefully closed her eyes in death.

MARIA FAY (923).

She died of consumption after a lingering illness of six years, on count of bleeding at the lungs. She could not lie down for three years. S was a happy child of God. She united with the Congregational church North Wilbraham at the age of sixteen or seventeen and ever after lived life of a Christian. She was a pattern of Christian patience and submissi She said one day, "I have not desired to live more than ten minutes a time since I was sick. She fell asleep in Jesus April 29, 1832.

MAHLON FAY (968).

He was born in Jericho, Vt., Feb. 8, 1811, was married Nov. 1, 1831 Miss Lucy Stephens, who was born in Hanover, N. H. Her parents mov to Vermont when she was fourteen years of age. He had one son born Jericho. Mr. Fay moved to Milan, Ohio, in 1833, where two of his child were born. He moved April, 1840, to Warwick County, Ind. His w died, leaving five children, and he married April, 1844, Mrs. Delilah Hartl who had seven children by her first husband, Uriah Hartley. She d after having two children by Mr. Fay, and he married third Kate Pross by whom he had three children, ten in all.

His son Edward was a soldier in the 65th Ind. Vols., Co. E, date of enlistment July 12, 1862, serving nearly three years.

Mr. Fay was in 1881 in partnership with his son, Thomas J., in lumber and mercantile business in Yankeetown, Ind. He is noted for good health and kindly nature. He is a walking encyclopedia as rega dates and events that have taken place during his life time. His grands Edward has a hickory cane, sent him from Vermont, which is said to be o 200 years old, and to have already passed through the hands of six success Edward Fays.

EDWARD FAY ELLIS (1027).

He was the youngest of the twelve children. His mother was Patty and after her death, when Mr. Ellis was at the head of a family of six lren and his first wife had also passed away, he says, "my good mother this for a better life when I was but three weeks old," and again, "my l wife has left me to travel on alone a few days longer, when I expect eet her with my dear children in the new and better life." The following uary was printed after the death of his wife, July 23, 1887. She died at home in Union, Wis., of consumption, after a lingering illness of nearly year, aged fifty-five years. She was born in New England:

"Mrs. Ellis leaves, besides her husband, four sons, all grown to man-l, having buried her eldest son and eldest daughter a few years since. has been called by her Creator to that better land which we can only see ith. Her death is but a departure into a new and a better life. She had vn for some time that she could not survive long, but was satisfied and y to go. She bore her sufferings with that same quiet patience that acterized her whole life to the end."

"She had that perfect abhorence to the use of alcohol, that during her erings she would take no medicine of which alcohol formed any portion. devotion to her family was remarkable, her parents being of that strictly gious character that she had few evil tendencies to overcome. She had concealments or ill designs, but ever carried her heart upon her daily

She believed a successful life was one borne out in well doing. Mr. s resided in Evansville, Wis., as late as 1895. He was a farmer and eeder of short-horn cattle, Oxford down sheep and Scotch Collie dogs. was greatly afflicted by the death of his son John, who had worked on ap of the county which he was getting out, but was taken down with ver, and after it left him he had ulceration of the bowels and his life sefulness suddenly closed.

DANIE NEWELL FAY (1049).

He resided near Norwalk, Ohio, and died at his home north of the city, l sixty-eight years. He was a native of Vermont and went to Ohio in seventh year with his parents, settling in Erie County.

In 1863 he settled on the farm which was his home for thirty years, until death in 1893. Mr. Fay was known and highly respected as an honest and a good citizen. He leaves a wife and one son, Mr. Rolland A. , of Eden, Michigan, to mourn his loss.

REV. ELI FAY (1066).

Soon after his first marriage he united with the Christian denomina- and commenced preaching. He rose rapidly in the estimation of the rch, was employed to preach to some of its most important societies, and n the enterprise for founding Antioch College was inaugurated, he was sen Corresponding Secretary of the College Committee, which position illed with such entire satisfaction that, without a dissenting voice, he ined it as long as such an office was needed, and it was through his in-nce more than all others that the Hon. Horace Mann was induced to accept of the first Presidency of the institution. Afterwards, when interested parties made an effort to change the Presidency, he adhered unflinchingly to his first choice, and from that time until the death of Mr. Mann they were firm and intimate friends. He labored and spent his money for the interests of the college until that institution was freed from embarrassment and he reduced to penury. Toward the last of his labor as agent, he visited New England and soon after received a call to the pastorate of the Unitarian Church in Leominster, Mass. This call he accepted in Dec., 1860, and on the first Sunday in Jan. 1861, he was installed its pastor. He labored here several years with a goodly degree of prosperity. In 1881 he was, and had been for three or four years, preaching in Sheffield, England.

The following is from the "Worcester Spy," entitled "A Lucky and Generous Minister":

"The Rev. Eli Fay some twenty-five years ago was settled over the Unitarian Church in Leominster, Mass. At that time he was a devoted pastor and a popular preacher. When settled over his parish his only wealth was his yearly salary. For a few years past he has been settled in California. He invested his limited means in mining stock and lands, and it soon doubled in value. It is reported that one investment followed another until his wealth became large. The wheel of fortune never turned against him, and today his wealth is said to be $1,500,000." A California paper sent to Leominster says: "Mr. Fay has made the very liberal offer to the Unitarian denomination of the sum of $750,000 to establish a female seminary, on two conditions: first, the seminary shall be established in Mass.; second, the denomination shall raise money enough to make the fund $1,000,000."

ELON GALUSHA FAY (1103).

He is a brother of Rev. Eli Fay and was a clergyman in the Universalist denomination. He was formerly engaged in mercantile pursuits, but in 1863 owned a farm upon which he resided in Milford, Ohio. During his ministry he met with numerous instances both entertaining and instructive, illustrating the prevailing prejudice which was then so universal against that doctrine. On one occasion an orthodox preacher visited his locality and was not too careful in his criticisms of the Universalists. Mr. Fay asked him home and treated him so well that he remained there during several days of illness, and he afterwards called Mr. Fay "brother" and invited him to take a seat with him in the pulpit and participate in the exercises of the meeting, which was noticed and commented upon very freely and afforded Mr. Fay a more complete triumph than argument could give.

In 1881 Mr. Fay was at the head of a manufacturing company in Bryan, Ohio, making plows, wheel-barrows, carriages, etc., and was a very busy man. He subsequently removed to California.

CHARLES GALUSHA FAY (1106).

His occupation was farming until he was twenty-one years of age, when he went "West," and in 1849 settled in Whitewater, Wis., learned the carpenter's trade and carried on the jobbing business for fifteen years. His health failing, he went into a dry goods store, but his health still remaining unsatisfactory, he was employed as Sheriff and under Sheriff for twenty-five ars, during which time he held various offices in the town, county and ate. Was Senator one year in the State Legislature. Afterwards was in rtnership with his son, Elton A. Fay, in the drug business in Rockford, ., in which place his brother, Orson Curtis Fay, resides, a retired farmer.

REV. ISAIAH F. FAY (1204).

He was born in Southboro, Mass. His mother died when he was an fant, leaving his father with a large family of children. His father died en Isaiah was about eight or nine years old, leaving him an orphan, and en ten years old he went to Boston and lived with a tailor four years. is business was to carry home to the tailor's customers the clothes he ade for them. At the age of fourteen he came to Michigan to live with s brother, Dea. Joshua Fay, who resides in Troy, Oakland Co.

At the age of eighteen he went out into the world, as he said, "to ddle my own canoe." He was admitted to the Baptist Church in Troy en sixteen years old. For several years he worked around on farms, and 1840 he left Michigan and went back to Mass., was educated in Worcester d in Holliston, at which places he graduated, finding in the latter place s first wife, Miss Lucy W. Tayntor, with whom he lived about eight years til her death. He had followed teaching, principally, since his marriage, Jersey City, Tarrytown, and Sing Sing, on the Hudson River. After the ath of his wife he returned to Michigan and entered upon the work of the inistry. He married his second wife, Mrs. Harriet E. Buck, by whom he d three children. In Feb., 1854, he was ordained to the work of the inistry in the Baptist denomination at Saranac, where he organized a urch, preaching there about five years. From Saranac he went to Cascade, ent Co., and from there to Grand Rapids, where he preached to the First aptist Church about three months. This was about the time of the commencement of the War of the Rebellion. From there he removed to azenovia and remained there one year, preaching to the church at Lisbon. bout the year 1863 he removed to the White River country, where he ganized several churches and finally White River Association, which nbraces principally Newaygo, Muskegon, and Oceanna counties, and tending so far north as Manistee. Here he labored in this Association out seven years, having several churches under his care during that time. 1870 he went to Weyland, Allegan Co., taking charge of the Baptist urch, where he remained about three years and then moved to Kalamazoo, here he was living in 1887. Here he educated his two daughters and lived a home of his own with his family very pleasantly situated. His daughters both graduated from the High School in Kalamazoo and have taught ery successfully for several years. He was troubled with cataracts in his es; his sight finally failed so that he could neither read nor write and his mily had to read and write for him, and he was obliged to retire from the inistry in the full vigor of health and the enjoyment of life. But in the osom of his family he enjoyed the sweets of domestic life after passing rough the turmoils incident to the ministry. Afterwards he had one eye erated upon and was able to see to read and write, for which blessing he as truly thankful.

He was very much interested in the work of collecting materials for the Genealogy of the Fay family."

EVELINE TROTT FAY (1309).

She married Charles A. Whiting, a merchant of Boston. They resid many years in Brookline where he died. His obituary is as follows:

"He was Treasurer of the Bigelow Carpet Company and also of t Clinton Wire Company. For many years he was well and widely kno in the dry goods trade of the country. He was a Director of the Bank North America and Director and Trustee of the Savings Bank of Broo line. On every side his death is deeply regreted. Belonging to that c mercantile aristocracy whose title of commercial nobility was based up unswerving integrity and high purpose. He was one of the men the bu ness community could ill afford to lose. His social qualities endeared h to all who knew him, and in all the relations of life he did his work w He was a trusted friend and a wise counselor. He was a gentleman wid known and respected for his manly virtues, intelligent, upright and genero he had a host of warm friends who will hear of his death with profou sorrow. In this city, and in fact wherever he was known, he was high respected and esteemed by all with whom he was in any way associat His funeral took place at Brookline. Among the numerous friends w attended were a large number of merchants, bankers, manufacturers a business men, and the abundance of floral tributes showed the esteem which he was held. The casket and the room where his body lay, w adorned with flowers. The 'Temple Quartette' sang 'Remember Thy C ator.' Rev. Dr. Hedge then feelingly referred to the character of t deceased, speaking particularly of his trustworthiness—a man whom know was to trust and respect, and whom to know intimately was to tr and love. A loss to society as one who guarded faithfully all the intere committed to his care. In his character and influence he was a power good, and as a husband, father, neighbor, and friend, he will be gratefu remembered for his finished life. After the funeral services his remains w placed in Forest Hill cemetery."

ELLEN MARIETTA FAY (1359).

She married Charles N. Mackubin, and the following sketch of him from "Newson's Old Settlers of St. Paul, Minn":

"Mr. Mackubin was born and educated in Maryland; did business a long time in Illinois; came to St. Paul in 1854, and invested largely in r estate. He engaged in banking in St. Paul under the firm name of M kubin & Egerton, and opened his bank in the old 'Winslow House' buildi Afterwards he moved to the corner of 3rd and Franklin streets, built a nu ber of fine buildings and his transactions in real estate were quite extensi He was a bold operator, a member of the Senate in 1860 and died in 18

He was a gentleman with a fine face, indicating good blood, and a m who always wore gold spectacles, was quiet in his manner yet an a business gentleman and one of St. Paul's early stirring business men."

CALEB TAYLOR FAY (1388).

He was born in Southboro, Mass., and died in San Francisco, C 1885, aged sixty-four. The following sketch of the California life of Ca Taylor Fay is from one who was intimately acquainted with him from Ju 1850, till the time of his death.

"Mr. Fay arrived in San Francisco on the ship "Orb," from Boston, Sept. 9, 1849. A pioneer in name by virtue of his arrival here, he was an active pioneer in many business enterprises and interested himself in many new avenues for public prosperity. He was peculiarly a public spirited man of an exceptionally unselfish nature and he ever seemed to consider his own business from a public as much as from a private standpoint. Immediately upon his arrival here he entered into a commercial and commission business, founding with his partners the mercantile house of Fay, Pierce & Willis. the business of which was continued by him for many years. As early as June 8, 1850, he entered with his firm into a co-partnership for the working of coal fields in Oregon and in the investigation of the enterprise was among the first to explore for navigation the upper waters of the Columbia river. He was one of the first to move in the construction of permanent water ditches for mining, being the moving spirit in the construction of the 'Bear River Ditch' in Placer Co., which is still in use for mining. agriculture and mechanical purposes. He was one of the founders of the Merchants Exchange and the prime mover in the purchase of their lot and the erection of the fine building thereon. In the promotion of the various enterprises in which he was interested he visited South America, the wilds of Alaska, several of our territories, if not all, Guatemala, crossing the continent at that place, making the trip from its capital to the Atlantic seaboard on 'mule back,' a portion of the way alone, for the purpose of informing himself of the present and prospective resources of the country. His expedition to Guatamala was undertaken for the purpose of calling the attention of the merchants of San Francisco and the mercantile cities of the eastern seaboard, but the scheme fell through from the apathy and disinclination of the merchants to embark in an enterprise 'not legitimate to their business." The road is now being built by a close corporation, and that opportunity for free and independent control of commercial privileges and advantages lost. Of the territory of Alaska and its resources he wrote one of the most interesting articles ever published. Earnest and energetic in all his undertakings he explored every known avenue for information upon any subject in which he was interested. He published writings upon many subjects, in their clearness, thoroughness, conciseness and truthfulness that bespoke the qualities of the fountain from which they flowed. He was one of the founders and the first President of the Union Insurance Company of San Francisco and their flag hung at half mast at his death as a token of respect to his memory. Republican in politics. he was selected in the formation of the party here as their first candidate for Mayor of the city, and was sent by it to the Legislature in 1861, and in 1867 was nominated by the 'Independent Wing' of the party in the State as their standard bearer and condidate for Governor. He was said to have been beaten, but to make the assertion true one would have to prove that success and defeat were synonymous, as the result was just what he anticipated, and he succeeded in the object for which he enlisted in the triangular struggle. His political aspirations were always for principles, never for spoils.

"He held the office of 'National Taxes,' collector of Internal Revenue under President Lincoln, and was selected by the citizens of San Francisco as their agent for the transaction of important business with the National Government and succeeded in a measure. which the writer has reasons for knowing, would not have been accomplished by one with a low standard of moral principle. His last mission to Washington was as an agent for claimants to what is known as the 'Geneva Award,' by whom he was commissioned to procure the necessary legislation for the distribution of the fund and, although at the time enfeebled by a paralytic stroke, visited the great commercial centers of the east, addressed several of their 'Board of Trade,' prepared his arguments and addresses to Congress and despite a powerful and well organized opposition and antagonistic reports from the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, succeeded, with his co-workers, in establishing the position he had assumed with regard to the appropriation of the fund. The justice of his views is now acknowledged by many who were then opposed to them. For his ability and services in this connection he was most highly complimented by many leading members of mercantile associations in the east. In addition to his other labors at that time he issued an address to Congress on the Chinese problem.

The opening of a vast iron deposit in Sierra Co., Col., and copper mines in Gila Co., Ariz., enlisted much of his time and attention during the last few years, both of which have been held in abeyance for the establishment of railroad facilities that he has in both cases made great exertions to obtain. Over physical exertion in connection with the prosecution of one of these enterprises doubtless caused the first of a succession of paralytic shocks that ended with his death.

Possessing in a marked degree the negative innate power of impressing his feelings and convictions upon others, he was often selected by his follow citizens for positions requiring judgment, firmness and discretion. A true hero to his convictions, once convinced that his cause was right no adverse circumstances could deter him or discourage him.

He was united in marriage in 1860 to Mary Thatcher Simpkins of Yarmouthport, Mass. His wife survives him and also two children, a daughter, who is the wife of Dr. William Boericke, one of the leading physicians of San Francisco; and a son, a member of the class 1888 in Harvard College. Of the recollections which endeared him to his family and the associations which have embalmed his memory in their hearts, it can truly be said they are dimmed by no act over which they could wish to draw the veil of oblivion—no vice, no wrong, no excess; ever kind and unselfish, quick to anticipate the wants of others and ever willing to minister to their needs. The question represented to be asked by the angels in the following quotations found among his writings and prefaced by him, 'A Gem:—when a man dies people ask what property has he left behind him, but the angels ask, "What good deeds has he sent before him?"' can be answered in part by many who have been recipients of his kindness. With him action never waited long upon conviction. He has been said to have given the first temperance lecture ever delivered in the state (if not the first, it was perhaps the most effective), by scuttling several casks of high priced liquors and letting their contents flow into the Sacramento river. His influence was ever on the side of virtue and morality and if a due appreciation of others' rights, a kindly regard for their feelings and a constant devotion to honor, justice and truth are true tests of nobility, he was one of nature's noblemen.

On the 19th of April, 1885, a few hours before his death, he sat at the window of his residence in a hotel that commands a fine view of the Bay, and while gazing for the last time upon its beautiful scenery, spoke of the pleasant views hemmed in by the green hills that lie in the distance beyond, what reminiscences of the nearly thirty-six years that have passed since he first caught a glimpse of the scene before him through the Golden Gate, as he looked upon the long rows of buildings, covering a wide expanse that was then an anchorage ground, and thought of the active part he had himself taken in the magical changes which had since occurred in the land of his adoption, we can never know.

His love for his mother was an evergreen plant in the garden of his heart, and when returning consciousness after one of his attacks, brought with it the conviction that the days of his life were nearly numbered, one of his first requests was that its Cycle might be completed by his being taken home and laid by the side of her who gave him birth.

"No purer wish, no fonder hope E'er gilded mortal prayer!
Oh, take me where the angel, Death
Has stilled each wave of care,
That tossed on life's mystic sea
Of duty, joy and pain,
To rest beside my mother's grave,
And mend the broken chain."

Peace to his ashes; may he have found a life where selfishness is not an element of success. His last wishes were complied with. He was buried from St. Mark's church in Southboro, Mass., May 15, 1885.

FRANKLIN BRIGHAM FAY (1397).

Born in Southboro, Jan. 24, 1821. His father moved to Boston in 1831, and in 1834 to Chelsea, where Mr. Fay has always resided. He received his education at various academies in Mass., and the many public offices he was called to fill shows the estimation the citizens of Chelsea have in his ability as a public servant, and the manner he is appreciated by the community outside of that city. He represented his district in the Legislature in 1857, State Senator, 1867; President of the Common Council in Chelsea, 1860; Mayor of the city, 1861-2-3; member of the school committee, chairman of Overseers of the Poor, President of Prisoner's Friend Association, delegate to the National Republican convention at Baltimore, 1864; Republican Presidential Elector, 1876; member of Mass. allottment commission during the Civil war; United States allottment commission for colored troops; chief of the auxiliary corps of the sanitary commission trustees; trustee of the State Industrial School for Girls; secretary of the Mass. Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals; civil service commissioner; president of the Old Ladies' Home in Chelsea, and general agent of the Mass. Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, which office he has held for many years. He has been greatly interested in collecting and preserving the history of the Fay family since their arrival in this country in 1656, all of which he has generously given to be incorporated in the "Fay Genealogy," now being published in 1898-9.

ELIZA B. FAY (1408).

She married July 11, 1860, Rev. William Anderson McGinley, who died May 25, 1896. The following obituary notice and tribute of him was printed in the Home Missionary for December, 1896:

"He was born Feb. 15, 1831, in the fifth generation of a Scotch-Irish family that had for 150 years occupied the same home at Fairfield, near Gettysburg, Pa. He pursued his college course at Gettysburg and Chambersburg. He read law, and was admitted to the bar at Gettysburg afterward about 1854-5 and located in the practice of law at Toledo, Iowa, then a rude frontier village. Becoming interested in the religious work to which his after life was devoted, he abandoned the practice of law, and for a short time taught Latin and Greek at the young University of Iowa, in Iowa City. Afterward, for a time, while pursuing his theological studies, he lived on the Mississippi, at Muscatine, Iowa.

During his life in that state at that early day he contracted severe malarial poisoning from the miasm consequent upon the breaking up of the prairie soil, and perhaps owing to local conditions near the river, from the effects of which he suffered much throughout his life. From Iowa he went to Oberlin, Ohio, to pursue his preparation for the ministry, and afterwards graduated from Andover Theological Seminary about the year 1858. He was married at Dudley, Mass., to his devoted wife, Eliza B. Fay of Shrewsbury, Mass., who was a daughter of Lyman and Judith (Bachelder) Fay, of Northbridge, Mass. His charges in the order of time were: Shrewsbury, seven years; Brooklyn, N. Y., four years, where he was pastor of the Ross Street Presbyterian church, which he lifted out of a crushing and hopeless state of indebtedness. Worn out with his labors there, he next took a charge at Greenfield, Mass., for a year and a half; thence in Portsmouth, N. H., for ten years. While there he was chosen to deliver the sermon on an occasion of almost national importance, the thanksgiving service to welcome back Lieut. Greely and the survivors of his Arctic expedition. Thence he removed to Empire, Kas., for two years, where he had a severe illness from grip, from which he never fully recovered. Thence he returned to Shrewsbury, at the Atlantic coast at the place where he received his first charge and married the wife of his youth. Finally considerations of the health of himself and relatives brought him to California. May 24, 1895, he settled as pastor at Chula Vista, where he died at his home after an illness of some six weeks, at 10:30 a. m. on May 25, 1896, being the day following the close of his year's pastorate at that place, and of his continuous service in the ministry the thirty-ninth. During the Civil War he served as a member of the Christian Commission, and as such was engaged on the field of Antietam through the progress of the battle, in the succor of the wounded and the consolation of the dying. He also engaged in like work at Gettysburg, coming upon the field just after the battle. He was a delegate to the National Council in 1880.

He was a man of fine intellect, good address and grand social qualities, making him a superior preacher, an excellent and successful pastor. He leaves a wife and one son. When the people gathered to receive him and his wife to his last pastorate they gave him a joyful welcome. Their spokesman, among other things said, "So it has come to us that after eight years we have in the good providence of God, received a settled pastor; who is not here alone, not an evening guest to depart on the morrow, but settled here with his family." Alas he has departed; for him it is the eternal tomorrow. Many now recall how he said in his response, that he had long had the presentiment that he should end his days on this coast. We little thought that it was a prophecy to be so soon fulfilled. Great as was our joy to receive him of whom we then knew so little, how much profounder is our sorrow to part with him whom we soon learned to love, to admire, and to honor so much. It was no ordinary blessing that this community should for one golden, though broken, year have been under the influence of this remarkable man. From that early sermon by which he arrested our attention—in which he said to us with the manly directness so characteristic of him, "I shall speak as I believe; do you think as you please"—we have found that we were but being led into larger faith and into that larger liberty wherewith Christ makes us free, the liberty in which he himself lived and loved and taught.

The variety, the power, the exquisite harmony of his spoken discourse, we shall in time to come fondly recall; upon his personal dignity and the grace and sweet charm of his personality we can in the freshness of our bereavement, not yet in spoken word bear to dwell—not now—while all that through which they shone lies before us in the silent majesty of death.

We must now surrender this dear body to be laid in the ancestral ground. He loved us; he loves us still. It is hard, very hard, for us to say with the sorrowing one of old, but we will strive to say it, for he himself would have had us say it:

"The Lord gave, the Lord hath taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord."

The Congregational Year Book for 1897 gives his pastorates as follows: Ordained Shrewsbury, Mass., June 2, 1859, dismissed July 27, 1865, and acting pastor there 1891-5; installed North Church, Newburyport, Aug. 17, 1865, dismissed Jan. 26, 1869; installed Gloversville, N. Y., June 8, 1869, dismissed May 26, 1874; installed Ross Street Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., May 26, 1874, dismissed Sept. 1877; installed Greenville, Mass., Feb. 19, 1878, dismissed Nov. 5, 1879; installed Portsmouth, N. H., Nov. 19, 1879, dismissed July 23, 1889, acting pastor Emporia, Kan., 1889-91; Chula Vista, Cal., 1895 until his death.

HENRY BEMIS FAY (1442).

Immediately after the fall of "Fort Sumter" in 1861, several regiments of volunteers were raised in Wisconsin. Among them the 4th Regt. of infantry, and to this Regt. Mr. Fay's company was assigned. This company was formed in Kilbourn City, Columbia Co., Wis., and was then called the "Columbia Rifles" and designated Co. D. The regiment assembled at Racine City, Camp Atley, and there formed a camp of instruction. July 2, 1861 he was mustered into the U. S. service, the regiment then having 1.080 men. They left Racine July 15th for Harrisburg, Pa., under orders to report to Major General Patterson, near Harper's Ferry. While awaiting instructions from Harrisburg the battle of Bull Run occurred, which led to the regiment being ordered to Baltimore to report to Major General Dix, and on July 29th was sent to the Relay House on the B. & O. railroad to relieve the 6th Massachusetts regiment, and remained there until Nov. 4th of the same year. The regiment won the highest regard of the people of Howard a Carroll counties. During November and a part of December he was engag with other forces, under Brigadier General H. H. Lockwood in Accom and Northampton counties, Virginia, and returned to Baltimore Dec. 10t While General Butler's expedition was in progress there his regiment w ordered to Fortress Monroe, Va., by General McClellan (as he expressed "three old and good regiments from Baltimore." Among the three w the 4th Wisconsin, which departed Feb. 12, 1862 and again on March 6 he left Newport News for Ship Island and very narrowly escaped bei sunk by the well-aimed shots of the rebel battery on Sewell's Point. Arriv at Ship Island March 12, 1862 and co-operated with the fleets under Ca tain Farragut in taking Forts Jacksons and St. Philip. Entered New Orlea May 1st, the regiments being among the first Federal troops to mar through that city, and soon after accompanied an unsuccessful expedition Vicksburg, Miss., under General Williams. Having destroyed the Jacks railroad, and taken possession of Baton Rouge and Natchez, it participat in an engagement near Grand Gulf, Miss., about May 20, 1862. He return to Baton Rouge the last of May and again in June went on a second exp dition to Vicksburg, commanded as before. Destroying the town of Gra Gulf for acts of vandalism and digging the canal opposite Vicksburg, h regiment again returned to Baton Rouge and participated in the battle Aug. 5th when that place was assaulted by Gen. Breckenridge. Until Apr 1863, was located at various points on the river, taking part in several e peditions and invariably assigned to the most important duties; took a pro inent part in the battle of Camp Bisland, Pa., April 13th, leaving many kill and wounded; May 27th, was in the assault on Port Hudson, losing sevent eight killed and wounded. Again, June 14th, it led the assault on the abo place and acted as a "forlorn hope." The regiment in this encounter lost but ninety-three men out of two hundred and twenty-five. The survivo were promised by General Banks a medal of honor for conspicuous ga lantry. Mr. Fay, however, never received it. He received a gun-shot wou in his leg in this assault and also his boot heel was shot off. Aug. 6th t regiment was transferred to cavalry. From that time until his discha they acted as scouts and raiders. The regiment soon gained the reputati of being daring cavalry riders, was intrusted with many important duti and was continually confronting the forces under Wirt Adams, Kirby Smi and Forrest, meeting the Confederates almost every week and fighting ba tles of which history gives no record. It was in one of these engageme in Feb. 1864, that his horse was shot under him, near Pearl River, La. M Fay re-enlisted in March, 1864, in the field near Baton Rouge, and in t following November another horse was shot under him, near the mouth Red river. He was discharged Aug. 25, 1865, his regiment then being San Antonio, Texas.

Probably there are few today that did more hard work for their count than did Henry Bemis Fay, from the fact that he possessed an iron cons tution and was never sick during the war until the last two months of h service, for all of which he says, "I am truly thankful and today I look ba with pride to the gallant exploits of the command to which I belonge they served." After being discharged he settled in Trempeleau Co., Wi arm and lived there until 1879, when he removed to Fe gus Falls, Minn. ng the time he lived in Wisconsin he was several times elected to the of Supervisor and since he resided in Minnisota has been chairman of oard of Supervisors one term, elected Town Clerk, 1885 and 1886, Jus- of the Peace 1886 for the town of Friberg, Ottertail Co., Minn. Mr. vas discharged as First Sergeant. . He has often regreted that he did ake advantage of the many opportunities offered him for advancement e ranks, but as he says, "I was too young and reckless then to give the r a thought." He was receiving a pension of four dollars per month 87. His brother, Aaron Daniel, was also a soldier.

FRANCIS DANIEL FAY (1458).

He served in the 2nd Wisconsin cavalry regiment in the war of 1861 to enlisting Jan., 1862. He was severely wounded near Little Rock, Ark., vas discharged on that account. The government of Minnesota sent him utenant's commission, but he was unfit for duty. He was in seven fights had four horses killed under him. He has been an invalid ever since. brother William was also in the war and the oldest son of his aunt, y Fay, Samuel Warren Stowe, was also a soldier in the late war and was soner in Andersonville prison eleven months.

GEORGE FLAGG FAY (1673).

'Obituary of a noted business man:—Mr. Fay died at his residence, 311 street, in Fitchburg, Mass., May 8, 1895. His health has been seri- impaired for a considerable time and his enfeebled constitution could ong withstand the sudden and severe attack of pneumonia, which nenced Sunday, the 5th. He was not feeling as well as usual on Satur- but went to the office of Crocker, Burbank & Co., in the morning and d their mills at West Fitchburg in the afternoon. He attended the rmation service at Christ Church Sunday morning, but while in church eized with a chill, which proved to be the commencement of the disease terminated his life.

'He was born at Warwick, Mass., Sept. 26, 1828. His parents were is and Adaline Augusta (Flagg) Fay. In 1831 he went with his parents owell, where he obtained his education. In 1845 he went to Sharon, e his father was in the lumber business, and in 1849 he was in his r's store at Royalton, Vt. In the spring of 1852 he came to Fitchburg ket agent for the Fitchburg railroad. In the spring of 1853 he returned owell, where he was attacked with rheumatic fever and was laid up till He then returned to Royalton, that year, and was in his father's store the spring of 1858, when he came to Fitchburg as bookkeeper for ker & Burbank. He was admitted to the firm of Crocker, Burbank & n 1860, the firm then consisting of Alvin Crocker, Gardner S. Burbank, T. Crocker, Geo. F. Fay and Samuel E. Crocker. Charles T. Crocker only survivor of the original firm. Mr. Fay has been a very active and l member of Fitchburg's leading manufacturing firm. His knowledge tails was wonderful and his skill as a financier has been of inestimable it to this and other business enterprises, which have contributed so to the prosperity of this city.

'He has been a director of the Vermont and Massachusetts railroad since 1868 and President of the company since the death of Daniel S. Ric ardson, in 1889. He was a director of the Rollstone National Bank fro 1873 to 1883, and of the Fitchburg National Bank since the latter year; trustee of the Fitchburg Savings Bank since 1866. He was early associate with the late Alvah Crocker in the development of Turner's Falls. He wa a director of the Turner's Falls Water Power Co., and of the John Russe Cutlery Co., of Turner's Falls. He was an early, constant and liberal su porter of Christ Church. Was a vestryman from the organization of th parish, Oct. 7, 1863, till 1869, when he succeeded his father as warden; wa treasurer from 1864 to 1892 and contributed liberally both time and mone to Christian and philanthropic enterprises. It is known that the late Gar ner S. Burbank consulted with Mr. Fay before making his will, by which h provided so munificently for the establishment of a hospital in this city, an Mr. Burbank selected him as one of the trustees under his will. Fitchbur owes much to Mr. Fay for the steps already taken towards the establishme of the Burbank hospital. Mr. Fay in his private benefactions, literally obeye the injunction, 'Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth,' an none but recipients will ever know how many and how large were th streams of his beneficence. The habit of unostentatious giving commence at the beginning of his active life and continued until his death. He di liked ostentation, and few men of his ability have so little said of them i public print, as all who were acquainted with him knew that newspape notoriety was extremely distasteful to him.

"In politics Mr. Fay was a lifelong and earnest Republican, and fr quently served the party as delegate to its conventions and on importan committees. He was a delegate to the Republican National Convention Minneapolis which re-nominated President Harrison in 1892. He serve as representative to the General Court in 1881 and was strongly supporte for the Republican nomination for Senator in 1883. He served the city Alderman from ward 2, in 1880 and 1881. His influence was ever cast fo integrity and sound business principles in the discharge of public an private trusts and his death is a public loss. His wife died in 1866 leavin two daughters, Miss Lucy Fay, who is her father's only near survivin relative, and Miss Alice, who died in childhood."

ADDISON ORVILLE FAY (1869).

He succeeded his father in the manufacture of gunpowder and hig explosives. He is president of the Miami Powder Co., of Xenia, Ohi of the Aetna Powder Co., of Chicago, Ill., and of the American Powder C of Acton, Mass. He is a very busy and prosperous man, visiting the mil at Chicago and Acton frequently, and residing in Xenia. Each departme or division of the work is carried on in separate buildings to avoid a lo of the whole plant in case of an explosion, which happens occasionally. H father was killed by an accidental explosion of one of the mills under h charge in Massachusetts, March 24, 1873. Mr. Fay, as was also his fathe was very much interested in the genealogy of the Fays.

MARY BRIGHAM FAY (1872).

The only daughter of Addison G. Fay, whose death caused him s much grief, occurred Nov. 12, 1871, aged twenty-one years, one month an twenty-eight days. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Grindall Reynolds, and the following are portions of his remarks concerning Mary: "Thirteen years ago, when I first came to this place, I knew our friend as a pleasant, bright-eyed little girl; I have known her ever since and watched her. She had passed through all the appointed experiences of early life, with a beautiful simplicity and whole-hearted fidelity; in the school, obedient and studious; in friendship, steady and true; in all good works, anxious to do her full part and far more; a good daughter, a good sister, she had grown to be what is most attractive of all earthly things, a pure maiden, affectionate, true and faithful. She had entered upon a life full of bright, happy hopes, and full of noble expectations, and full of a present and daily fidelity, and now that life for this world is ended. So God in his good providence has willed. We shall see her face here no more. But in all the past there is nothing to be regreted, but everything to remember with tearful pleasure. I am sure that I am right in saying that she was a person of striking qualities. Her early maturity of mind and conscience was, I think, remarkable. Her readiness, or rather her gladness to do every duty, to bear every burden, and to enter upon every field of usefulness which came to her was remarkable. Were this the time and place for prolonged eulogy I should say that hers was a character in which strength of will and gentleness of heart and manner, natural goodness and a sense of religious obligation were beautifully blended. A character full of present value and future promise. Even the sadness of this hour, the deep sense of loss, the presence of those mostly bereaved, cannot keep up from thanking God that amid the influence of a Christian society and community a character so true and attractive has grown up, ripened and borne fruits of a good life; that by the grace of God living a short time she has fulfilled a long time, and not all the sadness of this hour can keep us from remembering and thanking God for the remembrance, that all the pure sentiment which secured affection, all the truth which awakened respect, all the fidelity which furnished an example, all that made us cherish her and that makes it sad to part with her, are all living, all transplanted, all belong to that great, good life of the New Jerusalem above."

The above account of Mary B. Fay and also the sketch of her father, Addison G. Fay No. 829, has been furnished by the brother and son, Addison Orville Fay of Xenia, Ohio.

WESLEY CORWIN FAY (1989).

He was born at Milan, Ohio, Feb. 20, 1844. When he was two years old his parents moved to Wisconsin and he was thirteen when his father died. He being the oldest of four children, much of the responsibility and care of the family devolved upon him and also the management of their farm of forty acres. Two years later his mother married again, and he went to live with an uncle in Ohio, where he was at the opening of the war of 1861-5, and at the age of seventeen he enlisted Sept. 17, 1861 in Co. C, 55th Ohio Vols. After five months' drilling his regiment was hurried to the front and took part in the battle of Moorefield, West Va., Feb., 1862. Soon after he with others were sent to the hospital at Grafton, where he was detailed to dress wounds and care for the sick for a year and a half, when he longed for more active duties of the field and he joined his remigent while on the way to Chattanooga to aid General Thomas. Here he often found short rations and hard fighting everywhere. After General Grant was commissioned to direct affairs Mr. Fay was in the battle of Missionary Ridge, Nov. 25, 1863, routing the enemy, and his regiment went with General Sherman to the relief of Gen. Burnside at Knoxville, Tenn., but the rebels retreated and his regiment returned to Chattanooga after an absence of ten days, experiencing more hardships than at any other period of the war. But now they had a period of rest and went into winter quarters in Lookout Valley until May, 1864, the regiment having re-enlisted. Mr. Fay (with many others) owing to disabilities, was sent to Washington and placed in the Reserve Corps to guard the forts around the city, where he found active duties again. July 10th, General Early made a dash to capture the city and Mr. Fay was in the battle of Fort Stevens, seven miles north of Washington. From this time forward a period of quiet was enjoyed and in September he received his discharge and returned to Milan, Ohio.

Here he formed the purpose of fitting himself for teaching school and for years he attended the Milan Academy. Here he became acquainted with Miss Mary Green, to whom he was married Aug. 22. 1866, and went to housekeeping on the shore of Lake Erie, where he taught his first term of school, which was only a stepping stone to the one object of securing a home, and after seven terms he removed to Sunfield, Mich., located on twenty acres of timber land, and began Oct. 4, 1870, to clear his little farm, striking the first blow in a maple tree about eighteen inches in diameter, a part of the stump of which and the roots are still visible near his new house (in 1896). He erected a log cabin which sheltered his family for seventeen years and where he suffered all the privations of pioneer life, where his children were born, and where his eldest daughter, Daisy, was married. Many hallowed associations still cluster around the old log cabin, and many joys and sorrows are connected with it. After receiving his pension in 1882 he enjoyed more of the comforts of life, and his home was always open to the stranger and traveler, he claimed to get more information from a genuine "tramp" than from weeks of travel.

In 1886 he went west on a journey of eight weeks. Among the places visited were Denver and Pikes Peak, where he walked fourteen miles to the top to witness a snow storm in July, also lightening in a valley, on one side of which the mountain tops could be seen above the storm. He visited the Grand Canon of the Colorado, Salt Lake City, San Francisco and the mountains of California, where he saw the great red-wood trees, the bark of which is several inches in thickness, specimens of which he secured and brought home, with many other curiosities, to enrich his collection of nature's varied and interesting works. He also sailed 900 miles on the Pacific ocean to Portland, Oregon, up the Columbia river via the Northern Pacific railroad to the Yellowstone Park, where he walked 110 miles to see the park, returning on foot over the same route. Since that time he has traveled quite extensively in his own country, of which he never tires of talking. In Jan., 1896, he spent part of the winter in South Dakota and many interesting incidents he has treasured up in his memory to relate to his family and friends who find much of interest in his conversations and recitals.

In his younger days he had a strong desire to enter the ministry, but circumstances over which he had no control directed otherwise, but he is a prominent member and an active worker in the church, is interested in all that pertains to the promotion of good morals and the general welfare. He has a competence of this world's goods to support him and his family, also to help in charitable objects. Since four of his children have been married and left the paternal roof, he has adopted a boy into his family.

And now he can sit under his own vine and shade trees with the prospect of a quiet evening of his life that will "Speak peace on every side."

LUCIUS M. FAY (2003).

Jan. 4th, 1883, he writes: "I am in sympathy with the work you have undertaken and at the proper time shall be pleased to extend pecuniary aid to the enterprise if necessary. The undertaking must of necessity be attended with a prodigious amount of un appreciated labor."

He graduated from Wisconsin State University in 1874; elected editor of the college paper during his junior year; was local editor of the Wisconsin State Journal the year after graduating. He became an editor of the "Madison Daily Democrat" April 7, 1876, which position he retained for many years with the additional duties imposed of business manager of the company known as "The Democrat Printing and the Wisconsin Publishers' Union." His department of the enterprise was "Auxiliary Publishers," wholesale paper dealers, roller composition manufacturers and stenographers. In this department the company embraced the official state printing of Wisconsin, miscellaneous job printing, etc. The Democrat was said to be the leading Democratic newspaper of the state and the only morning paper between Chicago and St. Paul.

MARTIN A. FAY (2010).

He was also a printer and donated a package of circulars for free distribution among the members of the Fay family for soliciting information (His brother Lucius had previously printed and donated a package of blanks for facilitating the collection of family records). Martin A. Fay was initiated into the printing business in the office of the "Nashville News" of Barry Co., Mich. He then went to Vermontville, Eaton Co., Mich., and engaged with Mr. Fleming on a newspaper called "The Vermontville Courier;" a short lived paper which was soon merged into the "Charlotte Prohibitionist," from there he went to Battle Creek, Mich., as local editor on one of the papers in that city. He next taught school near Eaton Rapids, Mich. We next find him located in Lansing, Mich., as editor of a small paper, "The Sunday Siftings," which he published a few months and subsequently removed to Madison, Wis. Here he entered the office of the "Democrat" (which his brother was editing) supplementing his income by publishing a monthly paper devoted to a special object. He next located in Crandon, Wis., where he edited and published a paper entitled "Forest Leaves," which was his last venture in the printing business. Here he was appointed postmaster. He was twice married and in less than a year after his second marriage he died in Colorado, where he had gone to recruit his health. His widow returned to Crandon, where she was again married and in 1888 she was postmistress.

CHAUNCEY F. FAY (2011).

The death of Mr. Fay, Sept. 13, 1887 was duly announced in the "Norwalk Reflector," Ohio, and the following from his obituary is worthy of recording in memory of his worth:

He was born in Oxford, Erie Co., Ohio, May 4, 1849, the son of Daniel N. Fay. Attending school in that township and elsewhere he grew up popular among his associates as a careful business man, trusted by all who knew him. He held positions of honor by the votes of his fellow citizens, among them that of trustee of Norwalk township, and in all places he acquitted himself well. He was married and the father of two interesting children. But in 1884 his health failed, his mind became affected and he was taken to the asylum at Columbus, Ohio. After remaining there three years death came to his relief. His body was brought to Norwalk and the funeral was held at his old home Sept. 16, 1887. The services were conducted by Rev. T. F. Hildreth of the M. E. church. The remains were deposited in the vault in Woodlawn cemetery until the 27th when they were laid away in their last resting place in the grave. Thus passed away a noble man, leaving wife, father, mother, brother and sister, to mourn his untimely death, and hosts of friends to regret the departure of one of the kindest and best of men. He was a little over thirty-eight years of age."

GERSHOM 2 AND HIS DESCENDANTS.

Ie was one of the first settlers in that part of Marlboro that was after- set off to Westboro in 1717 and again set off to Northboro in 1727; vas he an inhabitant of three towns in succession without moving his tion. He served as Constable in Marlboro in 1714 and in 1718, March ng included in Westboro, he was chosen Surveyor of that town. July 20 and in 1721 he was elected one of the committee for building the neeting house which stood about 80 rods west of Wessonville. In 1720 s again chosen Constable.

Ie was admitted to the church in Marlboro before he was set off to boro, and continued to worship there until that part of the town where ed was included in Westboro.

He died at the age of 39 years, leaving a large tract of land in the vest part of Northboro to be divided to his four sons. His estate was l without recourse to a probate court.

Ie left six or seven minor children who were brought up to respect- y and industry with no other guardian than their heroic and energetic er, Mary Brigham, daughter of Dr. John Brigham of Sudbury. She istinguished for heroism in the Indian war. She received $375 by her 's will.

ershom Fay was the youngest son of John Fay and he built the first ill in Northboro, 60 rods east of the Unitarian church.

Ie was exposed, like others of that day, to the incursions of the Indians, s a protection, palisades were erected around many of the houses to as a fort or resort to which the families in the neighborhood might in case the Indians should make their appearance. In 1707 a tragical occurred in Marlboro in that part of the township now included in boro. Among the garrison houses in town at that time was one known nuel Goodnow's near the stream called Stirrup Brook. This garrison esigned as the resort of the families of Nathaniel Oakes, Jonathan For- and Gershom Fay, as well as that of Mr. Goodnow. This precaution btedly saved the life of Mrs. Fay and her two oldest children.

n 1707, Aug. 18, she and Miss Mary Goodnow, daughter of Samuel now, were gathering herbs in a meadow when they saw 20 or more Indian warriors stealthily approaching them. They immediately ran e fort. Mrs. Fay with her children succeeded in reaching it and clos- e gate before her pursuers could overtake her. Fortunately there was an in the garrison, the rest of the men being at work in the field. The es attempted to break through the enclosure but were repelled by the defenders within, Mrs. Fay loading the muskets belonging to the fort anding them to her companion; whether it was her husband or not, not know, but he was able to keep a constant fire upon the enemy till y of their friends in the field, hearing the report of the muskets, came r relief and the enemy fled. Thus was the life of this woman and her elpless children saved by her own heroism.

Villiam A. Bartlett of Northboro, whose mother and grandmother were writes April 3, 1884, as follows:

It is a question whether the garrison house or fort, in which Mrs.

Fay's heroism was displayed was some part of the house in which I now or whether it was another near by, built on purpose. The grave of Goodnow is on my farm about 30 rods from my house." Her grav remained without a monument in 1866. She being lame, could not e from her merciless pursuers. She was overtaken, seized and dragge the woods across Stirrup Brook and inhumanly murdered and scalpe mangled remains were found and buried a few days after and her grav visible 130 years afterwards. The Indians were pursued and overtake a battle ensued in which two white men and nine Indians were killed.
packs of the Indians fell into the hands of the whites and in one of the found the scalp of Miss Goodnow, which furnished the first clue o melancholy fate.

A large elm tree growing in the cellar, marks the spot where once the house of Gershom Fay.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES OF THE DESCENDANTS OF GERSHOM FAY

GERSHOM FAY (3).

He resided in the Northwesterly part of Northboro, while that town w a part of Westboro, about eighty rods west of Lewis Fay's house, and fo rods south of the brick schoolhouse. The site of his house, in a field e of the road, is indicated by a very beautiful umbrella shaped elm tree.

He held no town office except Surveyor in 1762. At the formation the church in Northboro he became a member. He and his wife walk five miles to attend church in Westboro, about half a mile west of Wess ville, and their attendance was more constant than that of many people this day whose distance from church is measured by rods instead of mil
They led their older children but carried the others.

His wife was in her 99th year when she died. Her father was Nathan Oakes. He came from England and married Mehitable Rediat; she d Nov .25, 1702; he married 2nd May 20, 1703 Mary Holloway who was mother of Gershom Fay's wife.

SILAS FAY (5).

He inherited one quarter of his father's extensive tract of land in the rthwest part of Northboro. He became a member of the church in rthboro at its formation in May 21, 1746. He served Westboro as Sur-or in 1745; Tythingman 1748; Deer Reve 1748; and was one of the pret Church Committee to sign letters missive to the neighboring churches id them in the ordination of their first minister, Rev. John Martyn.

His youngest son was between three and four years old, when his father
l, and was a minor over fourteen years of age in 1770, resided in Acton chose for his guardian William Baker. His brother Timothy brought his other son Silas, who used to tell his relatives about living with his le "Tim." His widow in Oct. 26, 1758 administered upon his estate, raised at over $1,000.

TIMOTHY FAY (6).

In 1728 Joseph Wheeler was his guardian. He settled on a part of his er's farm adjacent to his brothers. He was elected by Westboro, Fence-ver 1748, and served as Deer Reve the same year, Constable and Surveyor 2, Tythingman and Surveyor 1755 and 1761, Assessor 1761 and 1762, oolcommittee man 1762, Selectman 1764 and 1765, Precinct Committee 5 and 1765, Moderator of meetings 1760 and 1761, Treasurer 1760. After incorporation of Northboro in 1766 he was elected four times as Select-and Town alias District Clerk three times. In the act of the General rt of Jan. 24, 1766 incorporating the district of Northboro, Timothy Fay appointed as one of the principal inhabitants to warn the free holders neet Mar. 4, 1766 for the choice of town officers. He was Capt. of the thboro Militia and when the war of the Revolution began in 1775 he, ough sixty years of age, was on the ground and drew $125 from the town his services.

He was evidently the first man for his time in Northboro. He was the le "Tim" who took and brought up his nephew Silas.

PAUL FAY (6).

He was an acting member of the first Precinct meetings in 1746, was sen Constable for the north part of Westboro in 1752, Tythingman in 1. He was a soldier in the earliest part of the war of the Revolution and v for his services $170 from the town.

THADDEUS FAY (17).

He resided in the Easterly part of Northboro on or near the home-d of his grandfather Gershom Fay when it belonged to Marlboro, but e time of his birth was a part of Westboro. He and his brothers Gern and Adam lived in the fourth division of Northboro. One of the dedants of this family has furnished the following facts, and reflections n the habits and feelings of their ancestors.

The circumstance of Thaddeus Fay's mother leading her little son church gave rise to this stanza:

"For miles along the untrodden way,
And through the forest wild,
In summer's heat and winter's cold,
The mother led her child;
Far to the plain old meeting house,
To hear the word divine.
Such was their zeal to worship God
In days of Auld Lang Syne."

Such was the spirit of the wives and daughters of the first settlers of thrifty and enterprising land. In imagination we can see them dresse their homely and homespun garments, wending their way on foot, mounted on pillions behind their husbands or brothers, passing thro narrow and crooked lanes impossible for carriages, for such luxuries had then come into use for riding to church, far from their homes, not to gra their eyes with everything lovely, not to step on carpeted floors, or to upon seats, but to plain unfinished churches with nothing but rude benc to sit upon. How great the contrast between those days and these. hundred and fifty years have brought great changes with them.

But we will not spend our time in reflecting upon the past, or inquiring whether "the former days were better than these," but will p forward, striving to improve our privileges and fulfill our duties and des as faithfully as they did theirs.

Thaddeus Fay resided on a farm now (1859) occupied by Ephr Barnard in Northboro. As early as 1779 the citizens of Northboro bu Seminary, a school of high order and excellence, costing nearly $500, Thaddeus Fay paid next to the highest amount on the shares and he one of the committee for choosing teachers for the school. He was Sel man in 1778, 1780, 1782, 1783, 1784, 1785, 1787, and 1790. Town Treasurer in 1782, 1783, 1784, and 1788. He received from the town his services in the American Army, during the siege of Boston, $135. was in the Company of Lieut. Maynard. He was 91 years old when he d

JOSEPH FAY (20).

He was the progenitor of the Fay families of Walpole, N. H. He c from Mystic, Mass. and settled on land opposite the residence of Joh Emerson. When the call was made for men to serve their country in great struggle for liberty and independence, he was among the number volunteered to fight and die for the liberty of coming generations. above note is from the "History of Walpole," by Aldrich. In Feb. 1 Mr. Fay was a Sergeant in Capt. Jason Wait's company of Col. Be Regiment of N. H. Troops. From Nov. 8, 1776 till his death he Ensign in Capt. John Gregg's Company of the 3rd N. H. Regt. In second battle of Stillwater, or Bemis' Heights, he was wounded in the th and was taken to the hospital at Albany, N. Y., where the leg was amput e was thought to be recovering, but one night the ligatures slipped off tump, and he bled to death, Nov. 2, 1777.

His wife was Lucy Warren, said to have been a distant relatitve of Gen. h Warren of Revolutionary fame.

Tradition says she was a sister of Major Warren.

SILAS FAY (27).

He was born in Lincoln, Mass., married in Princeton and died in Cam- Me., to which place he removed from Princeton soon after 1800, with of his family. His brother Thomas was a minor in Acton in 1770 and chosen William Baker as his guardian. His father Silas died leaving his ly of young children fatherless, and Silas went to live with his uncle othy Fay, and he in after years used to tell his relatives and friends t his "Uncle Tim."

NAHUM FAY (31).

He resided in Northboro and lived on the "Coram Farm" as it was d, some fifty rods this side of the West school house. He was one of oble army of teachers who continued long in the service and did not e from the field till reminded by the infirmities of age that it was time t off the armor and give place to new recruits. He taught school in ative town of Northboro forty years, and his sons Dexter and John el, each taught more than half that term. Nahum Fay began teaching n he was about eighteen years old, which would make him about sixty s of age when he retired from his life work. He was also Clerk of thboro, where he resided forty years in succssion, was Selectman most e time, chairman of the board for forty years continuously, was ap- ted Justice of the Peace when he was 36 years old and was an active Jus- 32 years. He represented his native town two years in the General rt and held the office of Deacon of the church for thirty years. He was erintendent of the Sabbath School from the time of the organization of Evangelical church to the time of his death, though he was over four e years of age. The offices he held and the period he filled them is fficient eulogy upon his character.

At the time of his wedding a great depth of snow rendered the roads assible and put an embargo on all ordinary vehicles of conveying their ding guests. Mrs. Fay went on a hand sled nearly three miles to her home; in the meantime the wary husband followed on rackets after the with one eye on the team, and the other and one hand on the precious ht to save it from a plunge if the sled should upset, or what is more y, be overturned, for there were mischievous rogues in those days.

TIMOTHY FAY (36).

There are several old deeds and papers now (1888) in the possession of randson William Fay of Chester, Mass., which give authentic informa- of Timothy Fay. The first is a deed given by Ebenezer Lewis of hen, County of Litchfield, dated June 11, 1777, and conveying a parcel nd lying in the town of Winchester in said County to the said Timothy , another deed from Bethiel Hitchcock of Chester, Mass., conveys to Timothy Fay a tract of land in said town of Chester dated Dec. 6, 1793.

The fact is well established that during the following year, 1794, he moved family to Chester when his oldest son Timothy was thirteen years of a He served two years and nine months in the Revolutionary War carrying flint lock musket made in Scotland.

JOSEPH FAY JR. (67).

His father was Ensign in the 3rd N. H. Regiment in the War of t Revolution and died from wounds received at the battle of Stillwater and t son followed the father as a servant and enlisted Mar. 1, 1777, as a private the 8th Company 3rd Regt. N. H. Vols. (of which his father was Ensig He was only a few months over fourteen years of age, and it is said he sto "on tiptoe" in order to pass muster as to height. He served till June 1780, when he was discharged.

REV. WARREN FAY (116).

He graduated at Harvard College, 1807, as A. B. and received the d gree of D. D. from the corporation of Dartmouth College, Aug. 1828. Aft he received his degree of D. D. he was elected President of the College Western Reserve, Hudson, Ohio, but declined accepting the office. He w also a member of more than 150 Ecclesiastic Councils in several States du ing his ministry. Aug. 17, 1808, the Congregational church of Brimfie Mass., voted to call Mr. Warren Fay as their pastor, and Aug. 29th t town concurred in that vote. The salary offered was $500 and 25 cords wood. He was ordained Nov. 2, 1808. Rev. Samuel Austin of Worcest with whom Mr. Fay had studied divinity, preached the ordination serm from Eph. 6, 19 and 20. "And for me, that utterance may be given un me, that I may open my mouth boldly, to make known the mystery of t gospel. For which I am an ambassador in bonds; that therein I may spe boldly as I ought to speak." Rev. Aaron Bancroft of Worcester, gave t charge. Rev. Alfred Ely of Monson, the right hand of fellowship.

Mr. Fay was a man of more than ordinary ability, but he found in t town a troublesome and unmanageable parish. It is not at all incredib that under such circumstances, he is said to have been intimate with so few persons, rather than to have cultitvated a general acquaintance amo his people. The church from the first sustained him heartily, and "Fa Saints" was the common name given to his friends. Sept. 4, 1810, the tov "voted that they were not satisfied with their minister" and that a copy this vote be laid before him. May 16, 1811, it was "voted that the chur may agree with Mr. Fay and appoint a council to dismiss and recomme him." This the church voted not to do May 23rd. June 26th Mr. Fay w dismissed by a council, convened at his own request and that of the chur which appointed a committee for that purpose. June 14th the council advising his dismissal protested against the summary and unchristian pr ceedings of the town. May 11, 1812, a committee reporting that Mr. F was willing to preach until July or longer without expense to the town, was so employed. Sept. 14th the town "voted, to hire him to preach un the first Monday in November," when the town "voted not to invite M Fay to resettle here in the gospel ministry, 51 for and 83 against." He w installed at Harvard 1814, June 26th, and he was called from there to becon

John S Gay

Pastor of the First Church in Charlestown, Mass., as successor to Dr. rse, which pastorate he held for twenty years and then retired from public to a residence in his nattive town of Northboro.

LEWIS FAY (139).

He resided in Northboro, was Selectman, School committee man, and ot. of a Company of Volunteers, one of the Vice Presidents at the Cen- nial Celebration of Northboro, Aug. 22, 1866, and was one of the heaviest payers of the town in 1866, his tax being $133.34, and in the list of per- s in Northboro who paid an annual excise tax of $20 and upwards in- ding incomes in May, 1866, his name is found as paying $29.95. He ns to have been a highly respected and honored citizen as was also his ther, Abraham Fay.

SAMUEL FAY (189).

He was a very ambitious man. He moved into Indiana with his second e, Calista Wilcox, who had two children by a previous marriage, and Mr. had six children. He only lived three years in the West. His family had the Western fever, and he nursed them all through and then came vn with it and died, leaving his children doubly orphaned, who not only their parents but all their property, as the title to their farm was worth- . Mr. Fay kept a hotel until he died, a disheartened man.

JOHN S. FAY (377).

Postmaster of Marlboro, Mass., was born in Berlin, Mass., Jan. 15, 1840, parents being Samuel Chandler and Nancy (Warren) Fay. He is of the enth generation from John Fay, who was born in England in 1648, em- ked May 30, 1656 on the ship "Speedwell," Robert Locke, master, and ved in Boston, June 27, 1856. 1656

The line of descent from him is through Gershom, who was born Oct. 1681, died in 1720; Gershom Jr., born 1703, died, 1784; Adam, born 1736, l 1810; Baxter, born 1778, died 1854; and Samuel Chandler Fay, above ned.

Mr. Fay's mother was a grand-daughter of Benjamin Warren, who was bably born in Westboro, Mass., although his wife was a native of Marl- o. After marriage they resided in Westboro. They had 15 children, ong them four that were twin-born. Joseph, one of the four, born in stboro about 1785, twin brother of Benjamin, Jr., married Arethusa ver, daughter of Edwin Seaver, of Worcester. He was a life long farmer. children were: Nancy, born in 1817, who married Samuel C. Fay, and the mother of Mr. John S. Fay; Joseph Warren, Jr. and William rren.

John S. Fay has resided in Marlboro continuously since 1848. He was cated in the public schools of Marlboro and at a commercial college in rcester. He enlisted July 16, 1861, in Co. F, 13 Regt. Mass. Vols., and in service with his company until Apr. 30, 1863. At that time, being in on near Fredricksburg, Va., he received wounds from a shell fired from Confederate ranks that cost him his right arm and leg. He was at this e holding the rank of Sergeant. Six weeks later, on June 15, 1863, le in the field hospital, he was captured by the Confederates, and until July 17, was confined in Libby Prison at Richmond. He was then paroled and sent to Annapolis, and from there was discharged. He reached hi home in October of that year, the most crippled and mutilated of all the survivors of the 831 men that Marlboro sent into the service of the government during the great struggle for the preservation of the Union.

Mr. Fay was appointed Postmaster of Marlboro by President Andrew Johnson in May 1865, and by successive appointments he has held the office ever since, (now 1898) receiving this long period, not only because he is a veteran of the war and has made a sacrifice which entitles him to the admiration of every man in Marlboro, but also because the efficiency of his service as Postmaster has been strongly marked, and because the people of the city are satisfied that the affairs of the office could not be more successfully administered. The office when Mr. Fay took charge of it, had jus emerged from the fourth-class and required but one clerk. It is now a second-class office, and requires the services of eight carriers and four clerks Mr. Fay was Tax Collector for the town of Marlboro in 1867 and 1868. He is a member of John A. Rawlins Post, No. 43, G. A. R., of which he was one of the organizers in 1868; and he has held many official positions in that body.

He was a member of the committee appointed by the town to erect the soldiers' monument. In 1874 he was elected Junior Vice-Commander of the Department of Massachusetts of the Grand Army of the Republic.

On Nov. 20, 1869, Mr. Fay was united in marriage with Lizzie, daughter of James Monroe and Elizabeth (Pratt) Ingalls. Mrs. Fay is a descendan of Edmund Ingalls who settled in Lynn in 1629, the line being continued from Edmund through Henry, Henry, Jr., Josiah, Josiah 2, Josiah 3 and James to her father James Monroe (above mentioned) who was born May 8, 1819, in Jaffrey, N. B. His father died when he was eleven years old and after living three years with a farmer in Rindge, N. H., he went to live with his uncle Josiah in Fitzwilliam, N. H. From 1865 until his decease in Dec. 1894, he was a carriage-maker in Marlboro. He was a veteran of the Civil War, enlisting in Co. F 16th Regt. N. H. Vols. and served in the Army of the Gulf and at the siege of Port Hudson. He was a member of John A. Rawlins Post, No. 43, G. A. R. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Reuben Pratt, of Fitzwilliam, N. H., and they were the parents of two children, Mrs. Fay being the only one living.

Mr. and Mrs. Fay have one son, Frederic Harold Fay, who was born July 5, 1872. He was graduated at the Mass. Institute of Technology in the class of 1893, and in the following year, after a year of post-graduate work he took his degree of Master of Science. Since then he has been in the office of the city engineer of Boston as designer of bridges and genera structural work. He is a member of Marlboro Lodge, No. 85, I. O. O. F. of the Boston Society of Civil Engineers; of the American Society of Civi Engineers, and of the Technology Club of Boston. He is secretary of his class and one of the officers of the Association of Class Secretaries of the Mass. Institute of Technology. On April 21, 1897 he married Clara daughter of J. Fred. Potter, of Quincy, Ill. They have one child, Allen Potter Fay, born March 30, 1898. The family reside in Boston.

Mr. John S. Fay is a member of Marlboro Lodge, No. 85, I. O. O. F.

which he has passed through all the chairs; and he also belongs to the rand Lodge of Massachusetts. For some years he has been a Notary ublic. He has been closely identified with the Marlboro Co-operatitve ank from its organization, of which he is vice-president, and is chairman the Security Committee of its Board of Directors. He has been for many ars an active member of the Unitarian Church in Marlboro.

DR. ALLEN CLARK FAY (424).

He graduated at Woodstock, Vt. Medical College in 1834 besides read- g with the celebrated "Old Dr. Twichell" in Keene, N. H. He com- enced practice in Winchendon, Mass., 1836. Dr. Addison S. Peck, the ly physician in town, having succeeded his father, Gustavus D. Peck, who d removed to Sunderland. Dr. Fay contracted with the younger Dr. eck to take his practice and purchase his real estate, a part of what had longed aforetime to the older Dr. Peck, and had come down from athaniel Morse through Eleazer Wright and his son Abner. Having anted himself in his position, Dr. Fay soon commenced an ample pro- ssional field and achieved a large success which he held fast till the infirm- es of age compelled him to relinquish to his son, Dr. Joseph Allen Fay.

The Milford Journal of June 23, 1880, in announcing his death the preceding Friday, June 18, 1880, closes the notice as follows:

"The deceased was President of the Milford Gas Light Company at e time of his death, and had been a member of the Thurber Medical In- itute from the day of its organization, and his death will be sincerely ourned in many a family in Milford and vicinity. He always enjoyed a ide reputation as a skillful, careful practitioner, and he was always per- anently and zealously identified with the interests and prosperity of the edical Institute of which he was an honored and beloved member. He as a man of great geniality and good humor, which characteristics he re- ined to the last."

ORLANDO P. FAY (425).

He was born in Walpole, N. H., Oct. 31, 1789, and removed to Pratts- rgh, Steuben Co., N. Y. He was married in South Bristol, Ontario Co., . Y., Jan. 23, 1817 to Miss Emily Hayes, daughter of Simeon and Betsey Iolly) H. She was born in Granby, Conn., Dec. 24, 1795. She was a stant cousin to President Hayes.

Mr. Fay began life with good health and favorable prospects. He cated on Mill St., nearly one mile from the village of Prattsburgh, where built a saw mill and stocked it with a large lot of first class pine logs from hich he manufactured a sufficient quantity of choice lumber, upon the sale which he depended for money to meet his indebtedness and have a sur- us for future operations. But unfortunately for him, before he could arket his lumber, the price for that commodity as for everything else, sud- enly dropped to a low figure, and he was obliged to mortgage his mill and her property, including his home, all of which was finally sacrificed to eet his matured debts. He was never able to fully regain his financial anding. The health of his wife failed, doctor bills had to be paid and other unfavorable and discouraging circumstances kept him a poor ma during his life.

In connection with his saw mill he had a cloth-dressing establishmen and a dye-house for coloring the home-made cloth which in those days wa woven in hand looms, in which shoddy was an unknown quantity. Th writer well remembers the long rows of "Tenter Bars" adjoining the coloring mill on which the long rolls of cloth were stretched out to dry ready fo the shearing process and the final pressing of the finished cloth.

Mr. Fay was drafted just as the war of 1812 was nearly ended, and h with others marched for the frontier, and were to report at Buffalo, N. Y They slept in a barn the first night, but before they reached their destination peace was declared and he was honorably discharged from further service. He served four years as Justice of the Peace, discharging the dutie of that office with characteristic firmness and fidelity. Some of the politica opponents called him a "basswood Justice" because he never gave his official sanction to liquor selling, and would impose fines upon those wh violated the statute against profanity and horse racing.

Mr. Fay and his wife united with the Congregational Church in 182 and he was for many years an actitve member of the Standing Committe of the church, always faithful in the discharge of all the duties that came t him. Whenever a case of discipline came up before the committee he wa selected to visit the recreant member, and well did he perform the tas assigned him; a task which the other members of the committee willingl avoided. In 1887 the writer received a letter from one who was also a prominent member of the same church, in which, speaking of Mr. Fay as a churc worker, he writes as follows:

"It is a great pleasure for me to speak of him. We were both the subjects of renewing grace in the same revival and were both taken into th church at the same time. I do not know of any member of our church tha I had so many religious interviews with. It can well be said of him: 'We done good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.' well remember that he made a very conscientious Justice of the Peace."

His funeral sermon was preached by his pastor, Rev. B. C. Smith, fro the text, "Help Lord, for the godly man ceaseth."

Mrs. Fay was in early life a handsome, lovely maiden, whose cheek were of a rosy hue, indicating health and a prospect of future usefulnes but after a few years of married life all was changed and her life was one suffering invalidism which she bore with Christian fortitude. She was faithful wife, a devoted, loving mother, always faithful to the welfare of h children, endeavoring to instruct them in their childhood days, as to th duties and obligations that were required of obedient children. She ha three daughters and two sons, the sons and only one daughter surviving he but they all loved and obeyed their mother because they loved her, whi they obeyed their father because they feared him as well as loved him.

MARY FAY (426).

Daughter of Levi and Mary (Prentice) Fay born, Walpole N. H., Jun 30, 1791 died in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 7, 1849. At the age of nin teen she removed, with her oldest brother, to Prattsburgh, Steuben Co

N. Y., making her home, until her marriage, with her maternal uncle, Hon. Stephen Prentice. She was married Jan. 8, 1816 to Jesse Waldo, son of Dea. Jesse and Martha (Hovey) Waldo of Prattsburgh, with whom she lived in the enjoyment of a happy union until his decease Apr. 3, 1844. They had three children, Levi Fay, Martha Mary 1st, and Martha Mary 2nd.

At the age of twenty-one, in 1812, she made a public profession of her faith in Christ and united with the Congregational Church in Prattsburgh. From that time hers was uniformly a life of upright Christian deportment, faithful in everything, but with no very marked religious experience until about six years before her decease. Then it pleased the Lord to manifest his grace in a peculiar manner to her soul, and from that time until the day of her death she enjoyed the full assurance of faith and walked daily in the sunlight of God. Always cheerful, always peaceful, her hope of heaven was "sure and steadfast," and she enjoyed a perpetual foretaste of her inheritance in heaven.

For the last thirty years of her life she was an invalid and a constant sufferer, being almost entirely unable to walk, and during the last six months she was confined to her bed. But all her suffering and bereavements were cheerfully borne and her spirit was calm and peaceful amid them all, until she calmly fell asleep in Jesus, to awake in the resurrection morn, clothed in his likeness, to be forever with the Lord.

She died in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., at the home of her son, Rev. Levi F. Waldo, who was pastor of the church in that city, where she was tenderly cared for, and the ministrations of filial love cheered her soul while passing over to her eternal home.

DR. LEVI FAY (427).

He was born in Walpole, N. H., but did not "go West" until his brother, Orlando P., had located in Prattsburgh, N. Y., where he also settled and where his children were born. He was for many years the leading physician in the township, having a very long "ride" over the hills of "Old Prattsburgh." He was a judicious, and a successful practitioner, was a surgeon in the Militia for many years and always rode a spirited horse on parade if he could find one in the town.

At one "general training" he went to a man in the village, Mr. Israel Skinner, and asked him what he would charge him for the use of his horse, familiarly called "Old Snip," to ride on parade that day. Mr. Skinner said to him: "Dr., if you will take "Snip" and keep him on parade all day and not let him bring you back to the barn you can have him for nothing, but if he brings you back to the barn before you get through the parade you shall pay me $1.50. When the parade was called on the "village square," the Dr. was on the ground on "Old Snip," who behaved well until the music "struck-up," then "Old Snip" struck up too and the Dr. struck up also, and so they had it; Snip was sometimes on his hind feet, and again on his fore feet with his heels in the air, the Dr. all the while as calm as though sitting in his office instead of on the fractious old Snip, who was fully determined to go down to his stable in his master's barn. Once he got about half way there, but he finally yielded to the spurs in the Dr.'s boots and behaved very well the remainder of the day. Dr. Fay sat in the saddle as light apparently as if he was used to it and was the most graceful and easy man on horseback in all that vicinity, the beauty and ease which he displayed was truly wonderful.

Prior to 1840 he removed to Bergen, Genesee Co., N. Y., where he would not be obliged to ride over the hills and face the cold winds of winter while wading through the deep snow banks on their summits. He subsequently removed to Buffalo, N. Y., where he died Aug. 12, 1877, aged 84. He and his wife were consistent members of the Congregational Church, and were very much respected by all who knew them for their social and hospitable traits of character.

WILLARD FAY (428).

He was born in Walpole, N. H., and removed to Prattsburgh, N. Y., locating about eighty rods south of the saw mill then owned by his brother, O. P. Fay, where he built a wool carding, cloth dressing and coloring establishment. The first and only "Carding Machine" in the town. He was successful in the business, and after a few years he also built a saw mill adjoining his other mills. He also bought land, and had one of the most productive farms in that vicinity. He was a man of good judgment, genial, and always enjoyed the society of his friends and neighbors. Careful and shrewd in his calculations and bargains, fortune smiled upon his labors, the work of his hands and head. He retired from active life to the village of Prattsburgh, where he spent the evening of his life. He united with the Congregational Church in Prattsburgh in 1819.

MASON FAY (432).

Mason Fay, like all his brothers and sisters, was born in Walpole, N. H. He was a farmer residing in Walpole, where his children were also born. He subsequently removed to Hanover, N. H., where he lived until his death in 1889, aged nearly eighty-six years. He was able to do the most of the work on his farm himself until after he had passed his four score years, and even then he could do as much work as many men who were younger than he, and although he was somewhat troubled with rheumatism, yet his vigor and strength were remarkable.

He was a firm believer in divine revelation and was not afraid to "show his colors" at all times and under all circumstances, and "woe betide" the man who essayed to combat his religious convictions for he was as strongly entrenched in the doctrines of the Bible and as firmly anchored to them as are the Granite Hills of his native State.

JOHN BROOKS FAY (483).

His occupation was farming and painting. He resided in Princeton. He was a member of the Congregational Church for fifty-five years, its honored deacon for twenty-eight years and a member of its choir for over forty years. He represented his district in General Court of Mass. in 1881 and 1882.

WILLARD FAY AND WIFE LAURA (WILLIAMS) FAY.

ARTHUR EDGARTON FAY (497).

He resided in Princeton. Was a farmer and painter. He was a member of the Congregational Church and took his father's place as deacon, which office he held until his death.

REV. NATHANIEL FAY (540).

He was born in Camden, Me., Nov. 26, 1813. He married Roxanna Dickinson Woodbury and had ten children. They resided at Prairie Depot, O. He fitted for college at Monson, Mass., studied at Amherst one term, and graduated at Waterville College, Me. (now Colby Institute). He studied at Andover Theological Seminary one term and graduated at Bangor Theological Seminary. He went to Montgomery, Wood Co., Ohio, Nov. 20, 1833. Was a delegate of the Christian Commission during the War of the Rebellion, six weeks at City Point, Va., six weeks at Nashville, Tenn., and six weeks at Huntsville, Ala.

Of his six daughters now living all are professing Christians, each one taking her turn at teaching. Ellen (the oldest) graduated at College Hill Seminary for young ladies (near Cincinnati, Ohio) and afterwards studied and taught for three years in Dr. Potter's Seminary at Glendale, Ohio. Lucy and Abbie (next younger sisters) were educated at Glendale. Lucy graduated, Abbie did not finish her course on account of ill health. His daughter, Hattie, was at Lexington, Ky., 1884 and at Jonesville, Tenn., 1885 in the employ of the American Missionary Association as a music teacher, and in 1886 she went to the Boston Conservatory of Music, and the others were still at school in 1885. His oldest daughter, now Mrs. H. McDaniels of Fremont, O., writes under date of March 3, 1885, "I am very glad you are interested in picking up the lost threads and tracing them back to the starting point. An honorable family name is such a priceless inheritance that I feel like encouraging and helping all I can in this work. I take it for granted the outlook is inviting, else you would not continue the work." And again, Dec. 28, 1886, she says: "I think you deserve the thanks of the Fay family for the interest you take in tracing them up. I lead an exceedingly busy life. Besides the demands made by a large household, there is the always heavy pressure of church work, which one who is interested can hardly shirk. My husband, although a farmer, is not on his farm on account of his health, which failed (partially) about seven years ago, since then we have lived in Fremont Ohio; for the past four years we have supplemented our income by taking a few boarders. By the way, it may interest you to know that my children can trace back their ancestry on their father's side, straight to John Howland, who came over in the Mayflower, his mother having a printed coat of arms with the straight line of descendants from that gentleman."

Her sister, Lucy M., now Mrs. W. R. Gillis, resides in Anoka, Minn., and her husband is in the employ of the Minneapolis, Sault Ste. Marie and Atlantic R. R., and now (1887) in Northern Mich. His business is such that he is not permanently settled. She writes, "I would like very much to have the records of the 'Fay family' published, and I will be glad to cooperate as far as our limited means will allow."

Her sister Abby B., now Mrs. Jewett, of Cambridge, Mass., writes:

"I am very much interested in the work you are doing. I am glad to know that you can go on with the history of the Fay family. We enjoy Cambridge and the many things of interest in and around Boston. Mr. Jewett is in the Cambridge Latin School, fitting boys and young men to enter Harvard College. With best wishes for your success, etc."

REV. BARNABAS M. FAY (551).

Extracts from memorial by Mary B. Fay, wife of Prof. E. A. Fay, his son, of Washington, D. C.

Rev. B. M. Fay was born in Berlin, Mass., July 27, 1806, and died Mar. 8, 1885, at Kendall Green, Washington, D. C., on Sunday morning, in the seventy-ninth year of his age. His father was a farmer, and the boy grew up blessed with sound health, simple tastes, Christian training, a habit of self dependence, and that common sense which is perhaps the most valuable crop of the New England farm.

He went to Amherst Academy to fit himself for college, and while there he became conscious of his deepening interest in religion and wrote of it to his father who at once desired that he should prepare for the ministry. He accordingly continued his studies with that object in view, and entered Yale College from which he graduated in 1833, defraying his college expenses by teaching, so that he was able to return to his father the money that had been advanced for his education. Prof. George E. Day of the Yale Divinity School, his college class mate, his associate in the New York Institution and the friend of his late years, speaks of his College and Institution life as follows in a letter addressed to his son: "Your father and I were not in the same division of the class, so that I was not brought into very close connection with him in college days, but I remember him as carrying himself with Christian steadiness and manliness, and so far as I knew without an enemy. He commenced his course rather late, and probably did not have the best means of preparation, but his stand as a scholar was good, and secured for him the privilege to speak if he wished at commencement. After graduation we spent two years together in the New York Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, and here I had the opportunity of seeing more perfectly his solid qualities, especially his diligence, fidelity and good sense with which were combined a dry wit which showed him to be a keen observer, although it was never exercised to the injury of others."

From 1833 to 1838 Mr. Fay was a teacher in the N. Y. Institution. In the course of this time he studied Theology at the Union Theological Seminary in N. Y. and in May, 1840, he was ordained for pastor of the Congregational Church in Hardwick, Mass., near the home of his childhood. In September, 1842, he married Miss Louisa Mills, of Morristown, N. J., a sister of his college friend, Rev. Charles L. Mills, late of Andover, Mass. She was a woman of culture, sensibility and piety and the union was a happy one. The following Autumn he gave up his church and taught school in Durham, Conn., for two years. From 1845 to 1850 he was settled over the Congregational Church in Wilmington, Mass. It would seem that he had not the preacher's gift, for after a fair trial of his powers he gave up the work of pastor for that of teacher. He had, however, such success in both of his parishes as was sure to attend a man of his kindly disposition, who was working to the best of his ability. In 1850 Mr. Fay removed with his family to Indianapolis, Ind., and was for several years a teacher in the Institution for the Blind in that city. Three years later the "Trustees of the Mich. Asylum," who were visiting other states in search of information, came to Indianapolis, and finding that Mr. Fay had experience in teaching both the Deaf and the Blind, invited him to become the principal of the school to be established in Michigan for the education of both classes. The city (then a village) of Flint was selected as the site of the Institution. A suitable building was rented, and the school was opened for the reception of pupils in Feb. 1854. There were twelve pupils during the first session. In spite of many difficulties and discouragements incident to the establishment of a new Institution in a new country, Mr. Fay's earnest and devoted labors in its behalf were crowned with success. The number of pupils increased steadily, able and efficient teachers were chosen, and liberal appropriations were obtained from the State Legislature by means of which land was purchased and the present ample buildings now devoted exclusively to the deaf were erected. He remained in charge of the Institution until 1863 when he resigned on account of Mrs. Fay's ill health.

In the autumn of the same year he received the appointment of Chaplain to the 23rd Regt. Mich. Infantry then in active service in Tennessee. Owing to severe exposure and fatigue on his way to join his Regt., he was taken ill with dysentery; he also contracted rheumatism from which disabilities he was soon obliged to resign his commission.

For several years following he was engaged as a banker in East Saginaw, Mich. The enterprise at first successful, afterwards met with and finally resulted in the loss of nearly all his savings of previous years. As soon as he saw what the issue was likely to be he took measures to withdraw from the business before failure should come to involve others as well as himself in ruin and while his own fortune was sacrificed he had the consolation of knowing that of all who had entrusted money to his care no one lost a penny.

He afterwards went to Saratoga Springs, N. Y., for the health of his family and remained there active in all works of charity until his home was broken up by the death of his wife in Feb. 1880, after which he went to Kendall Green.

Notwithstanding her feeble health, Mrs. Fay was a woman of unusual strength of will; she was thus enabled to aid her husband under circumstances where most people would claim the exemption of an invalid. Besides the care of her own family she always had her household affairs planned so well and her slender income managed with such economy that she had the pleasure of cheering with her presence those who were sick or in trouble, and of relieving the wants of the poor among her neighbors.

Of their three sons, the oldest took up his father's work of instructing the deaf. The second son died in early childhood, and the youngest, William Walcott Fay, entered the Christian ministry and in 1888 he was the pastor of the Congregational church in North Bridgewater, Mass.

Early in 1881 Mr. Fay had a sudden and violent attack of inflammatory rheumatism in New Haven where he was residing (previous to going to Kendall Green) and he was taken to the hospital in that city for care and treatment, which could not be had at his hotel and for which he was not able to be removed to Washington, the home of his children. There he lay confined to his room and for most of the time to his bed for a year and a half suffering severely and often intensely, especially when the complaint passed into the disease of which he died, but in all the time no one, it is believed, ever heard him utter an impatient word. Finally he so failed that his physician pronounced his end at hand and he so regarded it himself and expressed an entire willingness and even a wish to depart. But it was not then to be. To the surprise of all he began to rally, then to sit by the window, after a while to ride out and later to go to Saratoga and finally to return to his children at Washington, with the exception of summer visits to Saratoga and returning twice to the hospital at New Haven for surgical treatment, he spent his years with his eldest son Edward A. Fay, in Washington.

He took a lively interest in national affairs and was a frequent visitor at the Capitol until his increasing infirmities narrowed the circle of his activity though not of its interests. His mental faculties remained unimpaired to the end.

After his death his children, grandchildren and neighbors assembled in the room where his last moments were passed and a simple service of remembrance and farewell was conducted by his old and valued friend, Dr. J. W. Chickering. His remains were taken by his sons to Dover, N. J., where after a prayer by his son, Rev. William W. Fay, they were laid by the side of his beloved wife.

Mr. Fay was very much interested in tracing the ancestry of the Fay family. O. P. Fay of Vermontville, Mich., has six letters from him, the first and second ones are dated from the General Hospital, New Haven, Conn., Oct. 1888. He wrote "I am sick in bed, only able to sit up long enough to write the items you wished from me; if I can do anything more for you please inform me. My address after November 1st will be Kendall Green, Washington, D. C." In his fourth letter he says, "I am glad you wrote me about my ancestors and yours, and as you trace back to Gershom Fay you and I are 4th cousins, are we not?" In his last letter he says, "Dear Cousin, I shall want a copy of your book of the Fay genealogy, if it is published."

REV. SAMUEL A. Fay (570).

He was principal of Monson Academy and died of pulmonary consumption at his residence in Monson, Dec. 19, 1842. He was a man beloved and respected for his genuine worth and intrinsic excellence as a citizen; a Christian minister of the gospel and a teacher of the sciences. He was a graduate of Amherst College 1828, and at Andover Theological Seminary 1832. Ordained pastor of the Evangelical Church in Northboro, Oct. 17, 1832, and at his own request was dismissed Oct. 19, 1836. Installed at Barre, May 10, 1837. He resigned on account of ill health and loss of voice.

He was buried in Northboro among his first flock by whom he was greatly beloved, and a large marble monument was erected at his grave by his bereaved father. His widow died at Andover 1897? leaving a legacy for the A. B. F. M. of $1,000.

EDWARD W. FAY (576).

He was one of the first projectors and joint proprietors and publishers of the "Congregationalist," the organ of that denomination, printed in Boston. He was superintendent of the sabbath school, and for many years deacon of a large church in Medford, where he died much lamented and was buried in the ancient cemetery beside his daughter, Charlotte E., and a large and handsome monument of marble was erected at his grave by his father, Warren Fay.

A memoir of Charlotte Eliza was published by the Massachusetts Sabbath School Society. She was an invalid and a great sufferer for some years before her death. She was the oldest daughter of Mr. Fay.

AMANDA FAY (728).

She married Sinclair Tonsey of New York City, a well known publisher, who died at his home in New York, June 16, 1887, after a lingering illness of nearly a year. He was in New Haven, Conn., July 15, 1815. Prior to 1860 he established himself in N. Y. City as a wholesale news agent, which business he carried on until 1864 when he organized the "American News Company" and became its first president, an office which he held until his death. He was an anti-slavery man and a friend of Gerritt Smith, Horace Greeley and others. Subsequently he was active in the Republican party. He was also for many years chairman of the executive committee of the "Prison Association," and devoted much time to its work. At the time of his death he was a member of the "Union League Club" of the societies for the "Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and Children" and was vice president of the Hahnemann Hospital. (From the New York Evangelist, June 23, 1887).

CALVIN K. FAY (877).

The following account of Mr. Fay's golden wedding was published at the time it occurred, Mar. 25, 1884: Upwards of one hundred friends and relatives assembled at his residence in Sharon, Vt., for the purpose of celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of their wedded life. There was one living witness of the original ceremony present, Mr. Isaac Northrope of South Royalton, Vt. The united values of all presents made on the occasion was over $40; a napkin ring, a lamp, a large table spread, two easy chairs were procured by the united subscriptions of a number of friends with a balance in cash of $5; a bible stand by Mr. and Mrs. George Fay; a tidy of various colors and exquisite wormanship by Mrs. Nellie Paine of Hyde Park, Mass.; a silver thimble by Mrs. Isaac Northrope of South Royalton, Vt.; a gold lined silver spoon by Misses Abbie and Ettie Northrope, Somerville, Mass.; a gold dollar, Miss L. A. Fagan, Matawan, N. J.; two gold dollars, Mrs. John Reid, New York City; two dessert spoons, Mrs. I. S. Bradley, Norwich; a nice lantern, Edwin Wallace; two boxes of honey, Mrs. Emily P. Robinson and Mrs. S. W. Sterling, Sharon.

Letters expressing deep regret at not being able to be present on the occasion and wishing them long lives and much happiness were read from a son of Rev. R. B. Fay of Bradford, Vt. (now Pawlett, 1888), Mrs. Greenleaf, Haverhill, Mass., and a nephew, Lewis G. Fay, Worcester, Mass. The various articles were formally presented in behalf of the donors, with appropriate remarks by Rev. E. B. Chamberlain, and a response was made in behalf of the recipients by Rev. L. B. Steele. Prayer was offered by Rev. Chamberlain followed by music and refreshments, consisting of coffee and cake. After singing "Old Hundred" they separated and went to their several places of abode well paid for the pains they had taken. The exercises of the evening were pleasantly interspersed with music by the Sharon Cornet band. Mr. and Mrs. Fay tendered grateful acknowledgements to all those who contributed and kindly thanked the band for the excellent music rendered on the occasion.

REV. ROLLINS B. FAY (878).

He entered the ministry of the M. E. church, Vermont conference, May 1877, stationed at Jacksonville and Sadawga, Vt., remained three years. In May, 1880 he went to West Bradford, Vt., and was there three years. In May, 1883, he removed to Post Mills, Vt., and preached for the Congregational church there and at North Thetford. Sept. 13, 1883, he was ordained by a Congregational council. In June, 1885, he moved to North Pownall, Vt., and was there two years. He traveled and visited during the summer of 1887, and in September of that year he began preaching for the Congregational church at Pawlett, Vt. He has always held the confidence and friendship of all wherever he has preached.

CALVIN CARPENTER FAY (930).

He was in the Civil war, enlisted in Capt. Foley's cavalry company. He left his family and home in Cincinnati, O., Aug. 20, 1861, for St. Louis, Mo. They were organized for and were accepted by Gen. Fremont as his body guard. They remained with him while he had command of the forces in Missouri, in the winter of 1861-62 and until he was succeeded by Gen. Halleck. During the "Springfield Charge" Mr. Fay's horse was shot under him. It is said a better company had not left the state of Ohio.

The following are extracts from a letter, dated Cincinnati, O., Aug. 21, 1861, written by John W. Carter, (a brother of Mr. Fay's wife). This letter is now (1898) in possession of Mrs. Jane Fay Hyland of Keene, N. H., a sister of Mr. Fay.

"There is no man that I have more highly esteemed and have stronger attachments for than Calvin. Indeed it was to me a trying hour to part with him at the depot last evening. However our consolation is, and this we offer to you, that he has gone for a noble purpose in behalf of a righteous cause. His unfailing energy, his goodness of heart, will ensure him friends wherever he may be. Prompted by purely patriotic motives, an unbounded love for his country, he has left a good business, a comfortable and happy home, and has gone to aid in sustaining and perpetuating that which our forefathers so dearly bought and by them so sacredly cherished. On taking leave of his wife and child at the depot it was a painful hour to him. He assured them that he went from a conscientious conviction that his service was needed, that it was an imperative duty upon him to give his aid in behalf of the best government with which mankind was ever blessed, and that if our form of government was destroyed there would be nothing worth living for and that he had no desire to live under any other."

DR. JOSEPH A. FAY (945).

In Memoriam.—Dr. Fay died Nov. 7, 1883, in Milford, Mass. He was one of the junior members of the "Thurber Medical Association." He graduated at the Berkshire Medical College at Pittsfield, Mass., 1867, and at once began the practice of medicine with his father. He was eminently successful and ranked high in his profession as well as in all the relations of society. Socially he was pleasing in his manner, entertaining in his conversation and kind in spirit, speaking ill of none. Professionally he was possessed of rare ability, fine education, courteous and always a thorough gentleman, winning confidence by sympathy, good results by sound judgment, and to his professional brethren he was always loyal. The "Thurber Medical Association" at its next meeting held Dec. 13, 1883, passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That in the death of Dr. Joseph Allen Fay, our society loses one of its best informed members, one whose judgment was held to be sound, opinions good and practice successful.

Resolved, That we sincerely regret that one whose life began so conspicuously bright, having so much by precedent, surroundings and in prospect for a good successful and happy life, should be taken from among us.

Resolved, That we tender our most heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved widow in this her time of deep affliction, to whom the best comfort we can give, is to commend her to Him who is ever mindful of his children and who allows nothing to occur which is not for their good.

Resolved, That these resolutions and accompanying obituary be published in "The Milford Journal" and a copy be preserved on file at the secretary's office and also copies be furnished to the widow and immediate friends. (Signed) J. M. FRENCH, Secretary.

Milford, Mass., Dec. 13, 1883.

Dr. Fay had long been suffering from disease of the kidneys and had known that his case could only have a fatal termination. He was about the town until a few days before his sudden death, and was only confined to his room a day or two. About half an hour before his death, while his wife was assisting him to sit up, he suddenly fainted and remained unconscious. He and his father Dr. Allen C. Fay, were well known physicians in this vicinity. He is spoken of by his fellow practitioners as a physician of unusual knowledge and skill. He had visited the leading medical institutions in the country and had taken great interest in his profession. Personally he had many warm friends and a host of acquaintances. He was of polished manners, at all times a perfect gentleman, and was a pleasant, genial companion.

Rev. Samuel Edwards officiated at the funeral and his remains were interred in Vernon Grove cemetery.

ORLIN P. FAY (950).

Was born in Prattsburgh, Steuben Co., N. Y., Sept. 13, 1820. A "rugged healthy boy," brought up on a stony farm, as a hired man once said who was helping his father hoe corn, "there is ten stones to one dirt." He was able to work at anything that was required to be done on the farm. He was hardly tall enough to hold a plow before he was put to that work, in which he showed a skill that was inborn. His advantages for an education were such as the district school in those days could give. The boys attended school in the winter but generally had to "stay at home" during the rest of the year. Mr. Fay was privileged to attend the academy a few terms, but his school days were only too few to satisfy his desire for knowledge, and he improved his leisure moments in reading such books and papers as he found in his home, or could borrow of his friends and neighbors, who were always glad to encourage him in his efforts to store his mind with useful knowledge.

When he was about twenty-one years of age his father left his farm and engaged in teaming, in which occupation the son was much more in his element than when guiding the plow on the stony farm in his boyhood days. Much of his time for several years was employed in hauling lumber and grain to Crooked Lake, a distance of about seven miles east of his home. He always enjoyed this trip if he could have a swim in the lake. His father also supplemented his income by making shingles, in which calling the son soon worked "to the front," and became an expert "shingle weaver," a term given to those who could shave shingles. Shingle buyers and lumbermen came from a distance to buy his brand of shingles. He often worked in the woods alone, sometimes for several weeks in the months of October and November, after the "mosquito season" closed. To keep off the rain and snow he made a rude shelter of poles, brush and shavings and here he worked, whiling away the time in singing or whistling to his heart's content. During the winter months the "shingle stuff" was hauled to his home, where he labored a part of his time for about ten years. He also engaged in the business of improving fruit trees by grafting, which could only be done in the spring months of the year. A good day's work was to set 250 grafts, which included sawing the limbs, preparing the grafts, and waxing them after being "set." One year he set 6,000 grafts, carrying his "kit" on foot and often working fifteen hours in a day between "sun and sun." He followed this business about fifteen years until the old orchards were too much decayed to renew them by grafting. He also worked at lathing and plastering, laying brick and stone, building and repairing cisterns until he was nearly fifty years old, during which time he seldom had to ask for a job of work. He was known as a workman who could be trusted to do his work well.

Dec. 24, 1861, his name was enrolled as a volunteer in Co. E, 101st Regt. N. Y. Vol. Inf., mustered in as a company musician, detailed for service in the Regimental Brass Band, playing the part of solo alto, the third position as to grade and pay in the band. In the latter part of March, 1862, his regiment was detailed to do special guard duty a few miles above Georgetown, D. C., returning to camp on Kalaramo Heights in plain view of the capitol building. While on this trip their rations were withheld from them, or were so scantily dealt out that the men were much weakened in their return march in a severe snow storm, although the weather was moderately warm, and the snow very moist, wetting the men through their clothing, some of whom sickened and died, others, among them Mr. Fay, were discharged for disability incurred at the time above mentioned. His discharge was dated June 12, 1862. During the year 1879 he was an inmate of the "Soldiers' Home" near Milwaukee, Wis., for a short time, where he filled a vacancy in the Home band. He also arranged music for bands, and was always fond of music, being connected with a church choir from 1839, when nineteen years of age, continuing in that service for nearly sixty years.

He was always ready and willing to encourage all well directed efforts to do away with the evils of intemperance, uniting with every society whose line of work was in that direction. While connected with the Good Templars in his native town, he was the first presiding officer, then Lodge Deputy, County Deputy, and was finally commissioned as one of the state deputies, during which time he instituted six lodges and several "Cold Water Temples" for children, working with energy and perseverance and was always one of the last to "give up the ship." In 1869 he moved to Vermontville, Eaton county, Mich., where he engaged in the manufacture of long shovel handles for Oliver Ames & Sons of North Easton, Mass., that firm giving him for two successive years an order for 60,000 dozen handles each year. Oliver Ames became involved with his brother Oakes Ames in the Pacific R. R. stock and was unable to give his usual order after the second year, which, with the loss of a carload of handles by the burning of the R. R. depot in which they were stored, Mr. Fay was unable to lift the debt on his mill and machinery and was compelled to surrender it into other hands. About this time his youngest son, Charlie, was accidentally shot, while hunting for wild turkeys. He was then fourteen years of age and had been a great help to his father while in the business just relinquished. He was a boy of quick judgment and could be trusted to "sort handles" for the market or to do any other work required of him. The loss of Charlie was a severe blow to his parents and to his only brother, Willie, who was also taken away about three years later. He too was a boy beloved by all who knew him. Thus was Mr. Fay deprived of both his boys, who were always healthy, robust, obedient, faithful, industrious, loving and kind.

Mr. Fay was fortunate in furnishing evidence to prove his claim for a pension, which in a measure compensates him for his losses and enables him to enjoy the evening of his life in a home free from debt. His leisure time is employed in compiling a record and history of the Fay family, a work in which he takes delight and which affords an opportunity to form many acquaintances.

He was commissioned as a Notary Public for Eaton Co., Mich, Nov. 30, 1888 and his commission has been renewed four times since that date. His last term expires in 1911.

Mrs. Fay's maiden name was Laura Bridges, born in Williamstown, Mass. She was united in marriage to Mr. Fay, April 19, 1851, in the village of Prattsburgh, N. Y. She was able to enjoy good health, was a tailoress by trade before her marriage, and found time after that event to ply her needle. She, too, like her husband, was known as a worker who could be trusted to do her work well, and the garments she made needed no other recommendation. She was a woman of active habits, sympathetic and kind to all, a member of the church from early life, and identified with every good work, is a good nurse and many a sick bed has been made more easy to bear by her kindly ministrations. She has also served as a Notary Public eight years, having been first commissioned May 23, 1889.

The following resolution was adopted by the Vermontville Lodge of Good Templars as a token of their respect, on the death of Willie, who was a member, as was also Charlie, and their father and mother.

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father in his wisdom has called our brother Willie B. Fay from toil to rest, from journeyings to his home, Resolved, That we, members of this lodge, who stand outside of the immediate circle of kinship, extend thus formally to the stricken parents an relatives, our deepest heart-felt sympathy. While we weep with them, w pray that he who is the "Man of Sorrows" and who is acquainted with grief will give them the comfort we fain would give, but cannot.

Our Temple has lost one of its pillars; may we who remain overcome, and so with him, become pillars in the Temple of our God.

Signed by the Committee

The following inscription on his tombstone was written by his father:

Side by side with "Charlie" sleeping,
Clasping hands with him above;
Safely in the Savior's keeping,
Rest dear one in Jesus' love.

The Vermontville Lodge of Good Templars also speak of Charlie:

Whereas, We heard with deep pain the sad accident that destroyed the life of our youngest member and brother, Charlie F. Fay, and although we followed his body to the grave, yet it seems like a painful dream and we went to the Lodge room almost expecting to see his cheerful face, and to hear his quaint and pleasant words.

Whereas, We miss him in the Lodge room; we miss him on the street; we miss him where we were wont to meet him and we know that he has gone "where the destroyer never comes," where the Lodge room is always full; where the officers love to serve and are loved in serving, where his spirit will develop faster and become purer through all time to come.

Therefore, we prepresent the following resolutions:

Resolved, That in losing Charlie from our Lodge, we have lost a valuable member, one who did more than most of us to make the Lodge room pleasant, and to advance the cause of temperance, and although the youngest among us, yet whose firmness in the right all of us might copy to our advantage.

Resolved, That our deepest sympathies are with the family in this their sad bereavement, for while we have lost a member and companion, they have parted with a dear son and loved brother.

Resolved, That we thank God that such partings are brief, and that in the reunion which is to come we shall not bury our best and holiest purposes deep in our hearts while only our surface thoughts are given to our associates, but that then we shall not only see Him as he is, but know each other as we are. Signed by the Committee.

His father also wrote the following, which is on his tombstone:

Charlie, dearest Charlie—
Yes, from yonder golden land,
We can hear thy winning voice,
We can see thy beckoning hand.

Charlie was interested in the Sabbath School. It was the custom of the family to unite in studying the lesson for the next Sunday. On a Sunday when the lesson was "The Childhood of Jesus," it was a very interesting one, when finished Charlie said, "Pa, I wish we could have such a lesson every day in the year."

His last words were, "Tell mother not to weep for me, I am going to heaven."

BYRON FAY (954).

But little can be said of his early life that would interest the reader. He was raised on a farm, educated in a district school where he improved his time, was a studious, quiet and industrious lad, securing the good will of all his associates as ready and willing to do a favor and bestow a kindness as to receive one, and he never lacked for friends. When not at school he was kept busy at work, and as he quaintly puts it "was fed on pork and apple-sauce," and he might have added, good bread, mealy potatoes and pancakes, the latter article in those days were called "slapjacks," baked in a spider, seasoned as fast as they were baked with cream and sugar; after being thus prepared the "batch" was cut down through into four parts, and was then ready, a feast good enough for "kings and queens." He was not as robust as his brother, but grew up rather slender. In after life he speaks of two things that remain stamped on his memory very distinctly, "Helping make sugar in the woods in the spring time,—this was fun—the other was turning a grindstone for his father to grind scythes and axes. This took all the joy out of life, for his father was a heavy man at the grindstone.

At the age of sixteen he left home and entered the store of his uncle, Byron Hayes, in Canandaiga, Ontario Co., N. Y., where he learned to make "Pills and Putty." Inheriting from his ancestors an industrious, preserving and faithful attention to his duties, he soon mastered the business of a druggist. From there he went to Buffalo, N. Y., and established himself in the same business and afterwards in Auburn in partnership with a Mr. Tuttle. From there he went to Sandusky, Ohio, in the same business with Gen. George S. Patterson, and after a year or two he bought out his partner and was the sole head of the establishment for several years; was married in 1859, and in 1867 he disposed of his business and moved to Cleveland, Ohio; here he manufactured inks and mucilage. He took large orders from Chicago just before the great fire there in 1871 and lost heavily.

The main reason why he relinquished the drug business was the night work in putting up prescriptions. For the past ten years he has been foreman in a large grocery, grain and feed store in Cleveland, Ohio. Mr. Fay served as deacon in the Euclid Avenue Congregational Church in Cleveland for several years.

HELEN H. FAY (959).

She married June 3, 1891, Jacob Veren Dawes, born May 30, 1870, in Cummington, Mass., died June 30, 1897 in Cleveland, Ohio. He was educated in the schools of his native town. Coming to Cleveland in 1887 he entered the employ of Cozad, Belz, Bates Co., and by his earnestness, activity and honesty passed through the subordinate positions to that of cashier. He joined the Euclid Avenue Congregational Church by letter in April, 1888. June 3, 1891, he was married to Miss Nellie Fay, daughter of Byron and Eliza A. (Williams) Fay. In 1891 he had won, by his business ability, the position of secretary and treasurer of the Garfield Savings bank, a position he held until the last. He was one of those happy men whom all loved for his sterling manhood, his truthfulness and his honesty. His abiding faith in God's love was constantly reflected by the genial smile with which he always met his fellow men. With him it mattered not whether a man had much or little of this world's goods; he was able to see that each one was God's handiwork, and as such entitled to consideration, which he always extended.

He was active in Christian Endeavor work, having at one time been secretary of the society. His generosity was co-extensive with his means. He participated in the work of the Lake View Mission, having a class in Sabbath school and assisting in the general work. In all work in which he was engaged he was remarkable for his great regard for others. In this their great bereavement his wife and children are assured of the sincere sympathy of all who knew him.

Action taken by the directors of the Garfield Savings bank, Cleveland:

The directors of the Garfield Savings Bank Co., in recognition of the loss sustained by the death of its secretary and treasurer, and by way of a fitting expression of their estimate of his character, have ordered the following memorial to be entered upon the records of their proceedings.

"J. V. Dawes, who died on the 30th day of June, 1897, became the treasurer of the company upon its organization and continued as such until his death. Entering upon the duties required of the cashier and manager of a newly organized banking institution at the early age of twenty-two and without the advantage of any special preliminary training, he at once developed such qualities of natural adaptation to the work as have each year given renewed assurances of the fitness of his selection for the place. In his hands it has been found that the daily business of the company was at all times undertaken with forethought, conducted with such industry and painstaking attention to details, and kept with such system and order as left for the action of the board little more than formal approval. Born and raised in New England and succeeding to the name and tradition of one of its great families, he displayed in a remarkable degree these qualities of singleness of purpose, integrity of character and soundness of judgment which have been the common inheritance of so many of its numbers and which have served to inspire and preserve that large measure of public confidence which he enjoyed. His life was one of great labor, great cheerfulness and great promise for the future, and his early death will serve renewedly to impress upon those who knew him the seeming hardship attending the operations of nature's laws, which in their dealings with problems for the most part beyond our conception, in their measure and allotment of human life, make no allowance for worth or capacity for usefulness."

REV. LEVI FAY WALDO (963).

Only son of Jesse and Mary (Fay) Waldo, was born in Prattsburgh, Steuben Co., New York, on Tuesday, Jan. 28, 1817. He was brought up to his father's occupation, which was that of a farmer, and worked on his father's farm a large part of the time until twenty years of age.

He received his education in the common school, at home; took the preparatory and a part of the college course at the "Franklin Academy" in his native town; entered the Sophomore class at Oberlin, in September, 1836, but was soon disabled by protracted and severe illness, was obliged to return home and to suspend his studies for a time. In April, 1839, he entered the junior class in Union College, Schenectady, N. Y., where he graduated in 1840. He was marked 100 in all of his college studies and at graduation was elected to the Phi Beta Kappa. He also received the honorary A. M. from Hamilton College in 1852. After teaching a year and a half in "Brunswick Seminary," near the city of Troy, N. Y., at the same time supplying a small Presbyterian church in the vicinity at Albia village, he entered the Union Theological Seminary in New York City, taking the full three years' course and graduating therefrom in 1844.

Mr. Waldo had made a public profession of his faith in Christ and united with the Congregational church of Prattsburgh, N. Y., in 1831, at the age of fourteen. He was licensed by the Manhattan Congregational Association, in March, 1844; commenced preaching in the Congregational church at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., April 1 of that year; was ordained and installed pastor there, July 9, 1844, and continued his ministry in that church for ten years. After preaching two years in Massachusetts the remainder of his active ministry was in Illinois and Michigan. In the former state he was pastor at Buda, LaSalle, Quincy, Oneida, and Beardstown. In Michigan, at Allegan, Lowell twice, Frankford, Pentwater twice, Shelby twice, Cannon, Cannonsburg and North Ada, Alpine and Walker, and Hersey. About one-half of his public ministry was in the state of Michigan. After leaving Michigan, in May 1895, his home was with his eldest son, Charles Edward Waldo of Canon City, Col. He still continued to preach occasionally as opportunity offered. It may also be mentioned here that in addition to his pastoral work, it was his privilege to assist his brother pastors in evangelistic services, and in these services to enjoy some very precious revivals; for all of which he was truly grateful.

From the commencement of his ministry he took an active interest in the anti-slavery struggle, and in the emancipation and enfranchisement of the enslaved. The same is also true of the Modern Temperance Reform. For more than half a century he was a temperance worker, a temperance lecturer, and a temperance voter. He was never ashamed to be called an "Abolitionist," a "Cold Water Man," or a "Prohibitionist."

It may also be mentioned here that Mr. Waldo spent some ten years of his life, wholly or partly, in teaching; three winters in the common schools at home; year and a half near Troy, N. Y., as already mentioned; one year in Kewanee, Ill.; four years in Pine Grove Seminary, Allegan, Mich., where he was also pastor of the Congregational church, besides conducting classes in several of the schools for which Poughkeepsie was so famous, teaching on state and county institutes in Illinois and Michigan, and private classes in his own home.

He was blessed with a retentive memory; was very thoroughly familiar with the English Bible; an apt scholar in the Latin and Greek classics; with some knowledge of the Hebrew, French and German languages; withal was regarded as thoroughly evangelical in doctrine, and of good abilities, as a preacher. He held his pastorate until past seventy-five years of age.

Mr. Waldo was twice married. First to Miss Lucy Elizabeth Fay of Keene, N. H., Aug. 22, 1844, by whom he had three sons, Charles Edward, William Howard, and Edmund Hovey. She died March 3, 1877. July 23, 1878 he married Mrs. Silence P. Cady, widow of Dea. James F. Cady of Lamont, Mich., and daughter of Rev. Jehial Hawley Hard. She died at Benton Harbor ,Mich., Aug. 9, 1894, aged 66.

MASON W. FAY (980).

He was in the United States navy nearly three years. Enlisted in New York City on board a man of war Apr. 22, 1845, sailed from there June 4, same year. The first port made was Rio de Janeiro in South America. Thence east across the Atlantic ocean, up the straits of Sunda stopping at Batavia, on to China, thence to Jeddo and from there to the Sandwich islands, thence to the West Coast of South America, Peru and Chili and from there to San Francisco, Cal., just before the close of the Mexican war in which they were to participate if necessary in defending the city. The war soon closed and they were ordered home and sailed July 25, 1847, arriving at the Norfolk navy yard Mar. 2, 1848, was paid off and discharged Mar. 28, 1848, and returned to his home in Prattsburgh, N. Y., where he was born, but he soon removed to Michigan and bought a farm in Hillsdale county.

He was afterwards pensioned as a veteran in the Mexican war. His wife died in 1895 at the home of her eldest daughter, Mrs. Helen Weitz, in Montpelier, O., where Mr. Fay died in a little less than six months after. His death was very sudden, while sitting in his chair. He had complained of feeling ill for a week or two, but no one thought it very serious. He walked about half a mile, fed the chickens after he returned, came into the house, sat down and in a few moments was gone. He had a great strain on his system for two years during his wife's long and painful illness, they were so devoted to each other and were separated in death but a few months. He had three daughters and it was very sad for them to part with both mother and father in the same year.

FRANKLIN FAY (990).

Was brought up on his father's farm in Prattsburgh, N. Y. He first bought an interest in a flouring mill on Water street, but afterwards sold out and removed to Mound City, Kan., and engaged in farming. Here his second and third children were born. His oldest was born in Prattsburgh. From Mound City, he moved to Prescott, Kan., where his other four children were born. His next removal was to Bayneville, Kan., where he located on a large farm. Writing from there Mar. 12, 1896, his wife says, "We have had a lovely winter, eight degrees above zero being the coldest and then only a few hours. It is down to thirty-two above today. We have just finished putting in sixty-five acres of oats today, and we are talking of making a garden. We have 220 acres of wheat out." These items indicate farming on a large scale. Mr. Fay is a good farmer, economical and successful.

WARREN GRAHAM FAY (998).

Son of Franklin and Clarissa (Hutchinson) Fay, born near Mound City, Kan., Dec. 17, 1866, died Bayneville, Kan., Sept. 29, 1896.

The following obituary is from the Western Methodist, Oct. 22, 1896: Mr. Fay's death was the result of an accident. On Sept. 7, while repairing his threshing engine he was so badly scalded by escaping steam that from the first his friends entertained no hope of his recovery. All that loving hands and hearts could do was done to alleviate his sufferings, but all in vain. After three weeks of the most intense suffering, death at last came to his relief and he quietly "fell asleep in Jesus."

While a student at the Lewis Academy, in Wichita, during the winter of 1887, he was converted and united with the M. E. church at Cartwright Chapel, of which society he was a member at the time of his death. On Feb. 20, 1893, he was united in marriage with Miss Ida A. Stansburg, who, with two children, are left to mourn his loss. By his family and those who knew him intimately, Warren Fay was a man greatly beloved, and one who, by the uprightness of his character, and the many sterling virtues, enjoyed the respect and esteem of the whole community in a marked degree. The funeral services were conducted at the home of his parents by the Rev. D. McCormick, of Belle Plaine, and were largely attended by the friends and neighbors of the family, who thus testified to their regard for the character of Mr. Fay, and their sympathy for the sorrowing family. The interment took place at the Cartwright cemetery, where our brother was laid to rest in the sure hope of a glorious resurrection.

"Thou are gone to the grave but we will not deplore thee, Tho' sorrow and darkness encompass the tomb,
Thy Savior has passed through its portals before thee,
And the lamp of His love is thy guide through the gloom.
Thou art gone to the grave we no longer behold thee,
Nor tread the rough pathway of the world by thy side;
But the wide arms of mercy are spread to enfold thee,
And sinners may live, since the Savior has died."

SEMANTHA A. FAY (1006).

Her husband was Hiram Wygant whose obituary was printed in the "Cohocton Times" Thursday, Mar. 11, 1897, under the heading: "A good man has passed into the Land of Shadows."

"The announcement of the death of Mr. Hiram Wygant, who died at half past one o'clock this morning, has cast a feeling of sadness over all the citizens of our village. Mr. Wygant suffered from a shock of paralysis he received two weeks ago, Monday morning, Feb. 22, and though his case was considered very critical, still hopes were entertained until the last few days that he might recover.

Mr. Wygant was born in the town of Marlboro, Ulster Co., N. Y., Nov. 5, 1826. He came to Hammondsport in this county, in the spring of 1849, and worked one year for the late Peter Mills, in a flour mill, after which for two years he took charge of the Pleasant Valley mills, owned by the late Mrs. Baker. In the spring of 1852 he went to Prattsburgh, Steuben. Co., N. Y., and engaged in the milling business for a few years, when he met with a serious accident which prevented him continuing in the milling business and selling his mill, he came to Cohocton with his family in September of 1867, and bought of William Washburn, the building and lot corner of Maple avenue and engaged in the drug business which he continued since. By his straightforward, honest way of conducting his business he established himself at once in the confidence of his customers, and succeeded in building up a successful and profitable trade. Mr. Wygant was a Democrat, and was often solicited by his party to accept the nomination for the highest offices of his town, but he always declined the honor although he was over-persuaded for once and in the spring of 1875, he was elected to the office of Justice of the Peace for the term of four years, which position he filled with honor to himself and to the entire satisfaction of all parties.

Mr. Wygant was married to Miss Samantha A. Fay of Prattsburgh, Steuben Co., N. Y., June 7, 1853, who survives him, besides her two sons and two daughters, Dr. Frank A. Wygant and Mrs. H. L. Van Auken of this place, Mrs. M. J. Hamblin of Owosso, Mich., and Fred A. Wygant of Hornelsville, N. Y., all of whom have been in attendance at the bedside of the deceased from the first until the last. He also leaves one brother, Augustus Wygant of Marlboro, N. Y., who came upon first learning of his sickness, and remained until a few days ago. He will be sincerely mourned by his family and greatly missed by his large number of friends here and elsewhere. Rev. F. S. Swan will officiate at his funeral at his late home on Maple avenue, Saturday, afternoon, at half past one o'clock. He will be buried in Maple View cemetery."

CHARLES M. FAY (1014).

He was a volunteer in the war of 1861-5, enlisting Dec. 1, 1861, as a private in Co. E, 101st Regt. N. Y. Vol. Inf., mustered into the U. S. service Dec. 25, 1861, for three years, promoted to first sergeant July 1, 1862, engaged at Charles City Cross Roads, Glenville, Malvern Hills, July 1, 1862, Second Bull Run July 29, and 30, 1862, and Chantilly Sept. 1, 1862, where he received a gunshot wound in the left hip. Discharged from service on account of said wound Jan. 29, 1863, for permanent disability, one third. Commissioned second lieutenant in the Veteran Reserve Corps July 15, 1863, appointed adjutant in the 13th Regt. Veteran Reserve Corps, Oct. 1, 1865, and was stationed in Boston Harbor.

Previous to his enlistment he was in college, but like many other patriotic young men, he left his books and went into the service of his country. After the war he traveled as a commercial agent and commanded a good salary as an expert salesman. He afterwards located in Chicago in the cork and bung business, meeting with good success as a prosperous, capable man. He also invested largely in manufacturing wooden ware in Petosky, Mich., where for a while he prospered, as in all his undertakings, but he lost all by a disastrous fire. He then resumed his former business in Chicago with his wonted energy and prospect of regaining his former prosperity.

DENNIS P. FAY (1088).

"End of a Noble Life.—In the death of Mr. Fay, the community sustains an irreparable loss. He was a valued member of the Third Presbyterian church and a most exemplary Christian, a man whose beautiful character endeared him to all who knew him. His entire life has been lived nobly e truest sense of that word, and he met death with the fortitude of a soldier of Christ.

"After long illness and suffering, he has passed into the beautiful coun-here pain is unknown, leaving behind a wide circle of friends who sin-y mourn his departure and sympathize deeply with the bereaved wife laughter."

LUCY ELIZABETH FAY (1155).

"Mrs. Lucy Elizabeth Waldo, daughter of Calvin and Sophia Fay and of Rev. Levi F. Waldo, was born in Prattsburg, N. Y., Nov. 17, 1816. le yet in her infancy her parents removed to Dryden, N. Y., where was her only brother, Calvin Fay, Esq., now of Atlanta, Ga., and e her father died and was buried. After the father's death the family ned to Walpole, N. H., where the daughter was brought up by her rnal grandparents. Mrs. Waldo educated herself almost entirely by own efforts, mainly in teaching; studying in the academies at Keene, I., and Chester, Vt., and in the young ladies' department at Oberlin, O., e she completed her course of study in 1844. On the 22d of August of year she was united in marriage to Rev. Levi F. Waldo, who was also tive of Prattsburgh, then just settled as a Congregational pastor at ghkeepsie, N. Y., with whom she has walked the journey of life—a wise sellor, an efficient helper and a faithful and loving wife—for more than y-two years. About the first of July 1876, Mrs. Waldo's health began ly to decline. A troublesome cough and much bodily weariness and ness gave signs of approaching dissolution. She kept about, however, was able to ride out occasionally, until the close of the year. From that she was confined to her sick bed, gradually fading away, until, on Sat-y evening, March 3, 1877, she calmly fell asleep. In accordance with her request, her remains were brought to Prattsburgh, N. Y., for burial, e they were deposited beside her own and her husband's kindred, and e her husband expects in due time to be laid by her side.

"Mrs. Waldo spent much of her life in teaching, both secular and Sabschools, in which she excelled. Many of her former pupils will long mber her faithful and efficient instructions, and will lament her death.
'Spotless purity, unblemished integrity, firmness in adhering to her con-ons of right, wisdom in counseling and planning, energy and efficiency Christian labor, great faithfulness, and a settled and abiding trust in her Savior, were prominent characteristics in the life of this excellent an. Her death was calm and peaceful and full of hope of a blissnmortality. She leaves a husband and two sons to mourn her loss."
'Her children rise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he eth her. Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest

The following is an obituary of Rev. Levi F. Waldo's 2d wife:

SILENCE P. HARD.

"Mrs. Silence P. Waldo, daughter of Rev. Jehial H. and Matilda Hard, born in Sardinia, Orleans county, New York, Aug. 20, 1829. Died at the home of her son, Rev. George L. Cady, at Benton Harbor, Mich., Aug. 9, 1894; lacking but eleven days of sixty-five years of age.

"When about nine years old, she came with the family to Southern Michigan, where her father was a pioneer Methodist preacher and afterwards an honored and esteemed minister of the Congregational church. Ever since that time Mrs. Waldo has been a resident of the state of Michigan. On the 26th day of September, 1847, she was united in marriage to Mr. James F. Cady of Lamont, by whom she was the mother of ten children, seven of whom still survive her. Five of them were with her in her last hours, and all but one of them were present at the funeral service. Her four sons bore the remains of their beloved mother to their last resting place, until the resurrection morn. She has also still living eight brothers and sisters and fourteen grandchildren, besides other near relatives, several of whom, including three of the sisters, were present at the burial service. Mr. Cady was , for many years an active and useful member and a deacon in the church at Lamont. He died at his home, near that place, in June, 1876.

"When about twelve years of age, Mrs. Waldo (then Miss Hard) became a disciple of Christ and a member of the M. E. church. Soon after her marriage with Mr. Cady, she transferred her membership to the Congregational church, of which she has ever since been an active and useful member. Her Christian experience and evidence seem from the first, to have been remarkably clear, joyful, even jubilant. The enduement of "power from on high"—power for testimony and for service—seems to have rested upon her from the first. Herself, her family, her all, were daily and gladly consecrated to God. Eminently gifted both in speech and in song, she rendered efficient service in the schools which she taught, in the Sunday school, in the church choir, in the prayer circle, in the Y. P. S. C. E., and especially in personal effort to lead souls to Christ. She is supposed to have organized the first Christian Endeavor society in the state of Michigan. She had the happy faculty of approaching both young and old upon the great subject of personal religion which lay so near her heart, and she very rarely met with a repulse. Many a redeemed soul will greet her 'on the other side,' as the divinely chosen instrumentality in bringing them there.

"On the 23d day of July, 1878, Mrs. Cady was united in marriage to her second husband, the Rev. Levi F. Waldo, now of Hersey, Mich., where has been her home for the last five or six years. During these sixteen years of their married life, she has been to him a loving and devoted wife, a wise counsellor, and a most excellent and efficient helper in his ministerial work. Mrs. Waldo took a leading part in organizing our Woman's Home Missionary Union in this State, and has devoted much time and effort to its success. In this, and as superintendent of Evangelistic work in the W. C. T. U., she has visited many unions, delivering public addresses in behalf of these two departments of Christian work, always with much acceptance, sometimes filling the minister's place in the pulpit and filling it well.

"During these last years Mrs. Waldo has suffered from several severe attacks of the "grippe," from the last of which she never fully recovered. About three months ago was manifested the appearance of the complicated seases which finally caused her death. There have been intervals of aparent convalescence, but she gradually grew weaker, until on Thursday, ugust 9, at 2:10 p. m., she calmly fell asleep. She retained her conscious-ess to the last. Her remains were taken to her former home in Lamont, here appropriate funeral services were held, Rev. J. T. Husted, of Grand apids, officiating, and where she is laid at rest beside her first husband d children who have gone before her. Blessed be the memory of such wife and mother.

"'Her children arise up and call her blessed; her husband, and he aiseth her.' 'And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, write, essed are the dead who died in the Lord, from henceforth: Yea, saith the irit, that they may rest from their labors and their works do follow em.'"

CHARLES EDWARD WALDO (1156).

Son of Levi Fay Waldo and Lucy Elizabeth (Fay) Waldo, was born at oughkeepsie, Duchess Co., N. Y., on Saturday, the 28th day of February,
. D. 1846. With his parents he resided in the village named until about pril 1, 1854, when the family removed to North Brookfield, in Worcester
o., Mass. At this place his school life began, except a single week in 1853, , up to that time, his parents (both teachers of experience) had taught him home. In the month of November, 1856, the family removed to Kewanee, Henry Co., Ill., and further removals were as follows: to Buda, Bureau
o., Ill., in the fall of 1858; to La Salle in La Salle Co., Ill., in August, 1859; Allegan in Allegan Co., Mich., in July, 1861; to Lowell, Kent Co., Mich.,
September, 1865: and to Quincy, in Adams Co., Ill., in October, 1866.
r. Waldo's residence was with his parents until they removed from uincy, in July, 1868.

During all of the time, up to this latter date, the life of our subject was ceedingly uneventful. His attendance upon school was much interrupted various causes, but study at home made up much that would otherwise ve been lost, and it is safe to say he had a good comon school education.
the summer of 1866 he began the study of law with Thomas J. Spayton, sq., of Lowell, Mich., but this study was interrupted by the removal to uincy, Ill., and, in October, 1866, he entered the Bryant and Stratton Busiss college at that place, from which he afterward received a diploma in gular form. March 20, 1868, he was employed as bookkeeper for the linois State agency of the New York Life Insurance Co., which may be lled the beginning of active business for him, though he had been en-ged as clerk in a postoffice at odd intervals between 1861 and 1865, and d been an assistant teacher in the Pine Grove Seminary at Allegan, durg the same years. Some other temporary attempts at book peddling and teaching which were rendered rather unsuccessful, to a considerable ex-nt by sickness, need but to be mentioned, together with his service for a eat part of a year as assistant in the business college above referred to.

As bookkeeper, Mr. Waldo had almost entire charge of the office busiss of the agency named until January 10, 1870, when he became book-eper for the Singer Sewing Machine agency at Quincy, a position which retained till Feb. 6, 1871. He then went to Beardstown, in Cass Co., Ill., ere his father was then residing, and engaged, seriously, in the study of law with Sam P. Dale, Esq., of that place. In December of the same year he was admitted to the bar and entered into partnership with Mr. Dale. The climate of Beardstown proved so full of malaria that in the summer of 1873 Mr. Waldo was thoroughly disabled for work, and in August of that year the partnership was dissolved and both members of the firm of Dale and Waldo went to Denver, Col., in search of health. The climate proved all that was hoped, but it took until the summer of 1875 for him to get able to work, and then circumstances did not seem favorable for practice in Denver. So in October, 1875, Mr. Waldo removed to Rosita, then in Fremont Co., Col., where he began an active law practice in partnership with George S. Adams, Esq. The partnership continued only seven months, but Mr. Waldo continued alone in practice until the end of the year 1877, when he removed to his present residence in Canon City, Fremont Co., Col., where he has practiced law until the present time alone except from January, 1884, till January, 1887, when he had a partner, Samuel H. Baker, Esq.

Mr. Waldo has never figured in politics to any considerable extent believing that business and politics rarely agree, and his holding of public office has been very limited. He was Justice of the Peace in 1877, and in 1879-80; and was County Judge of Fremont Co. from October, 1881 to January, 1884. This, with a service of three years as school director, completes the list of public offices, probably for some years to come. He has been a Republican politically, with some leanings toward the Prohibitionists.

He united with the Congregational church at Kewanee, Ill., in the spring of 1858, and has retained membership in some church ever since that date, being now an elder in the Presbyterian church of Canon City. He was superintendent of the Sunday school of the latter church from the fall of 1878 to January, 1883, and again for the year 1884. Was also treasurer of the church from 1881 to 1886.

He united with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows on July 13, 1868, and passed through the various offices in the subordinate lodge and encampment in due time, and received the degrees of the Grand Lodge and Grand Encampment in October, 1872, at Rock Island, Ill. In Colorado, he was a visitor to the Grand Lodge in 1874, but was a member in 1875 and every year since then has been present in the Grand Lodge of Colorado, except 1876 and 1883. After holding various lesser offices, he was Grand Patriarch of the Grand Encampment in 1880-1 and was Grand Master of the Grand Lodge in 1881-2, and represented the latter body in the Sovereign Grand Lodge of the order in the years 1884 and 1885. He has served as chairman of committees in the State Grand Bodies almost continuously for the past ten years or so.

He remained an Odd Fellow, as far as the ladies were concerned, till Sept. 17, 1883, when at the age of thirty-seven years and some months, he was married to Miss Lida Beadle (whose exact baptismal name will be found elsewhere in this record) at Emporia, Lyon Co., Kan., at the residence of Miss Beadle's brother. They have one child, William Beadle Waldo, born at Canon City, Col., on Aug. 7, 1884. A second son was born in 1888.

He has been a member of the Independent Order of Good Templars four years. He has taken great interest in the compilation of family history for over twenty years past.

PROF. EDWARD A. FAY (1361).

He is Ph. D. in the National College of Deaf Mutes in Washington, . C. The following item is from the "Congregationalist" May 19, 1887: Mr. E. A. Fay's valuable paper, entitled and containing a list of words sed only by Dante, has been reprinted as 'Modern Language Notes,' and is interest to students of Italian. Mr. Fay of Kendall Green, Washington, . C., is at work upon a concordance of the 'Divina Commedia,' which the ante society will publish."

Mr. Fay is a son of Rev. Barnabas M. Fay, who was principal of the nstitution for the Deaf and Blind, in Flint, Mich., for nearly ten years, and r. E. A. Fay had some advantages in that line before he located in Washgton. He is the "right man in the right place."

REV. WILLIAM W. FAY (1370).

He graduated at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., 1876. Pursued s studies at Williams College, Mass., and Oberlin, Ohio. Graduated at angor, (Me.) Theological Seminary, 1883. Installed pastor of the Gongreational church at Hampton, N. H., Feb. 20, 1884. After a pastorate of ree years at Hampton, was installed over the Central Square Trinitarian hurch of Bridgewater, Mass., Dec. 29, 1888, and during the first four onths of his pastorate forty-three new members were added to the church.

Page 280, under No. (1038), Anna M. (Clark) Fay, wife of Nathan Ad- n Fay, afterwards wife of Edwin Harper, died May 30, 1889 of cancerous or. She was the oldest child of Rev. J. W. Clark. She was born at c's Corners, Pa., July 5, 1827. She was married to Mr. Fay, June 4, , and in the spring of 1846 they sought a home in what was then con- ed the "Far West." They located Oregon, Dane Co., Wis., then a wil- ess of wolves and wild Indians. It was at this period of her life, while gling with the privations, hardships and vicissitudes of frontier life, the woman, which so truly characterized her life, was developed. Un- plainingly she worked, meanwhile cheering her husband by her self- fice, bravely facing danger, hunger and thirst, with no companionship er children, while her husband was compelled by stern necessity to be miles from home, during the long and severe winters. She was left low in June, 1857. The next year her house, with all the contents, was ed to the ground. In 1859 she was married to Edwin Harper. The heroism manifested by her in frontier life, was only equalled by her ty, when her country called "To arms." Bravely she bade her husband her oldest son God speed, while she with the aid of the smaller children ged and did the work on the farm, endured and suffered, suffered and endured, yet never repined. It was most fitting that the summons for her release from pain should come upon that day upon which we all enter with tender, sacred reverential awe when so much of her life had been given to her country. In 1874, broken in health, she took up her abode in Sunfield, Mich. A staunch difficulty which had long been preying upon her, began to rapidly develop. All that friends could do for her or money procure was done without stint, but to no purpose. Death had marked her for his own. The strongest attribute of her nature was her unselfish devotion to her children, of which there were five, Wesley Corwin Fay and Mrs. C. S. Childs of Sunfield, Mich.; Lucius Manly Fay of Madison, Wis.; Martin Addison Fay, who died at Pueblo, Col., and Mrs. H. J. Miller of Eaton Rapids, Mich.

Page 281, under No. (1049), Rolland Adelbert Fay had 3 chil., 2 sons, (see page 281), and 1 dau., b. 1891? Mr. Fay was a farmer and resided near Rive's Junction, Mich.; later he removed to Eden, Ingham Co., Mich., where he engaged in mercantile business. His oldest son, Claude Delos Fay, is in the grocery business. Mr. Fay's wife died Aug. 22? 1898, after a severe illness of nearly six months.

On page 7 of this volume we have the first record of a Fay (who was a Frenchman), and was killed in battle in the year 782.

The last record we have traced was also a Frenchman, John J. Fay, who died in Detroit, Mich., Dec. 30, 1898, of heart failure, on account of old age. Only a few days before his death his last letter was received, in which he expressed a wish that his family record might be placed in the Fay genealogy. Although his lineage does not connect him with "our common ancestor," yet he bears the same name of which he was proud and was ever ready to reciprocate the kinship however distant. His father was Baptiste Fay, a native of Paris, France, who was a soldier under Napoleon and was wounded in the battle of Waterloo, came to this country in 1822, located in Detroit, Mich., or as the Chieftain Pontiac used to call it, Wa-wee-otto-mong, where he resided until his death in 1826-7. John J. Fay was born about the time, or just before his father came to the "land of the free." He m. in Detroit, June 10, 1850, Catherine Devereaux Wheeler, and resided in Detroit, Grand Rapids, Mich., Indianapolis, Chicago, and later, again in Detroit. He had 5 chil.

1 Catherine Frances, b. D., Apr. 6, 1851. 2 John J. Jr., b. D. Sept. 12, 1852. 3 Louis Napoleon, b. Grand Rapids, July 6, 1854. 4 Eugene Angelo, b. G. R., Aug. 13, 1856. 5 Francis Patrick, b. G. R., July 7, 1858.

John J. Jr., was formerly engaged in the lumber business in Michigan, and in Chicago, Ill. He is now, 1898, in Los Angeles, Cal., and is president of the Citizens' Bank of that city. His brother, Eugene A., res. in Detroit, 505 Hancock Ave.

l Church, Westboro, Mass., from 1724 to 1890. Probably no other ch in the country can show such a long list of Fay members, 112 in all.

TO ALL SUBSCRIBERS FOR THE FAY GENEALOGY.

Please accept my sincere thanks for the confidence you have placed in me as the historian of "Our Family," for the many words of encouragement and for the continued manifestation of the grace of patience while you have been waiting for the outcome of my self-imposed task, which was begun as a pastime and continued as such until the request for its publication was entertained, then came the responsibility for its success or failure. The book is not a full and complete record of the Fay family. Time, money, and even life itself, are not equal for the task of tracing all of the family and placing them in one volume. The youngest Fay on the list applied for admission into the family Jan. 15, 1899. (See page 280, 6th line from the bottom.)

A few errors have been noted and due correction made, the compiler, however, is not responsible for all errors that may be found, for many records are reported from memory and are not always reliable. The book must stand or fall, be approved or criticised as you may elect, and we await your verdict, your influence is desired in aid of its circulation. Forty years ago the cost for the same pictures that have been placed in it would have been over $800.00, but $125.00 pays for the 32 faces that adorn its pages. Those who ordered the pictures "pay the fiddler," and all will share in the enhanced value of the book and we trust it will compensate you for the long delay. If all our subscribers are prompt in redeeming their pledges, we can pay the printer within thirty days after his bill is filed.
